SUMMARY:

On 02/18/2015, OSP was asked to investigate possible unauthorized access and dissemination of state email belonging to an executive branch member of the Oregon state government. A public article printed by the Willamette Week on 02/18/2015, titled "What He Left Behind", makes reference to emails of possible privileged communications between former governor John Kitzhaber and his attorney. This investigation continues.

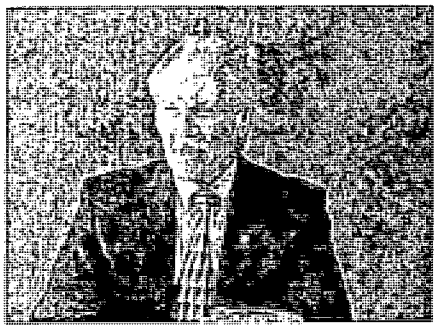
Gov. John Kitzhaber's Office Sought To Destroy Thousands of His Emails

Records show state bureaucrats refused to carry out the request



Gov. John Kitzhaber - WW Staff

Gov. John Kitzhaber's office last week requested state officials destroy thousands of records in the governor's personal email accounts, according to records obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL.

The request came as investigations into allegations of influence-peddling involving Kitzhaber and first lady Cylvia Hayes were intensifying.

Records show the request to destroy Kitzhaber's emails came from Jan Murdock, Kitzhaber's executive assistant. She wanted all emails from Kitzhaber's personal email accounts removed from state servers.

The request from Murdock was described in a Feb. 5 email. "Governor's office wants anything that is in the email account [Kitzhaber's account] removed from archive," wrote Tracy Osburn, a field technician in the DAS Technology Support Center, wrote in the email obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL.

Personal emails of public officials can be subject to the state's open records laws if they are used to discuss public business. Earlier documents previously released by the governor's office show Kitzhaber used both his personal and state email accounts to communicate with his aides and discuss state business.

The request from Kitzhaber's office to destroy emails came one day before the Oregon Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation into the allegations against him and Hayes.

At the time Kitzhaber's office requested emails be destroyed, the governor and Hayes faced a pending Oregon Government Ethics Commission investigation. WW had earlier reported that the FBI had opened an investigation.

The request for destruction of records came while Kitzhaber was promising to be open and honest with Oregonians about the allegations against him and Hayes.

The records indicate that state employees refused to carry out the request from Kitzhaber's assistant to destroy emails.

Oregon law makes it a crime to improperly destroy or tamper with public records or evidence. Evidence includes "part of official proceeding which is then pending or to the knowledge of such person is about to be instituted."

One observer says the timing of the request raises concern.

"At a very minimum, it shows consciousness of guilt," says Tung Yin, who teaches criminal law at Lewis & Clark Law School. "Why else would you suddenly start destroying documents?"

In a Feb. 5 email, Osburn, the DAS field technician, said Kitzhaber's personal emails had been routed to his state account. At 5:41 pm that day, she passed the request to destroy emails up the chain of command.

The prospect of deleting thousands of emails clearly made Osburn's supervisor, Arian Turpin, uncomfortable.

"Guys, hold on processing this request until we receive approval from a higher authority," Turpin wrote in a Feb. 5, 2015 email at 6:52 pm. "Given the unusual nature of the request, I'm reluctant to have my team move forward without the active awareness and consideration of the possibilities and a direct approval from higher levels of the action."

Turpin then kicked the request up another level to his supervisor, Shawn Wagoner. After consulting with colleagues, Wagoner also refused to delete the governor's emails.

"Take no action at this time," Wagoner wrote. Wagoner then passed the issue up the chain of command to yet another DAS manager, Gary Krieger.

Krieger told his supervisor, Michael Rogers, that he would not destroy the emails.

"I am not willing to make the call to delete information out of the email archive," Krieger wrote on Feb. 5 at 7:24 pm. "As I stated we will need to discuss."

UPDATED:

Kitzhaber spokeswoman Amy Wojcicki said the request to delete emails was routine.

"There was no blanket order to delete all records and the emails are in the process of being sorted to determine which records are public records that are required to be kept," Wojcicki said in an email. "The Oregon Public Records Act requires retention of public records. It was recently brought to our attention that there are a number of the governor's personal emails residing on the state server. Some of the emails do not relate to any activity, transaction or function of state business and are not public records required to be retained."

DAS spokesman Matt Shelby confirms that no emails were deleted, and the final decision on the matter was made by DAS Director Michael Jordan.

"We have a responsibility to maintain records per the secretary of state's retention schedule," Shelby said. "Removal of records would require a record-by-record review to determine what, if anything, was removable."

Kudos to those at DAS who realized that the request didn't pass the smell test.

yes they are overblown. Referring to moving emails off of one server as destroying documents is a pretty huge exaggeration.

I wouldn't go congratulating those poor guys yet. Give this story time to marinade. Their once stellar work records and employee personnel files will soon be filled with new, negative information that may just make their lives so difficult that they have to find a new line of work. If the press does not keep the story at the fore the whistleblowers will find themselves in the unemployment line with JK and his bedfellows.

Finally some good news! Thanks to all these state employees who had the common sense to recognize an ethics/ legal issue when they saw one.

Oregon Law stopped them. I shudder to think would they have done so - especially if they had voted for Kitzhaber - if not for this law?

Bcre8ve ↷ lynncanal · 11 days ago
Seriously? There is no indication that they even seriously considered deleting the emails, and absolutely NO indication that the political party of the Governor had anything to do with their decision.

The law stopped them but not their sense of right or wrong? It sounds like they all had very strong moral compasses. Just because some people put party before ethics doesn't mean everyone does.

But we now know what you would have done. Shame on you!

SUMMARY:

On 02/18/2015, OSP was asked to investigate possible unauthorized access and dissemination of state email belonging to an executive branch member of the Oregon state government. A public article printed by the Willamette Week on 02/18/2015, titled "What He Left Behind", makes reference to emails of possible privileged communications between former governor John Kitzhaber and his attorney. This investigation continues.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 02/19/2015, at approximately 1:30 PM, Cpt. Terri Davie, Cpt. Tom Worthy and I met with Mr. Rodgers at the Oregon State Enterprise Technology Services building located in Salem, Oregon. After providing identification and signing in, we were escorted by Mr. Rodgers to his office at the south side of the building. As part of this interview, Mr. Rodgers provided me with three documents he had printed from his email. The first was an email from Adrian Turpin, to Mr. Rodgers, dated 02/09/2015 at 1:31 PM. The subject line read "FW: GOV Gmail tickets." The second and third documents were partial screen captures of TSC help tickets opened by Tracy Osburn, related to email support provided to the Governor's office.

The first help ticket was created on 02/14/2011, at 11:41 AM, and closed on 02/15/2011, at 7:21 AM, requesting TSC to "Set up Governors Personal laptop for Gmail." Mr. Osburn's notes at the bottom show he had connected an "Outlook" account to "personal Gmail account."

The second help ticket was created on 08/5/2011, at 9:20 AM, and closed on the same day at 9:23 AM. In summary, the request was to have TSC set up archiving of the Governors personal Gmail account, with an emphasis to be able to have his personal Gmail account send all correspondence to the states archiving system.

All three documents have been uploaded to NICHE as external documents.

See Cpt. Davie's report for full details of this interview.

This investigation continues.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 02/26/2015 at about 11 AM, I contacted Vahan Michaelian over the phone for follow questions regarding email quotes found in a Willamette Week (WW) article dated 2/18/2015 12:01 AM, by Nigel Jaquiss.

I asked Vahan to use the DAS archive manager to search for "Line up next big work and significant income", which was a quote from the WW article referenced above. This search returned no results searching across the entire states email system.

Vahan told me he tried several versions of the quote but would either come up with no results or too many to go through. I was only interested in the email from Cylvia Hayes as quoted in the WW article.

My second attempt at this search was directed solely at the MJOJKT account, which was identified as Kitzhabers state email account, and with a different phrase. I asked Vahan to search for "Cylvia Game Plan." This search revealed 12 messages, one of which was the email dated 11/29/2013 as mentioned in the WW article.

See PDF "EmailArchiveSearchResultsFor-CylviaGamePlan" attachment in NICHE.

What He Left Behind

Emails ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber's office sought to destroy reveal tensions over power, money and former First Lady Cylvia Hayes.

HU[g.': cj *>c\b'?]m\UWYfž 7 mj]U'<UmYgž'Y!a U]'g

Ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber resigned last week amid allegations his fiancee, former first lady of Oregon Cylvia Hayes, improperly used her access to him to influence state policy while benefiting financially.

From 2011 to 2013, Hayes collected more than $220,000 from private consulting contracts she landed while working as an adviser to Kitzhaber. Her dealings have sparked state and federal criminal investigations ("First Lady Inc.", WW, Oct. 8, 2014).

But before Kitzhaber's resignation and the investigations, Hayes had even grander plans for herself—in terms of influence and money—for the governor's final term in office.

Newly obtained emails reveal Hayes told Kitzhaber in late 2013 that she wanted to further leverage her access to his office into "lucrative work," including an official state position, paid speaking appearances and book contracts.

The first lady proposed her expansive plans to Kitzhaber, even as the governor's staff searched for ways to narrow Hayes' official role and make sure she wasn't violating state ethics laws.

Hayes' big plans and the staff's concerns are contained in emails that are among thousands of communications Kitzhaber's office sought on Feb. 5 to have destroyed. (See here for an analysis of this action.) Neither Kitzhaber nor Hayes agreed to be interviewed for this story.

The emails obtained by WW provide an extraordinary window into Kitzhaber's administration and the complexities Hayes' ambitions presented.

The emails show that Kitzhaber's staff was especially alarmed by Hayes' role in the governor's office after she signed at least $85,000 worth of private consulting contracts with three nonprofit advocacy groups in 2013.

The contracts prompted Kitzhaber's then-chief of staff Curtis Robinhold in July and August of that year to get Hayes to sign conflict-of-interest forms that required her to abide by state ethics laws.

Those guidelines would have forced Hayes to change some of the ways she conducted her private business, including prohibiting her from using the title "first lady" when doing private work, and from holding client meetings at Mahonia Hall, the governor's mansion.

Hayes pushed back. As WW has previously reported, Hayes wouldn't go along with those guidelines until they were rewritten to allow her to continue operating as she had been.

The newly obtained emails show that, with Kitzhaber preparing for a 2014 re-election campaign, Robinhold suggested some ways to eliminate Hayes' conflicts of interests without depriving her of income.

In a Sept. 26, 2013, memo to Hayes and Kitzhaber, Robinhold outlined six options that would allow Hayes to continue working on issues she cared about while eliminating outside contracts and the potential conflicts of interest they presented.

The possibilities included finding her a job at a university, such as Portland State, letting her work for a state agency, hiring her to work for the Kitzhaber re-election campaign or having the state hire Hayes as a consultant.

Robinhold said in his email the goal was a position for Hayes that "maintains clear lines of authority in the Governor's Office and avoids confusion about Cylvia's supervisory and staff management responsibilities."

The ideal situation, Robinhold wrote, "avoids giving Cylvia responsibility for broad, overarching policy issues that cross over multiple policy advisors and state agencies" and "minimizes confusion around who Cylvia is speaking for."

It's not clear how Kitzhaber responded to the memo. Robinhold declined to be interviewed by WW.

Robinhold's memo and other emails make it clear that Kitzhaber's staff wanted Hayes out of the governor's office.

That's not what Hayes wanted.

The first lady was busy preparing her own proposal—one that embedded her more deeply in the governor's office and put her in a position to make more money.

On Nov. 29, 2013, she sent a memo to Kitzhaber titled "Cylvia Game Plan: Dec. 2013-Dec. 2018."

Hayes summarized her goal at the top: "Intended Outcome: Build my policy and professional credibility and desirability so that I land lucrative work making big positive impacts at end of term."

On the top of Hayes' list: getting more publicity for her work. Or, as she put it in the memo to Kitzhaber: "Claim the work that is mine."

That work included her role as "originator and one of the key authors of the Ten Year Energy Plan." She wanted to be recognized for the environmental and economic consulting work she had done for her private clients, which dovetailed with her state policy interests.

The first lady wanted Kitzhaber to lend the weight of his office to her accomplishments: "Have John develop specific message about my substantive roles."

Hayes' work plan was at times contradictory. She said she wanted to end her existing consulting contracts and "go to full-time volunteer status." In the next line, however, Hayes wrote that she intended to "explore opportunities for income from non-policy, non-Oregon, non-time-consuming work."

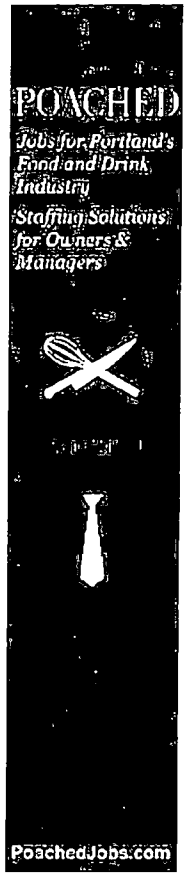
After the campaign, Hayes expected Kitzhaber to formally name her to a staff position that she could leverage financially.

Here's how she put it:

"Jan. 2015: Get appointed to official policy positions. Feb. 2015–June 2017: Work the policy areas hard. Develop paid speaking and outside Oregon income opportunities. Speak a lot. Get published a lot. Set foundation for book/s – me, John, John and me (outline, generate interest, sample chapters).

"June 2017–Jan. 2018: Transition Phase: Line up next big work and significant income. Write book (maybe get grant to do it). Move out of Mahonia."



The emails the governor's office sought to destroy also show the relationship between Kitzhaber's personal finances and Hayes' income.

The first lady's agreement to let her outside contracts lapse in early 2014 had financial consequences for the governor.

"Hey dear, well, I just paid bills with my own money for the last time in our current plan," Hayes wrote Kitzhaber on March 14, 2014. "Attached is my best estimated monthly and annual expenses."

Those expenses came to about $62,000 a year—and they would now be the governor's responsibility. Emails show Kitzhaber began making direct monthly deposits into Hayes' bank account so she could pay her bills.

There's been debate about exactly how Kitzhaber's and Hayes' finances intermingled. That's an important question because the answer sheds light on whether the governor benefited from Hayes' consulting work.

For four years, Kitzhaber stated on state financial disclosure forms that Hayes was a member of his household, which would suggest their finances were linked. But at a Jan. 30, 2015, press conference, the governor suddenly said he wasn't sure that was the case.

Kitzhaber's decision to begin monthly deposits into Hayes' account when her contract work lapsed, however, shows money she had been earning from consulting was money the governor didn't have to spend. Therefore, it appears that Kitzhaber benefited from her contracts.

Kitzhaber's shifting position on whether Hayes was a member of his household was part of a legal strategy devised by lawyers hired to defend the governor and the first lady against complaints filed with the Oregon Government Ethics Commission.

Kitzhaber and Hayes wanted to establish that neither was dependent on the other for money—a strategy intended to knock down the assertion that Kitzhaber benefited from Hayes' contracts.

The strategy is spelled out in an email exchange between the governor and Steve Janik, a Portland lawyer representing Kitzhaber and Hayes before the ethics commission.

"As I understand it," Kitzhaber wrote to Janik on Dec. 22, 2014, "we will make the case that: (1) Cylvia is not a public official, and (2) that she is not a member of my household — and therefore that the OGEC has no jurisdiction in the matter and that the complaints should be dismissed."

Janik agreed. "We will argue," the attorney wrote back that same day, "that because Cylvia is not a member of your household, her activities pursuing private income cannot be attributed to you."

But the email exchange reveals something else: Despite the defense they were mounting, the governor and first lady had no interest in a long fight with the ethics commission.

"We will convey that we are willing to take this all the way and have a strong case for prevailing," Kitzhaber wrote to Janik on Dec. 22. "But the end game is not actually to have the complaints dismissed but rather to negotiate a stipulated settlement agreement in which we might acknowledge some minor mistakes we may have made and have the matter resolved at the March [2015] meeting. Do I have that right?"

Janik's answer: "Your summary of the strategy is correct."

Also in this week's paper:

"Hit the Delete Button": Kitzhaber's office's explanation for why it requested delction of emails doesn't hold water.

"Relying On An Old Man's Money": After Hayes got nearly $40,000 from an octogenarian, Kitzhaber bailed her out.

"Ringing the Truth": Could Kitzhaber and Hayes benefit from spousal privilege if they married?

"Carbon Copy": A climate-change bill will test Gov. Kate Brown's independence.

Laughable. She is stunning in her audacity. Absolutely laughable. Cylvia Hayes didn't care a whit about the State of Oregon...As revealed in just these few emails she evidences, as her primary motivation simple greed, resume building, and money grubbing. It appears this strategy of hers from 2013-to 2018 was a blueprint for landing a big job when they were done with the "little work" of being Guv and 1st Flat Footed Dancer. Landing that big job included aggressively and premeditatedly thumbing her nose at rules related to conflicts of interest or the appearance of conflicts. It is shocking that he allowed this to go on without shutting her down, kicking her out of his office and telling her to sink or swim on her own. What is also shocking given the contempt with which his staff held her in they didn't walk and go public. So, they are complicit in aiding and abetting her behavior in making a mockery out of the rules that everyone plays by.

If ever there was a train wreck waiting to happen it was Cylvia Hayes. Now, in context, the third marriage and 5K payoff to the Ethiopian, then not paying taxes, the pot farm, now the conflicts of interest over leveraging the Governors office into pretzel shaped contracts, her unreported contracts...unreported income...on and in. It all makes perfect sense. Kitzhaber, at the end of the day, comes off as a complete dunce. Forget party affiliation...The guy is just one more in a line of fools that gave her safe haven to wreak her havoc.

This is brazen stuff. I hope she goes to federal prison for 5 years. He needs to build a cabin on the banks of the Monongahela and scrub it clean before he shows his face in Oregon again....MFAH's

One step at a time. First of all it is entirely plausible they had an inkling things weren't kosher but wanted to keep their distance. But staff talk. They talk about office politics. I'm sure more than one person shared the inside skinny on Hayes disruptive behavior around the office. But remember she was a free free floating electron...jet setting around. Lived in PDX for the most part....Hard to figure out who's paying for what without calling for a full blown investigation. Audit etc., Which is happening now.They probably didn't know the details of her crap stuff. How could they? They don't sign contracts...but it is possible of course.

I agree with this post. It's shocking to read through this and feel that the Oregon public has been so misled by a Governor who I thought had gone a little bit astray. What a shame and how sad for Kitzhaber's supporters and his family to read this.

"I hear the train acomin; it's rolling round the bend. And I ain't seen as big a crash as I don't know when". A little play off Johnny Cash's Folsom Prison Blues. But you get the point. When you have one party in power so long and so strong and so lazy, you get corruption with a capital C. Worse yet, it took a little chicken sheet weekly to blow the scandal sky high. And now the legislature laughably wants to fix the ethics rules. Oregon's state bird is the Western Meadowlark. Hope it flies over the capitol today and dumps on the politicians.

Hayes was looking for power and money...she saw, in Kitz, her "fast track" to both of those...(in times past, known as a "gold-digger")... Kitz, at least IMHO, has always been MUCH more intent on creating his "legacies" than he has on actually governing... He likes the photo ops, the political glad-handing, and the perks and trappings of our state's highest elected office, but chose to ignore the day-to-day details that are a requisite part of effective leadership... He referred to us as "ungovernable", but has proven that HE, in fact, is unable to govern.

Kitz and Hayes deserve each other... but Oregon deserves better than either one of them... Hopefully, our voters will remember these events when we go to the polls next time.

SUMMARY:

On 02/18/2015, OSP was asked to investigate possible unauthorized access and dissemination of state email belonging to an executive branch member of the Oregon state government. A public article printed by the Willamette Week on 02/18/2015, titled "What He Left Behind", makes reference to emails of possible privileged communications between former governor John Kitzhaber and his attorney. This investigation continues.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/02/2015, at approximately 09:35 AM, I met with Mr. Michaelian at the Oregon State Enterprise Technology Services (ETS) building for follow up.

The scope of our meeting was to search across all email accounts of the states email archive system for Outlook mailbox files, or PSTs. Through further investigation of the states file server, [redacted] suspected PSTs were found across the GOV, and COO domains that could have contained private emails or privileged attorney-client communications. A third cache of PSTs were also found on an ad-hoc file server, [redacted] & [redacted], located at ETS

Technical Support Center (TSC.)

The goal of this search was to determine if any of the identified PSTs had been emailed to other parties through the states email system.

The results of this search revealed three attempts to email a PST file.

ACTION TAKEN:

On February 19, 2015, Captain Worthy, Sergeant Payne and I interviewed Mike Rodgers in his office at the Enterprise Technology Services (ETS) building, located in Salem on Airport Road.

We arrived at approximately 1:25 p.m., and during an introduction, I told Mike Rodgers that he did not have to speak with us if he chose not to. I explained the interview was voluntary and he could end it at any time. After the introductions and an explanation about our interview, Sergeant Payne turned on an audio recorder at 1:38 p.m. Mike Rodgers acknowledged he knew the interview was being recorded. The recording was stopped and started several times during the interview for a variety of reasons that included, answering telephone calls and stopping so Mike Rodgers could print emails. As part of the investigation, the recording was not transcribed. For a verbatim account of the interview, refer to the audio recording, which was later entered into evidence by Sergeant Payne.

At approximately 1:40 p.m., the recording was paused so Mike Rodgers could print emails related to the questions he would be asked. While the recording was off, Mike Rodgers stated that there had only been one time that he knew of that an email located in the email archive had been deleted. The email had contained personal information by mistake and the request the person made was approved after several consultations.

The following information was provided by Mike Rodgers and the statements are in substance statements.

The recording was started at 1:50 p.m., Mike Rodgers stated in substance that on January 9, 2015, he received a call from Matt Shelby, and Matt Shelby was asking what the archive email account for Governor Kitzhaber was identified as.

Mike Rodgers assigned Vahan Michaelian to conduct the search and identified the archive account as MJOJKT@Oregon.gov. Throughout the investigation, the archive account was commonly referred to as "MJOJKT." Refer to the email from Matt Shelby to Mike Rodgers, bearing the date January 9, 2015, at 11:58 a.m., for specific information. The email is part of a packet of emails that Mike Rodgers provided to me during the interview and I attached it to this report and labeled it as "Mike Rodgers' Emails."

On February 2, 2015, Matt Shelby sent Mike Rodgers an email chain and the email chain contained a public records request originating from Nick Budnick, an Oregonian reporter in it. The email from Nick Budnick to Matt Shelby, contained a request for a list or an email log of all emails sent or received by Governor Kitzhaber's state-used gmail account.

The email chain is three pages in length and it contains five emails.

The first email was from Amy Wojcicki and it was addressed to Nick Budnick and appeared to be a response to questions that Nick Budnick previously had sent to Amy Wojcicki. The five questions referred specifically to the Governor's email, why the Governor had been using a personal account and how the Governor's staff members have been managing the Governor's private gmail account when public records requests have been made.

The second email in the chain was the email mentioned above that Nick Budnick sent to Matt Shelby concerning the email log request. Sent on February 2, 2015. The date range for the requested emails was from January 1, 2011 through present.

The third email in the chain was sent from Matt Shelby to Mike Rodgers, on February 3, 2015, at 10:53 a.m. Matt Shelby was asking Mike Rodgers who would be the best person to talk to at ETS concerning the Governor's email situation.

The fourth email in the chain was between Mike Rodgers and Matt Shelby. Mike Rodgers asked Matt Shelby if they should "print out" the emails. Mike Rodgers was referring to printing out the headings or subject lines of the emails. Mike Rodgers explained that what he thought was possible, was not as easy as he thought and it could not be done. This email occurred February 4, 2015, at 7:26 p.m.

Matt Shelby responded to Mike Rodgers in the fifth email. The final response occurred on February 5, 2015, at 7:06 a.m.

On February 5, 2015, Mike Rodgers sent the request for the email logs to Shawn Wagoner. Mike Rodgers was told that a search was conducted and the emails were put into a pst file and the pst file was put on Matt Shelby's home drive. Shortly after, Matt Shelby requested the pst file to be placed on Liani Reeves' and Amy Wojcicki's home drive. The pst file was named "MJOJKT.pst". The investigation revealed that Technology Support Center (TSC) technician Scot Conner assisted Matt Shelby on the task. For additional information on what specifically occurred during this time period, refer to the reports outlining the interviews with Matt Shelby and Scot Conner.

Late in the evening on February 5, 2015, Mike Rodgers received an email chain that Tracy Osburn wrote and sent to several TSC supervisors and to Shawn Wagoner, a former manager at TSC. That email chain was eventually forwarded to Mike Rodgers by Gary Kreiger. It was sent to Mike Rodgers on February 5, 2015, at 7:24 p.m. and Mike Rodgers stated that he did not open the email until the morning of February 6, 2015. The main subject of the original email was a request allegedly made by someone in the Governor's Office to have personal emails removed from the Governor's state email archive account. For reference, the email that Tracy Osburn wrote on February 5, 2015, at 5:41 p.m., and which was disseminated through the state email system and released to numerous news agencies will be referred to as the "Tracy Email" in this report.

The email chain is two pages in length and it contains four emails, including the "Tracy Email."

The first email was the "Tracy Email," from Tracy Osburn and it is addressed to a core group of TSC supervisors and Shawn Wagoner. It was sent on February 5, 2015, at 5:41 p.m.

The second email was from Adrian Turpin and Adrian Turpin was directing the managers in TSC to 'hold on processing' of the "Tracy Email" request.

The third email in the chain was from Shawn Wagoner. Shawn Wagoner removed Tracy Osburn's name from the address block, but added Adrian Turpin and Gary Kreiger to the list. His portion of the email response was simple, he instructed TSC staff members to "take no action" because he had spoken with Gary Kreiger and Gary Kreiger was taking over.

The last email in the chain was sent from Gary Kreiger to Mike Rodgers and Gary Kreiger was asking to discuss the email chain first thing on February 6, 2015. The date on the last email was February 5, 2015, at 7:24 p.m.

On February 6, 2015, Mike Rodgers spoke on the telephone with Gary Kreiger and they discussed the request to delete emails from Governor Kitzhaber's email archive account. Mike Rodgers told Gary Kreiger that he needed to talk with Michael Jordan. Gary Kreiger told Mike Rodgers that he would go to TSC to find out what happened regarding the request to remove the emails.

After the telephone call, Mike Rodgers drove to the Revenue Building to contact Tracy Osburn, but Tracy Osburn was not at the office, so Mike Rodgers went to DAS – West, the office building where Michael Jordan works. The fifth floor of the Revenue Building is where TSC is located.

Mike Rodgers arrived at DAS – West and he contacted Michael Jordan. Mike Rodgers told Michael Jordan about the request from the governor's office to "delete" emails. Michael Jordan sighed and told Mike Rodgers that he needed to walk across the street. Before Mike Rodgers left the office, he told Michael Jordan that he would need something in writing if he was asked to delete emails. Mike Rodgers told Michael Jordan that the request to delete emails, "Didn't seem right." (Directly across the street from the DAS – West building is the State Capitol, where the Offices of former Governor Kitzhaber were located.)

At this point in the interview, Mike Rodgers mentioned out loud that he had written notes to himself to assist him in remembering and he pulled the notes out. Later during the interview, Captain Worthy asked Mike Rodgers for a copy of the notes, but he was extremely reluctant to provide those. He allowed me to quickly look them over, but he was adamant that he did not want them included as part of the investigation. It should be noted that as the investigation progressed over the following weeks, Sergeant Payne conducted a forensic examination on the state owned laptop that Mike Rodgers had been issued to use for state business. In a folder on the computer, Sergeant Payne located a document that had been titled something similar to "Governor's Timeline." Sergeant Payne printed a copy of the document for me and I included it in this report as an attachment labeled, "Mike Rodgers' Timeline as of 021715." I recognized the format and content as possibly being the document that Mike Rodgers had shown me during the interview. I could not tell if he had edited the version that is attached to this report following our interview or not.

A short time later, Mike Rodgers received a telephone call from Michael Jordan and Matt Shelby. Michael Jordan told him that he wanted all emails from the governor's archive account. Mike Rodgers contacted Vahan Michaelian and asked Vahan Michaelian to conduct a "wild card search" on a potential email address related to Governor Kitzhaber. The email address contained the phrase, "hundredth meridian" in the address. Vahan Michaelian finished the search and located approximately 2,500 email records. Vahan Michaelian put the emails on a thumb drive and gave the thumb drive to Mike Rodgers.

A little prior to 1:00 p.m., Mike Rodgers took the thumb drive (later referred to as thumb drive #1) and drove to DAS – West, which is where Matt Shelby's office is located. Matt Shelby was not at his desk, the receptionist told him Matt Shelby went to lunch and he normally runs during his lunch break, so Mike Rodgers went into a meeting in Conference Room A, that he had been scheduled to attend.

At about 1:30 p.m., Matt Shelby entered the meeting and took thumb drive #1 from Mike Rodgers.

After the meeting Mike Rodgers went up to Matt Shelby's office and asked him if he had gotten him what he needed. Matt Shelby told him he was taking thumb drive #1 to the Governor's Office and the Governor's staff would review it. Matt Shelby then told him that he was concerned because there was not enough emails on thumb drive #1. Matt Shelby asked Mike Rodgers if he had also gotten the emails that started with a "TK" or something.

Sometime between 3:30 to 3:45 p.m., Mike Rodgers went back to the ETS building to have Vahan Michaelian create a second thumb drive (later referred to as thumb drive #2) utilizing a "wild card search" with "TK*" or similar. Vahan Michaelian conducted additional "wild card searches" on potential email addresses related to Governor Kitzhaber that contained the phrase, "JK hundreth meridian" and similar. Thumb drive #2 contained approximately 3,500 email records.

Mike Rodgers took thumb drive #2 and drove back to DAS – West and contacted Matt Shelby. He asked Matt Shelby, "What's going to happen with this?" and Matt Shelby told him that Liani Reeves and Mike Bonetto would review the thumb drives and mark the emails that needed to be deleted. Matt Shelby took thumb drive #2 and plugged it into his computer to see if it was readable, which it was. It was around 4:30 p.m., so Mike Rodgers decided to go home.

On February 9, 2015, at 8:12 a.m., Mike Rodgers received a telephone call from "Rachel" in the Governor's office. Rachel instructed him that Michael Jordan wanted him to get the staff together that knew about the request, so they could meet with Michael Jordan.

At approximately 8:25 a.m., Mike Rodgers received a follow-up telephone call from "Rachel" and he was told the plans had changed and only he was needed in the meeting with Michael Jordan.

At approximately 9:30 a.m., Mike Rodgers arrived for the meeting with Michael Jordan. Michael Jordan told Mike Rodgers the reason he had limited the number of people for the meeting was because he did not want to panic people.

Mike Rodgers had previously printed out a copy of the "Tracy Email" chain to give it to Michael Jordan. Michael Jordan saw the address of the TSC supervisors (DAS_DL_ETS_TAM_TSC_Management) and he wanted to know which TSC staff members were included in the email group.

Mike Rodgers said that Michael Jordan told him that the thumb drives were at the Governor's Office and the Governor had decided to review the thumb drives personally to determine which ones needed to be deleted out of the system.

Mike Rodgers told me he did not understand what Michael Jordan or the Governor meant by deleting files out of the system. Mike Rodgers said not only are the emails backed up in Salem in their building, but it is also backed up in Montana.

Mike Rodgers said that Michael Jordan told him the incident may turn from an ethical issue to a legal "nature." Michael Jordan felt he needed to go to the Attorney General to ask for permission to seek outside council, similar to what they did for Cover Oregon.

Mike Rodgers said that Michael Jordan told him he would get back to him later about possibly seeking legal counsel to protect themselves. Mike Rodgers stated he was not comfortable with anything that was "going on," deleting things is not what they do in ETS.

Mike Rodgers left and returned to his office at ETS. Mike Rodgers found out who was included in the email group that Tracy Osburn had sent the "Tracy Email." The group was identified as: DAS_DL_ETS_TAM_TSC_Management.

At approximately 11:03 a.m., Mike Rodgers sent an email to Michael Jordan and it contained the names of the eight employees that Mike Rodgers believed knew about the "Tracy Email." That email listing the names is contained in attachment labeled as "Mike Rodgers' Emails."

Michael Rodgers

Gary Kreiger

Shawn Wagoner

Adrian Turpin

Mike Rodgers stated he did not hear anything else about the "Tracy Email" issue or the Governor's emails until February 12, 2015, at around 2:20 p.m. Mike Rodgers received a text message from Shawn Wagoner that said something similar to, "We are in the news." Shawn Wagoner sent him a link to the Willamette Week article that had just been published that referenced the "Tracy Email" on February 5, 2015.

Mike Rodgers pulled the managers out of the meeting and spoke with them. They talked about the news article and had a general conversation about how the information had gotten out. Mike Rodgers said it was "kinda crazy for everyone involved."

Mike Rodgers then went to DAS – West and Matt Shelby told him that the Governor's office was still trying to figure out which emails needed to be deleted. February 12, 2015, was a Thursday and Mike Rodgers said he did not hear much about the article or the email issues for several days.

At this point in the interview, Mike Rodgers' cellphone rang and Mike Rodger's stated that it was his security manager on the phone.

At approximately 2:24 p.m., the recorder was paused so Mike Rodgers could talk with Marshall Wells.

At approximately 2:25 p.m., the recorder was turned back on.

On Sunday, February 15, 2015, Mike Rodgers attended a DAS meeting that was held as a "Dry Run" for the Ways and Means Committee presentation. Towards the end of the meeting, while still in front of everyone at the meeting, Michael Jordan and Alex Pettit asked him to check to see if any of the Governor's personal emails were still being sent to the state email archive account, "MJOJKT." They also instructed Mike Rodgers to send a technician to the Governor's Office on Monday, February 16, 2015, to help the Governor ensure his personal emails were not being forwarded to the state email archive account. Mike Rodgers said when he was told to do that, he was not comfortable with doing that. Mike Rodgers said he did not know how much work TSC employees had been doing for the Governor's personal equipment.

At this point in the interview, Mike Rodgers' cellphone rang and he looked at the caller identification screen and saw that Sarah Jo Chaplin was calling. Mike Rodgers stated, "It's Sara Jo, she will just have to wait."

Mike Rodgers thought it was important to share that on Thanksgiving, Cylvia Hayes had an issue with her personal computer and someone requested for a technician to go out on Thanksgiving to fix Cylvia Hayes' personal printer. Mike Rodgers said there is a lot of pressure to do what the Governor asks employees to do. Mike Rodgers said he just recently learned the request had been made and that someone had actually responded to fix the printer. Mike Rodgers had received this information from Adrian Turpin.

On February 16, 2015, Mike Rodgers participated in additional Ways and Means Committee presentation practice.

On February 17, 2015, at approximately 8:17 a.m., Mike Rodgers sent an email to Michael Jordan regarding email activity over the holiday weekend in the Governor's email archive account. That email is contained in the attachment labeled as "Mike Rodgers' Emails."

At approximately 10:59 a.m., Mike Rodgers sent an additional email to Michael Jordan regarding recent email activity in the Governor's email archive account. That email is contained in the attachment labeled as "Mike Rodgers' Emails."

Later that morning, Matt Shelby contacted Mike Rodgers about the request Michael Jordan had made to ensure that the Governor's devices were not forwarding personal emails to the state email archive account.

At 1:00 p.m., a meeting had been scheduled at the Governor's office for ETS staff to work on the Governor's personal email account to ensure the forwarding had stopped. Mike Rodgers thought it had been Gary Kreiger that attended the meeting at the Governor's office.

At this time, Mike Rodgers found out that the Governor's personal emails were still being forwarded into the archive account. More work was completed and then Liani Reeves sent test messages to the Governor's personal email accounts and Mike Rodgers verified that particular emails did not arrive in the archive account.

Mike Rodgers heard that while Gary Kreiger was at the Governor's office, Liani Reeves asked him to have someone delete the Governor.Kitzhaber@gmail.com email account.

On February 18, 2015, Mike Rodgers went to TSC and he received a telephone call from Shawn Wagoner. Shawn Wagoner asked him if Gary Kreiger had the user name and password of the Governor's personal email accounts. Mike Rodgers said he told Shawn Wagoner and John Ritchie that ETS staff would not delete the accounts.

At approximately 11:17 a.m., an email chain was started by Adrian Turpin that documented a conversation that occurred between Matt Shelby and Scot Conner. The previous day, Matt Shelby had called Scot Conner and asked him to delete the original pst file from February 5, 2015, labeled, "MJOJKT.pst" from his home drive and the home drives of Liani Reeves and Amy Wojcicki.

The email chain is two pages in length and it contains five emails.

The first email is from Adrian Turpin and it documents the request made the previous day by Matt Shelby to delete the pst files from three home drives. It was sent on February 18, 2015, at 11:17 a.m.

The second email is from Gary Kreiger and it instructs others not to delete the pst files that had been created. It was sent on February 18, 2015, at 11:37 a.m.

The third email in the chain is Adrian Turpin, simply acknowledging the instructions. It was sent at 11:50 a.m.

The fourth email is from Mike Rodgers and he repeats no action is to be taken. It was sent at 2:07 p.m.

The last email in the chain was sent from Adrian Turpin, it simply acknowledged the previous emails. It was sent at 5:01 p.m.

During the late afternoon, Mike Rodgers went to a Ways and Means Committee debrief and Michael Jordan contacted him. Michael Jordan told him that a reporter had contacted the Governor's office and the reporter was going to run a story about the Governor's emails. Michael Jordan asked Mike Rodgers to please go and figure out how to lock down the Governor's archive account. When Mike Rodgers was walking out of the meeting, Michael Jordan told him that the Governor still has one of the two thumb drives.

Mike Rodgers said he, Shawn Wagoner, John Ritchie and Alex Arizala all arrived at the ETS building and they were working on the issue of how to ensure the Governor's archive account could be "locked."

On February 19, 2015, prior to lunch, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie showed up at ETS and they wanted to delete pst files. Mike Rodgers contacted Marshall Wells and Marshall Wells stated he did not think they should delete any pst files. Mike Rodgers called Alex Pettit and Alex Pettit was agitated because he felt ETS staff was leaving data unsecured.

At approximately 12:48 p.m., an email chain was started by Marshall Wells. The subject of the email chain involved Marshall Wells having spoken with the US Attorney's Office and what actions ETS was taking on securing the pst files.

The email chain is two pages in length and it contains four emails.

The first email was from Marshall Wells to Alex Pettit and it documented a telephone call that he had with the US Attorneys' Office. It was sent on February 19, 2015, at 12:48 a.m.

The second email was from Alex Pettit asking a question about securing the pst files. It was sent at 12:58 p.m.

The third email in the chain was from Marshall Wells and it also was about securing the pst files. It was sent at 1:18 a.m.

The last email in the chain was sent from Alex Pettit, Alex Pettit acknowledged what Marshall Wells wrote and about documenting the actions taken. It was sent at 1:21 p.m.

All of the above emails are contained in the attachment labeled as "Mike Rodgers' Emails." There is also an email in the packet that does not have a header on it. It lists three names and a hand written note that reads, "DAS EMAIL ADMINS." That email is also included in the packet.

Mike Rodgers remembered he forgot to explain some details that occurred on Tuesday, February 17, 2015, during his meeting with DAS. Mike Rodgers had been in the meeting with Michael Jordan and Sarah Jo Chaplin concerning increasing the security at ETS so no one could access Governor Kitzhaber's email archive account. As he was leaving, Michael Jordan stated, the Governor still has one of the thumb drives. Michael Jordan did not say what happened to the other thumb drive.

Mike Rodgers said if he learned anything out of this, he learned that things should be put in writing to document actions.

Towards the end of the interview Captain Worthy asked Mike Rodgers how the Willamette Week got the Governor's private emails. Mike Rodgers responded he did not think it was his staff, he thought someone at the Governor's office provided it. Mike Rodgers went on to say that he did not think the state email archive server had been hacked.

While Mike Rodgers was speaking, his cellphone rang and he identified the caller as Marshall Wells. He answered the call while the recording was still going and part of the conversation is captured. Mike Rodgers answered the phone and told Marshall Wells that Sara Jo Chaplin attempted to call him, but he was in the meeting. Mike Rodgers is heard saying that Marshall Wells got into trouble from Sarah Jo Chaplin for calling the US Attorney's Office.

At approximately 3:01 p.m., the recorder was paused so Mike Rodgers could continue his conversation with Marshall Wells.

At approximately 3:02 p.m., the recorder was turned back on.

Mike Rodgers stated he printed a copy of the "Tracy Email" for Michael Jordan, Matt Shelby and for himself.

When asked, Mike Rodgers said that the TSC helpdesk has a ticketing system and they should have records of all public records requests on the ticketing system.

Mike Rodgers was asked to provide a summary of his work history. Approximately twelve months ago, he was promoted to the position of Deputy Administrator in ETS and then six months ago, he was promoted to the Acting Administrator position.

When asked, Mike Rodgers said he did not know of anyone that had been disciplined for anything related to releasing confidential information.

I asked Mike Rodgers about Julie Bozzi and he mentioned she was the former Administrator for ETS, but was moved over to Cover Oregon on a job rotation and in December 2014, she was moved to OHA to work on the transition project for Cover Oregon.

I asked Mike Rodgers why Julie Bozzi had left ETS and he said it was a long story. In 2014, there was a staff meeting and they used to have a suggestion box that people could place questions into and then Julie Bozzi would answer them in the meeting. It appeared someone had gotten ahold of employee grievances that had been filed and had crafted questions targeting the grievances. It was an attempt to embarrass Julie Bozzi and she became obsessed. Julie Bozzi had caused the moral at ETS to get really "shitty." Michael Jordan decided to move her to Cover Oregon, but she wanted to come back, but "they" would not let her go back to ETS.

When Mike Rodgers was asked if he had a theory about what happened, he said he did not really know if anyone else had done anything. He remembered that Shawn Dawson had said he did not trust Jose. Mike Rodgers did not want to provide a speculation or a guess.

At approximately 3:20 p.m., the recorder was turned off for the final time.

Just prior to leaving, I asked Mike Rodgers if he had received any other emails or telephone calls from Michael Jordan. Mike Rodgers retrieved his work phone and played a message in his voicemail folder. It was a telephone call from Michael Jordan that was left on February 18, 2015, at approximately 5:00 p.m. The subject of the voicemail was to explain to Mike Rodgers that Michael Jordan believed Matt Shelby was asking for ETS to tighten the security on the pst files. Mike Rodgers stated he was surprised that Michael Jordan left a voicemail message, because Michael Jordan does not leave voicemails or send text messages. Sergeant Payne used his recorder to record the message that Michael Jordan had left.

Mike Rodgers also remembered when asked, that Michael Jordan had called him and told him about the DAS policy involving legal protection for an employee if they are involved in a legal issue that was worked related. Michael Jordan mentioned there was $35,000 that employees that were listed in the email chain from the original email that Tracy Osburn had sent.

Captain Worthy, Sergeant Payne and I thanked Mike Rodgers for his time and left the ETS building.

During the interview, Mike Rodgers had asked Gary Kreiger to create a list of TSC employees and their leave usage during the month of February 2015. The packet contains three pages and it is attached to this report and labeled as, "TSC Employee Roster & Leave Usage."

It should be noted that Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward conducted various technical searches of the email archive system, the network drives of numerous state employees and many examinations related to the pst files identified during the investigation as having been created using search parameters that involved John Kitzhaber and/or Cylvia Hayes. Information was gathered during the investigation that appeared to discredited or contradicted some of the statements provided by Mike Rodgers. An example of this is when Mike Rodgers appeared to omit the information that he inserted thumb drive #1 and #2 into his state issued laptop prior to delivering the drives to Matt Shelby at DAS-West.

Refer to supplemental reports completed by Lieutenant Harrington, Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward for additional information that may be related to Mike Rodgers and the technical searches conducted.

Governor Email Requests

Friday February 5th, 2015

- At around 6:45 I was checking my email before work and noticed an email from Gary Kreiger Titled Governor's email account. I opened and read the email.
- Gary wanted to me discuss a request to delete email from the governors email archive that had escalated to him. He was not willing to make that decision without talking to me.
- I called Shawn Wagoner since he is our most experienced manager when it comes to email and had escalated the request to delete to Gary.
- I contacted Gary and wanted additional information so he was headed to TSC see if he could learn more about who had made the request.
- I decided that I wanted to discuss this with Michael Jordan but needed to understand more about the request so I headed to the Revenue building where TSC is located.
- I had been told to talk to Tracy Osburn since he originated the email about the request to delete the governor's email.
- Tracy was at DAS West assisting with a move so we called him. Tracy had been contacted by Jan who had been told by Liani to delete the emails from a user named hundrethmeridian@att.net (Cylvia Hayes account).
- I then went to DAS West to talk to Michael Jordan. I met with Michael Jordan at around 8:30.
- I explained the request that had been made and he said he needed to walk across the street to talk with the Governor's office about the request. I questioned the legality and he said that was the Governor's call.
- I explained that even if we deleted the emails from the archive, there were backups of the database and that the PST files that were created if saved on a file server would have been backed up as well.
- I told him that I would need something in writing in order to proceed because I had serious concerns. He seemed agitated by the request and dismissed me.
- At 11:21 Matt Shelby and Michael Jordan called me to request that I provide him with a PST file that contained all of the emails from hundrethmeridian@att.net contained within the governor's email account (MJO.JKT@oregon.gov).
- Matt called back at 11:30 to confirm I was bring the files over and delivering them to him.
- I had Vahan create the PST which contained about 2,400 emails and put it on a thumb drive.
- I had a 1:00 PM meeting downtown to discuss the Voice service contract project and Matt Shelby stopped by at around 1:30 and picked up the thumb drive.
- After the meeting I stopped by Matt's desk and asked him if he needed anything else, he said that thumb drive only had one of the addresses they needed pulled, there was another address like above that started the tk.hhundrethmeridian@att.net.
- I went back to ETS and had Vahan pull another PST with this information, this PST had approximately 3,500 emails on it.
- I dropped this thumb drive off to Matt at around 4:30. I asked Matt what would happen next. He told me that he would walk this thumb drive over to the Governor's office like he had the other and that Mike Bonetto and Liani Reeves would review the emails over the weekend and mark the ones that were to be deleted and that I would be provided a list to delete. I was a little shocked by this and was told that Liani was the governor's counsel and could make that call on what was personal and what was public record.

- I then went home,

Monday February 9, 2015

- At 8:12 I was called by Richelle (Michael Jordan's admin) and told to get all the staff that knew about the request together for a meeting with Michael.
- At 8:25 she called back and said that only I was needed to meet with Michael.
- I scheduled a meeting with Michael at 9:30
- Michael seemed very happy to see me
- He told me that he was limiting the conversation to just me, so as not to panic other people.
- He wanted to know who knew, so I told him the names I knew but committed to send him a complete list.
    - Michael Rodgers
    - Gary Kreiger
    - Shawn Wagoner
    - Adrian Turpin
    - Vahan Michaelian
    - Ben Garvey
    - Tracy Osburn
    - Brian Tipsword
- He said that he believe that this had become more than an ethics issue and that there could be legal consequences.
- He said that the Governor had decided to review the emails himself and that could take a long time.
- He did not want ETS to participate in evidence tampering.
- He was going to the AG and asking that he be allowed to hire legal counsel outside of the AG since there would be a conflict of interest similar to Cover Oregon and that he and the others involved from ETS would be represented at the states expense.

Thursday February 12, 2015

- At around 2:30 I got a text from Shawn Wagoner
- Met with Bryan Nealy, Darin Rand, Shawn Wagoner and Adrian Turpin to try and figure out how this made the paper. Everyone agreed that the ETS staff had done the right thing, but it was still concerning.
- We talked through how many people had access to the email system, and if there was logging to see if they could determine who had access to what. It appears that there are between 60 and 100 people that have elevated rights to the system.
- Darin and Bryan sought advice from the Karen Johnson downtown (see email)
- I went downtown to the W&M debrief.
- After the meeting I asked Barry Pack what to do and he pated me on the arm and said hang in there.
- Matt Shelby said that the Govs office was still trying to determine what emails need to be deleted and grinned.

Sunday February 15th, 2015

- Went to W&M prep meeting. At the end Michael Jordan asked me to check if email was still going into the Gov's State of Oregon account on Tuesday and told me that we would need a tech to work on his computer. I did not like the idea of any of our staff working on the governor's personal equipment. They asked how long email had been flowing into that account and I told him there are tickets that go back to 2011 to setup email forwarding. Michael said that TSC staff worked on his personal phone email.

Tuesday February 17, 2015

- I sent Michael an email that said email was still coming into that account from two addresses. He called me and wanted to know which addresses they were and reiterated that we would need to help the governor fix the problem. He seemed irritated with me, I sent him a follow-up email.
- I told TSC staff that were involved with stopping the deleting and told them that everyone had done the right thing.
- I met with the TSC staff at 9:30 and told them that information had been subpoenaed and not them personally, that if they wanted to talk to them they would be subpoenaed (turns out that when Tracy went home 2 FBI agents were waiting for him, they did not seem to give him an option from what I have heard and required a statement). I encouraged them to write everything down because it could be a long time before anyone actually talked to them.
- Matt Shelby called me and asked that I dispatch someone to help stop email from being forwarded to the State of Oregon account from the Gov's personal account. I asked for it in writing and he did not feel that was necessary. I worked with Adrian and Gary to have Gary go along with John Darnville to Meet Matt and Laini to kill the forwading, I wanted them all present.
- They did not seemed concerned.
- I went to the CUB planning meeting downtown and which was already over since I had read my calendar wrong and since Sarah Jo had cancelled the Service Leaders meeting and I was thrown off.
- I went to the W&M recap Meeting and after about 15 minutes was called out by Sarah Jo to meet with Michael. Michael told me that we needed to secure the email system since someone had given Nigel private information and that he was doing a news story on it and that Shawn Dawson and someone from ESO would be meeting me at the SDC in 30 minutes. I asked him what he meant by secure since the data all sits in the archive manager he said that it was all over his head and he did not understand what I was asking. He said they were seeking a DOJ opinion on if this was a criminal issue or a HR Policy issue and he would let me know, but at this time we were to limit access to the gov"s email.
- Shawn showed up and we talked with Bryan Nealy, Gary Kreiger, Adrian Turpin, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie about how to secure the data and that there were several PST files given to Matt Shelby and the Govs office that already contained the gov's email.
- Shawn and John then worked with Alex Arizala to make is so no one could access the MJO email account and that that the rights for all staff who could access the Archive was revoked until we were told how to proceed. At this time we cannot process any Public Information requests until this resolved.

ACTION TAKEN:

On Feb 19th, 2015 I contacted Matt Shelby by phone and arranged to meet with him related to this investigation. At about 10:24 am that day, Captain Davie and I met with Mr. Shelby at DAS West and interviewed him in a conference room on the 5th floor.

Matt said that he had some suspicions about why we wanted to talk to him. I informed him that it had to do with the suspected leak of the governor's emails to the media. I also told Matt that we were conducting a criminal investigation and that his cooperation was voluntary. I told Matt that I would be recording our interview. I later copied this interview onto a DVD-R and logged it into Evidence. Matt Shelby told me the following in summary.

In 2011, because of the fact that the Governor liked Gmail and not the state email system, the helpdesk (TSC) set up a Gmail account for him to use for official state business. Matt said that this created a problem because DAS was required to maintain records of official emails and so they had to figure out a way of doing this.

TSC set up the following email address for the governor: Governor.kitzhaber@gmail.com with an auto-forward function to an archive mailbox at the state data center. Matt said that this was the understanding of the way it worked when he requested emails from his archive box after he received a public records request in early February of 2015.

Matt said that on February 2nd, he received a public records request from Nick Budnick at the Oregonian. His request was for an email log of all emails to or from the Governor.kitzhaber@gmail.com account. He said that Budnick first started the request at the Governor's office and that he was not asking for the actual emails; just a log. Matt said that data center staff told him that the only way to get this was to send him a .PST file, which would also contain the actual email content, not just the log that was requested.

He forwarded this request directly to Mike Rogers (and bypassed the TCS Helpdesk which is how he would make this request under normal circumstances). He asked Mike who in his shop knew the most about the Governor's email situation. Mike did not pass him off to anyone. Instead, Mike checked in with one of his staff and got back to him saying that it was doable. Matt told him to proceed. On the 5th, the email archive was placed on his network drive and he started his review. He got the archived emails back from the state data center in the form of a .PST file. He said that they placed the file in a network share that he had access to. When he opened it through his own Outlook box, it was apparent that the state data center had also been collecting emails from some other personal email accounts of Governor Kitzhaber's. He said he could tell that there were personal emails in this .PST file by looking at the preview pane only (not by opening individual emails). Matt later stated that he specifically remembered an email between the governor and his second wife Sharon discussing their son's athletic schedule. Matt later said that this .PST file contained emails from all of the Governor's email accounts, both public and private. He said there were roughly eleven thousand official emails in this .PST file. He said that the emails dated back roughly four years. He said that he does not know how long the personal emails were being collected. He said that he contacted the governor's office and spoke with Amy Wojcicki, and told her that they were collecting more than just official emails and that they should look into how this occurred. He made a request to have the .PST files placed onto their network drives also.

Matt said that the week before, he had gotten a public records request for all emails between Mike Jordan and Cylvia Hayes or the Governor. He said this was straight-forward because Mike uses state email so he sent this request through the Helpdesk and got a .PST file back that he could release.

He said that this created a problem for him because he has an obligation to maintain some of these emails, even if they are from private accounts, if they discuss official business. He said that they are currently working through this issue.

He said that he heard that Jan Murdock called the Helpdesk and started a conversation about removal of the emails off the state server which sparked some red flags from their intake person. They ran that up their chain of command and that they took no action and did not delete any emails from archive.

He said that the information that TSC managers received was that there was at least the interpretation that the governor's office had called and requested the deletion of personal emails. This information eventually got Mike Jordan and himself. He said that the situation obviously made several people uncomfortable. Matt said that he closed the loop with the governor's office. He said that he told them that there were some things that they needed to maintain and some that they may be able to delete. He told them that the first step in the process was for the governor's staff and legal counsel to go through a copy of these emails and identify which emails they believe are purely personal. He said that they did not have any access to actually delete anything, but wanted to send them to the governor's staff for their first opinion.

He said that this all occurred before the state criminal investigation was announced and before the federal subpoena for all of these records. He said that these were initiated shortly thereafter. He said that this didn't change what the governor's office was doing in the review of the records, but did change what they were going to do after the review process.

Matt said that "somewhere in there" the Willamette Week published a story and the reporter said that he had email evidence to support the claim that the Governor's office called and requested the deletion of the emails. He said that he did not see the email, but this is what the reporter said in his story. He said that there was an internal email chain that discusses this. Matt said that the reporter had this email chain "earlier", but did not acknowledge that he had any individual emails.

He said that he got an email from the reporter (and the Governor's coms staff was cc'd) and they responded to that. His interpretation of the request is that the reporter had email proof of the request to delete. He said that he didn't actually see this email and that the reporter didn't attach it.

He said that this was the first "public discussion" they were in possession of these private emails that the governor was trying to figure out a way to remove.

After the story broke, every other media outlet wanted the email chain and a couple of days later, they released the email chain per public records requests.

Matt said that each individual employee has a network drive that they are encouraged to use. Matt said that TSC staff dropped the file into his network drive. When he noticed what it contained, he asked them to also drop it into the network drive of Leani Reeves and Amy Wojcicki. Matt said that he does not know who at the state data center would have access to that same .PST file of all of Kitzhaber's emails that he received on his network share.

Matt said that, additionally, they put the file on a thumb drive that they walked over to the governor's office. Matt said that he talked to Grace and she told him that the Governor was going to do the first review of the emails and that Leani Reeves was going to do the double-check.

He said that Mike Rogers at ETS delivered the first thumb drive to him and he took it to the Governor's office. When they opened it, he noticed that the file names were only the Governor's AT&T.net emails. So he took the initiative and went back to Mike Rodgers and asked him to make sure that all of the Governor's emails were included. Matt said that all this occurred on February 6th. He said that both thumb drives were walked over to the governor's office on the same day within about a half an hour to an hour of one another.

I asked Matt why they had utilized a thumb drive for the transmission of these files to the governor's office when the .PST file had already been transferred to the server which contained all the emails in question. Matt initially said he couldn't recall why they did it that way. Later he said that he recalled that the reason he'd asked for this was because the very large .PST file that had been dropped onto his network drive contained all of the Governor's emails. The purpose of putting just the personal emails on the thumb drives intended for the Governor's office was to make it easier for them to review.

Matt said he never made any copies of any of the .PST files on the thumb drives or the one that ETS put on his network drive, but he did open the one on the network drive using his Outlook program. He said he is having issues getting rid of them

He said that he has an email request into TSC asking them to add the files to Amy and Leoni's network drives and a confirmation that this was done.

Matt said he picked up the first thumb drive from Mike, walked it over to the Governor's office and hand delivered it to Grace Roth. He said "I was a courier." I asked him how he knew that the .PST files on the thumb drive only contained the one personal email account and he said that he looked at it when he got there. Grace pulled it up through her Outlook account.

Together, the two thumb drives contain all of the Governor's personal emails.

Matt said that he thought that he only accessed the .PST file on his network drive one time. He said that he continued to pull out official state emails from this .PST file and created his own .PST file from the official email account (JKemails.pst). He said that he did this by searching for the governor's official Gmail account in the search box and pulled out any emails to or from that account. He said that when he was done with it, he had this .PST file moved from his network drive to Leani Reeves' network drive.

I asked if he himself did any release of any emails to any media, news organization or anyone. He said that he didn't. I asked if releases typically came from him, but in this case they were the governor's emails and he did not feel like he was in the position determine what had privilege, what was confidential, and what was not.

Matt said that, prior to February 2nd, he had not received any other request for the Governor's emails. They had received email requests for DAS employees and other people in the governor's office, but not the governor himself. No one had made a blanket request for the governor's emails.

Matt said that the last time he had any contact with the thumb drives is when he transported the second one over to the Governor's office for their review. Matt said that he handed the thumb drive to Grace Roth, who was in a hallway and she walked off with it. They did not check it together like they had checked the first one.

Matt said that Mike Rodgers opened the first .PST file on his (Matt's computer) when he delivered it to him to make sure that it would open.

When Nigel's story came out on Wednesday, he and Mike Jordan started talking about who had access to the archived emails. After this conversation, he called TSC and asked them to remove the .PST file from his network drive as well as from Amy's and Leoni's drive. This request occurred yesterday. Alex Pettit went out to the data center and locked it down.

Matt said that "it was apparent to him in conversations with Nigel that there was someone that was talking to him in the governor's office and on the data-center side." He said that Nigel told him about how Leani's conversation about exploring ways to remove the personal emails within the governor's office went. He said that it stuck him as strange and wondered how the reporter would have known this unless someone who was in the room with Leani during this conversation had told the reporter that this occurred.

I asked Matt when he spoke to Nigel Jaquis and he said that Nigel first broke the story late last week (it was February 12th). I asked Matt why Nigel had called him and Matt said that this was when he reached out to the governor's office and him with some follow-up questions and said that he going to print this, do you want to respond? Then Nigel printed his story, and then every other media outlet started calling him. He did a lot of talking to other reporters on Friday (the 13th). During this portion of the conversation, Matt continually reaffirmed that he had talked to Nigel last Friday (the 13th), although this was the day after the story had come out in the Willamette Week. He said that because Nigel had told him that he had proof of the email, he suspected that the leak came from somewhere within ETS and someone had reached out to Nigel.

Matt Shelby said that now, with the release of emails that he assumes were within that .PST file. He said that he obviously got them from somewhere. He said he'd be surprised if it was one of the governor's staff releasing that email because he didn't see the benefit in it. He said that, by process of elimination, because he knows that he didn't release the emails, that it had to be someone from ETS.

I asked Matt if he had spoken to Nigel since Friday, and he said "I don't believe I've spoken to him since then." He said that this Friday conversation was the one in which Nigel had inferred that he had a source near Leani Reeves that he had gotten information from. Matt said that Nigel had given this indication other times during previous conversations they'd had related to other records requests.

Matt said that Scot (with one 't') helped him with the first .PST file dump onto his network drive.

Matt said that he called Mike Rogers about getting the .PST files on the thumb drives and did not fill out a Helpdesk ticket for this request.

Matt Shelby said that he'd learned that John Kitzhaber's two personal email addresses are:

hundredthmeridian@att.net

jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com

Matt discussed the complexities related to the way in which public records requests involving the governor's office are dealt with between their office and DAS. He said that he is the point person for DAS. DAS is the custodian of records. Governor's office often makes the decision on what will be release and what wont. He said that certain records requests go directly though the governor's office.

On 3-13-15 at about 3:13 pm, I contacted Matt Shelby by phone to ask him some follow-up questions.

Matt said that he was fairly certain that Mike Rodgers opened the .PST's from the first thumb drive in his office in front of him. He said that the didn't see any details at that time about what was contained in the file, so he didn't know which email accounts were captured. He said that, shortly after receiving this thumb drive, he took it to the governor's office and hand delivered it to Grace Roth. He said that, together, they opened it on Grace's computer and he said that he thought there were at least three files on this thumb drive. He said that together, they opened the files, and saw that there was only one email account captured (the governor's AT&T account). He said that he was pretty sure that the thumb drive that Rodgers opened on his computer was the same one he opened on Grace Roth's computer and that this was the first thumb drive he received. He said that the files on thumb drive #2 were never opened in his presence or on him computer. He said that Mike just handed the drive to him, and he handed it to Grace Roth in the hallway. They never opened the file together.

Matt said that his office never would have released any emails between Fred Boss and Lianni Reeves, so the information in the 3-10-15 Willamette Week article did not come from them.

ACTION TAKEN:
On 02/19/2015, at about 8:30 AM, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie came to GHQ to meet with myself and Cpt. Worthy regarding the potential email leak. I know both John and Shawn from previous cases while working as a detective in the computer forensics unit.

The interview of John and Shawn took place in Tom Worthy's office. It was just the four of us in the room during the entire interview.

I asked them to describe what events had taken place in the past few days involving John Kitzhaber's email accounts and requests they've received from Alex Pettit, COO of DAS. Both John and Shawn were interviewed together since both had been working together on this assignment.

Shawn stated that he and John were asked to remove access to the MJOJKT *GOV email account by anyone other than themselves and Vahan Michaelian, Exchange engineer at ETS. Shawn explained that the ETS TSC staff had all access removed from the ETS Dell Archive Manager (DAM) application while the investigation was conducted. These directions came from Alex Pettit. TSC had elevated privileges to the DAM to provide help desk support and fulfill public records requests. Shawn stated he and John were made aware of private emails being collected from John Kitzhaber and Cylvia Hayes in the DAM.

The security of John Kitzhaber's state email account was This request was initiated after a request was made by someone at the governor's office to remove personal emails from the state's archives. This request was sent to TSC staff and prompted and email to be created by Tracy Osburne to his supervisor asking for clarification.
Shawn and John described the current design of the states email system, explaining that state used [redacted] Shawn described conversations he had with Vahan Michaelian when the Exchange server was being secured, and explained he was told by Vahan that Vahan was asked by Michael Rodgers to export all email from the MJOJKT account that matched "meridian" in the account name. Shawn stated that using the DAM, Vahan's search resulted in about 2,500 emails exported on the first try and about 3,500 on the second using a slightly different host name.

Shawn explained that there was a saying at ETS, that once an email is inside the states system, it stays in the states system. That was because [redacted] Shawn stated that the DAM was not designed to delete emails although a supported feature would require a lot of work due to the limited interface design.

Shawn stated that one of the features of the DAM was [redacted] Shawn described other logs related to the Exchange server, Web servers and File manager that might be useful to us during the investigation.
Shawn stated that part of he and John's tasks was to secure the "meridian" PST files sitting on the home folders of staff located in the governor's office.

Another Kind Of Green

Emails show how former Gov. John Kitzhaber's environmental principles and his friendship with a campaign contributor collided.

ANIMAL MAN: Scott Campbell made a fortune from the Banfield Pet Hospital. His latest venture is Hannah the Pet Society, which provides pets, food and veterinary care for a monthly fee. - IMAGE: John Lofflin

Scott Campbell operates on a Bunyanesque scale. He bought and expanded Banfield Pet Hospital, creating a chain of 750 veterinarian clinics, before selling the company in 2007. The Southeast Portland resident then turned his energy to his ranch near John Day—all 140,000 acres of it.

Campbell has had grand plans for Silvies Valley Ranch. For more than a decade, he's been building artificial beaver dams and other water diversions to restore natural habitat and boost hay production. He's imported South African Boer goats, a hardy breed that mows down invasive plants and barbecues up nicely.

The high-desert ranch has a 6,000-foot runway, making it the best place in Grant County (pop. 7,283) to land a private plane. Campbell is building a resort—his plans call for 575 units—and developing a 36-hole, eco-friendly golf course.

But records show, in his desire to bring economic development to what he calls "Frontier Oregon," Campbell has skirted state environmental regulations.

His water diversion projects blocked passage of endangered redband trout, and at least one building project's septic systems fell afoul of Oregon Department of Environmental Quality rules.

Campbell's aggressive approach to regulations proved no barrier to a warm friendship with then-Gov. John Kitzhaber, a politician whose environmental views were a pillar of his 35-year political career. That career ended with his Feb. 18 resignation amid growing allegations of influence peddling and conflicts of interest involving him and former first lady Cylvia Hayes.

Kitzhaber's emails provide a glimpse of his friendship with Campbell, a big campaign contributor. The emails—from the accounts that Kitzhaber's office sought to delete from state servers Feb. 5—show how the governor tried to balance running the state while also running for re-election. Kitzhaber did not respond to questions for this story.

Last year, Campbell proposed hosting a "Frontier Oregon Summit" at his ranch to promote economic development in Eastern Oregon. The event fell in the middle of Kitzhaber's campaign for his fourth and final term. When Campbell emailed him about his idea, Kitzhaber responded with enthusiasm.

"Your invite list is excellent," Kitzhaber wrote to Campbell on June 8, 2014. "If you want me to co-sign a letter to the list I would be glad to do so."

Kitzhaber's environmental staff was far less enthusiastic about the prospect of the governor headlining an event that would bring dozens of business and political leaders to Silvies Valley Ranch.

"Governor: I am going to be very direct," Richard Whitman, Kitzhaber's natural resources adviser, wrote June 20, 2014. "There are some serious problems with how Silvies Ranch has carried out its work."

Last year, Kitzhaber, a Democrat, generated an unusual level of support from business and timber interests that historically support Republicans.

His appearance at Campbell's Frontier Oregon Summit would highlight his commitment to one of his top priorities, creating jobs in rural Oregon.

With his ambitious plans for Silvies Valley Ranch, Campbell gave Kitzhaber the opportunity for a perfect campaign event.

Campbell had already established himself as one of Kitzhaber's top individual contributors, giving him $20,000 for his 2010 campaign for governor. Campbell's name wasn't on the checks. Instead, he used two of his companies to direct the cash.

When the 2011 Oregon Legislature opened, Campbell sought a controversial bill that benefited just one party: his Silvies Valley Ranch.

In most cases, ranch land is zoned so it's limited largely to agricultural use. But state Rep. Brian Clem (D-Salem) pushed House Bill 3465 to allow Campbell to develop his massive resort despite land-use rules that would have stopped him.

Opponents saw the bill as an end-run around Oregon's land-use laws. "This was a one-off deal that benefits one party," says Stephen Kafoury, a lobbyist for the American Planning Association.

Kitzhaber expressed concerns about measures that provide special deals—and then signed the bill into law anyway.

Campbell gave Kitzhaber another $21,000 in 2012, this time writing checks in his own name, and followed in May 2014 with $25,500 more. As he did in 2010, Campbell channeled the 2014 donations through his companies.

Campbell says he made no attempt to disguise his donations but simply wrote checks from company accounts rather than his personal checkbook. "Anyone can find out who owns any company in Oregon," he says.

In June 2014, Campbell sent an email to Kitzhaber's personal account about his plan for a Frontier Oregon Summit.

Campbell wanted the summit to advocate less government red tape, especially for rural businesses.

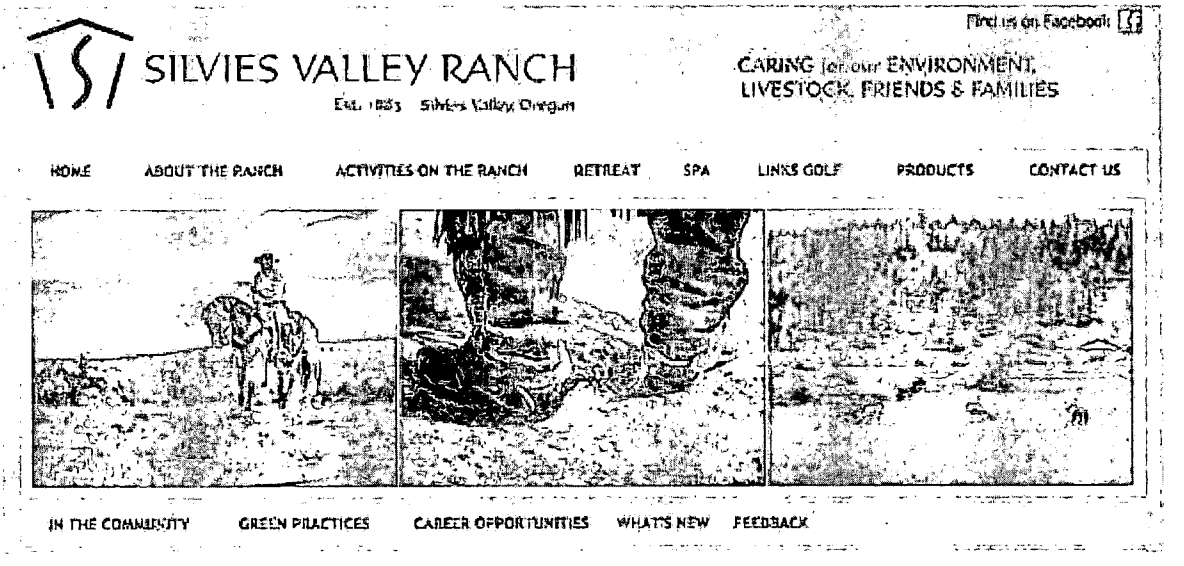
"State agencies must adopt a culture of helping to make things happen, instead of allowing things to happen only if they can't be stopped by a regulation," Campbell wrote in a June 8, 2014, memo to Kitzhaber under the heading "Expected Outcomes from the Summit."

"Laws must be enacted to allow ecological enhancement to happen quickly and without costly, unnecessary permitting requirements."

Emails show Kitzhaber asked Campbell to add a name to the list of speakers: first lady Cylvia Hayes. "Cylvia has been working on the poverty issue for the past three years and might have something valuable to contribute," Kitzhaber wrote June 8, 2014.

Campbell revised his agenda but ignored Kitzhaber's request. Hayes wasn't happy.

"I'd like to actually make some comments during our day one wrap up session rather than just being introduced," she wrote to Kitzhaber on June 19, 2014. "I'd like to introduce the concept of economic reinvention and give a couple brief examples of rural communities that are doing it."



SPECIAL TREATMENT: Campbell wouldn't be able to operate his ranch as a resort if then-Gov. John Kitzhaber had not signed a 2011 bill intended solely to give Silvies Valley Ranch an exemption under land-use rules. Kitzhaber professed his dislike for such bills, and then signed it anyway to help Campbell, a campaign contributor.

Kitzhaber circulated Campbell's agenda. Whitman, Kitzhaber's natural resources adviser, voiced objections. Whitman had been in close touch with state regulatory agencies, and became concerned at what he learned about Silvies Valley Ranch.

The message from Whitman was particularly candid compared to other emails Kitzhaber received from his staff.

"[Silvies Valley Ranch has] carried out their work without obtaining, or even applying or attempting to obtain, federal or state permits," Whitman wrote to Kitzhaber on June 20, 2014. "I am told that on the order of 1,000 (yes, that's right, one thousand) small dams/water retention structures have been constructed without state removal-fill permits. State and federal agencies report that the work is blocking fish passage (redband), as well as killing riparian vegetation."

Kitzhaber wanted the state's concerns about Campbell's ranch resolved before the summit. "He wasn't comfortable attending if the regulatory matter wasn't resolved," Whitman says in an email to WW.

The Department of State Lands got Campbell to agree to a nine-page consent decree, which detailed the unpermitted in-water work he'd been doing at Silvies Valley Ranch for more than a decade.

Campbell tells WW he hadn't known he needed permits to do the work. He agreed by January 2016 to file a plan to fix any damage to waterways. Instead of facing civil penalties, Campbell agreed to make a payment of $10,000 to the Common School Fund.

A Department of State Lands spokeswoman declined to comment on the agreement.

Even as he and the state were finalizing the consent agreement, Campbell copied Kitzhaber on emails that illustrated his frustration with regulators, such as the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality. "Seriously, getting rid of two or three mid level egomaniacs there would increase economic growth in eastern Oregon by ten percent all by itself when folks realized you could actually get something approved," Campbell wrote on July 19, 2014.

Campbell's Frontier Summit proceeded as planned on June 22 and 23, 2014. Eighty invitees—including eight lawmakers, the heads of the Oregon Business Council and Oregon Business Association, and the first couple—dined on barbecued goat, roasted vegetables and whiskey. A rare thunderstorm ripped the desert sky, but Campbell had ordered a tent more than large enough to accommodate his guests.

Kitzhaber and Hayes flew in from the Hillsboro Airport on Campbell's private plane to kick off the event.

"She spoke a lot longer than John did," says one attendee who asked not to be identified. "He didn't say much at all."

Emails show Kitzhaber had to leave the two-day gathering early for a fundraiser in Los Angeles hosted by Dean Devlin, producer of the television series Leverage, which filmed in Portland from 2008 to 2012.

Kitzhaber's emails don't show much follow-up after the Frontier Summit, except for two messages: He asked a fundraising consultant how much money Campbell had given his re-election campaign so he could hit up another summit attendee, New Seasons Market co-founder Chuck Eggert, for the same amount. Eggert gave $2,500.

Campbell sent Kitzhaber a few messages of support later in 2014, especially as questions about Hayes' consulting work grew.

In December, Campbell sent Kitzhaber an email (one he tells WW he now regrets) in which he railed against state natural resources agencies and the Oregon Government Ethics Commission, which was beginning an inquiry into Kitzhaber and Hayes.

"They take microscopes to try to find some rule they can over interpret to make any good deed look bad," Campbell wrote Dec. 13, 2014. "I hope the ethics commission got themselves defunded in your budget—they are not helping Oregon be better, but rather taking us back to the Stone Age!"

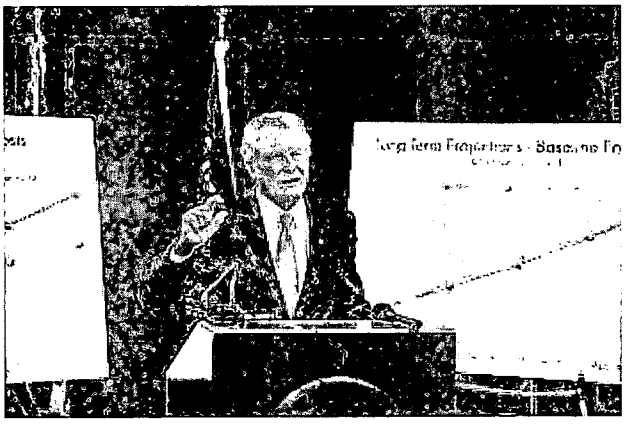
Emails Show Kitzhaber Sought To Hand-Pick Special Prosecutor

Former governor's attorney suggested friendly ex-judges.



Gov. John Kitzhaber

The first week of February marked an acceleration in the spiraling troubles that led former Gov. John Kitzhaber to resign.

A disastrous press conference led to the state's biggest daily calling for his resignation, and unanswered ethical and legal questions about first lady Cylvia Hayes only grew bigger. If Kitzhaber were to survive, he needed to change the political narrative—and fast.

Kitzhaber had earlier rejected calls for an independent prosecutor. But emails obtained by WW show that Kitzhaber, Hayes and the lawyers representing them before the Oregon Government Ethics Commission knew they would have to alter that stance.

The emails show that, rather than seek a truly independent investigation, Kitzhaber sought to pick the person leading the investigation.

Kitzhaber's troubles started on Oct. 8, 2014, with WW's report on possible conflicts of interest involving Hayes' work in the governor's office. As early as mid-October, Kitzhaber had rejected using his authority to ask Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate allegations that Hayes had used the governor's office to obtain $85,000 in private consulting contracts while also serving as an adviser to Kitzhaber. (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW Publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker).

In late January, Hayes disclosed to EO Media/Pamplin Media Group a previously unreported payment to her of $118,000 from a Washington, D.C. group. That brought her total take from private consulting contracts to more than $220,000.

In response to that news, Kitzhaber on Jan. 30 held a disastrous press conference, during which he failed to dispel or even address the allegations of influence peddling swirling around his office. He also failed to answer the most pressing factual question on reporters' minds—had Hayes filed an accurate tax return for 2012?

At the press conference, reporters again asked Kitzhaber whether he'd ask Rosenblum to appoint a special prosecutor. Kitzhaber again rejected the idea, saying the ethics commission proceeding was sufficient.

WW and The Oregonian on Feb. 2 filed a new round of public records requests. On Feb. 4, The Oregonian editorial board called for Kitzhaber's resignation. On that same day, WW reported that Rosenblum was failing to fulfill her legal duties as AG, which required her to open an investigation into allegations of public corruption.

That's when Kitzhaber's strategy regarding an independent investigation shifted.

Jim McDermott, one of Kitzhaber's attorneys, came up with names of eminent legal figures for Kitzhaber to suggest to Rosenblum to head an independent investigation—people who might be friendly to Kitzhaber.

On Feb. 6, McDermott sent an email to the governor's personal account suggesting the names.

> John:
> Following up on our meeting, here are the names of three retired Oregon Supreme Court Justices that I mention, along with their years of service:
> Paul DeMuniz (2001-2013)
> Mick Gillette (1986-2010)
> Sue Leeson (1998-2003)
> Bill Riggs is another retired justice, but I would not recommend that you suggest him
> Of the three, I lean toward Gillette. He's currently defending two long-time Stoel Rives partners, on appeal, who were found to have committed serious legal ethical conflict of interest violations by the trial panel. So Gillette has recent (and sympathetic) experience with clients seeking to navigate ethical issues.

On that same day, Kitzhaber asked for a face-to-face meeting with Rosenblum.

Emails show that Rosenblum rejected that overture. At 4:57 pm on Feb. 6, Rosenblum's top lieutenant, Fred Boss, wrote an email to Kitzhaber's general counsel, Liani Reeves.

"I thought it would be useful to confirm in writing our discussion of earlier today," Boss wrote to Reeves. "You had indicated that the governor wishes to speak to the Attorney General, and asked whether she was available. Given the nature of the allegations currently surrounding Governor Kitzhaber and Cylvia Hayes, the Attorney General believes it would be inappropriate for the two of them to speak without others present. And under no circumstances will the Attorney General discuss with Governor Kitzhaber allegations about Ms. Hayes or the Governor. Although regrettable, I am sure you understand why we feel that this decision is necessary."

Reeves responded later that night.

"Thank you for your email," she wrote to Boss at 9:10 pm on Feb. 6. "The Governor completely understands the Attorney General's position and only wanted to tell her that he supports an independent review."

Kitzhaber's gesture was too little, too late.

On Feb. 9, Kitzhaber sent the Rosenblum a letter seeking a "factual review" of the allegations against him and Hayes—far less than a full investigation.

But after months of sitting on her hands, Rosenblum announced that same morning that she had in fact already opened an investigation into the allegations against Kitzhaber and Hayes.

Feb. 13 was the day Kitzhaber announced his resignation and the day the U.S. Department of Justice served subpoenas on Kitzhaber, Hayes and 11 state agencies.

The ethics commission and Oregon DOJ halted their investigations, and Kitzhaber lost all hope of influencing the process.

Emails Show Kitzhaber Was Ambivalent About Seeking Re-Election For a Fourth Term as Governor

"Pretty much burned out right now," Kitzhaber wrote in late 2013, not long before announcing he would run again.

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber's four-decade political career ended abruptly last month, just 37 days after he was sworn in for a record-setting fourth term.

But before seeking re-election, Kitzhaber came close to deciding against running for re-election, according to his emails that his office later sought to have deleted from state servers.

On July 12, 2013, Kitzhaber wrote to Nick Hanauer, a Seattle venture capitalist, seeking his thoughts on a paper Kitzhaber had written about economic development in Oregon. He also needed some advice.

"I am in the process of trying to decide whether to run again next year and wondered if you would be willing to give me some insight on an issue that is central to my decision," Kitzhaber wrote. "I am 66 and don't want to spend the next four years simply 'running the state if you will."

In October 2013, Kitzhaber called the Legislature into special session. That session may have been the highpoint of his third term, but it took a big toll on him.

Kitzhaber's goal during that short session was to increase the cuts to the Public Employees Retirement System lawmakers had made in the regular 2013 session. Through some adroit negotiations, Kitzhaber convinced legislators to expand those cuts from $800 million to about $5 billion. The special session highlighted Kitzhaber's independence: he forced the public employee unions who had funded his 2010 campaign to swallow bitter medicine for the benefit of local and state government services.

It also left Kitzhaber wondering if he wanted to go on being governor.

"Pretty much burned out right now," Kitzhaber wrote to his then-chief of staff, Curtis Robinhold on Oct. 10, 2013, eight days after the session ended. "It is a remarkable and contradictory mosaic of a multi-level and incredibly deep fatigue; the yearning for a less demanding and complicated life where I spend as much time rafting rivers as I do trying to save them."

Other emails show him and Robinhold communicating about a staff retreat planned for later that month.

"I would like to talk with you about how we discussed the uncertainty about your running again," Robinhold wrote to Kitzhaber on Oct. 10, 2013. "My proposal is that I open with the assertion that the day and a half will be spent on the assumption that you run again, because if you are not running again most of what we do in the next day and a half will not be too important."

An issue of contention for Robinhold and other senior staff members was the role that first lady Cylvia Hayes might play in a fourth Kitzhaber term. As WW has reported previously, the staff wanted her less involved in the office, while Hayes and Kitzhaber wanted the opposite.

Robinhold alluded to the conflict in his email about the staff gathering. "I would also like to talk with you about the situation with Cylvia, although I think that the retreat is not a good place to have that conversation," he wrote to Kitzhaber. "However, I think it would help me with the group if I knew what you and Cylvia were thinking."

Even after the Oct. 26 retreat, Kitzhaber still had not decided what he would do. "Cylvia and I may try to get away for a few days the weekend of November 1 to make a final decision about another term," Kitzhaber wrote in an email to his assistant, Jan Murdock, on Oct. 21, 2013.

Ultimately, of course, he and Hayes decided he would seek a fourth term.

Kitzhaber and Hayes selected Earl Boyles Elementary in the David Douglas School District in East Portland for the Dec. 3, 2013 kickoff of his final campaign. They chose the school in part because of its success in educating low-income students. Hayes was supposed to introduce Kitzhaber after saying a few words about her own work.

"Earl Boyles also represents an important foundation for the poverty-reduction and anti-hunger work I have been doing and will continue as Oregon's First Lady," read the talking points prepared for Hayes, according to a Dec. 1, 2013 email from campaign consultant Mark Wiener to Kitzhaber and Hayes. "The best way for children to break the cycle of poverty is to receive a supportive education, beginning as early as possible."

Hayes' introduction of Kitzhaber would set the tone for the higher profile they both expected her to have in his final term as governor.

But Hayes arrived late at the school and missed her opportunity to speak.

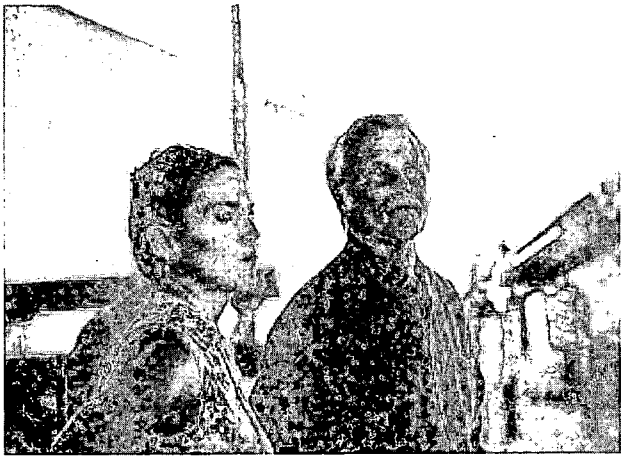
Emails Show How Kitzhaber and Hayes Sought to Block Release of Her Emails

Lawyer on Hayes' emails: "Not 'smoking guns' but they are clearly not helpful."



Cylvia Hayes and former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber is seeking to block federal criminal investigators from getting access to personal emails he stored on state computers. The Oregonian broke that news last week, noting Kitzhaber has succeeded in delaying by nearly a week the state's response to a federal criminal subpoena deadline of March 10.

Kitzhaber's desire to keep his emails private is part of a pattern. Former first lady Cylvia Hayes went to state court last month to block release of her emails, after Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum ordered them released to The Oregonian.

The emails Kitzhaber wants to keep out of investigators hands detail reasons why Hayes wants to keep her emails secret.

Kitzhaber's emails, obtained by WW last month, show Kitzhaber and Hayes' lawyers wanted to maintain the pretense Hayes was not really a public official, and to blunt legal jeopardy and negative press that could result from the release of her emails.

The Kitzhaber emails—which Kitzhaber's staff sought to delete from state servers on Feb. 5—also show the attorneys believe that, while Hayes' emails do not contain a smoking gun, they would not help her case, especially in the light of a pending criminal investigation.

The emails show that as early as Nov. 2, 2014, two days before his re-election, Kitzhaber had already lawyered up.

He and Hayes were concerned about allegations, first reported by WW in October, of conflicts of interest and influence peddling relating to $85,000 in private consulting contracts Hayes landed while serving as first lady and an adviser to Kitzhaber. That story prompted complaints to the Oregon Government Ethics Commission that the first couple had violated ethics rules.

Kitzhaber hired Steve Janik, a founder of the Ball Janik law firm, and the firm's chairman, Jim McDermott, to represent him and Hayes before the ethics commission.

In late November, Janik was working on a strategy to keep Hayes' emails private.

"Ms. Hayes, as a result of her personal relationship with Governor Kitzhaber, did not perform 'governmental functions' or 'services on behalf of the government.' She was never a part of state government," Janik wrote to Kitzhaber and Hayes on Nov. 25, 2014.

It would be a tough legal argument to win. As WW first reported in December, Hayes planned to claim that state ethics laws didn't apply to her, and therefore the ethics commission had no jurisdiction.

But that was a stretch: She had frequently represented the state and the governor and she been reimbursed by the state after traveling for official meetings at taxpayer expense. Kitzhaber's general counsel, Liani Reeves, had declared Hayes to meet the definition of public official.

In early January, Kitzhaber and Hayes maintained they had done nothing wrong but were urging their attorney to look to settle quickly with the ethics commission.

They and their attorneys discussed whether releasing Hayes' emails to the ethics commission and the press was advisable. Doing so could undercut the argument she was a public official.

"Cylvia: You might want to think about whether releasing your personal emails makes sense. It does not from a legal defense point of view. I think it is a close call from a pr/political point of view," Janik wrote to Hayes and Kitzhaber on Jan. 13, 2015. "I would not do it, but it is up to you and John."

McDermott took a similar position.

"I also worry that releasing Cylvia's personal emails will add significantly to the volume of previously-released and to-be-released public records, thereby overloading the OGEC, therefore making it difficult to negotiate a stipulated final order before March 13," McDermott wrote to Hayes and Kitzhaber on Jan. 13.

The specter of a criminal investigation was also present. WW had a week earlier reported the FBI had opened an investigation into Hayes.

That broadened Kitzhaber and Hayes' concerns about the legal risks the couple faced.

"Last week I discussed with Cylvia that we should not produce her personal emails in response to a public records request, for several reasons including the fact that her personal emails are not public records, even if they discuss state matters," Janik wrote on Jan. 20, 2014.

"We do not believe that you should produce them to the OGEC or to the press. We have no way of knowing if there is any criminal investigation going on. However, in order to protect you we need to assume that an investigation is or will occur. If there is such an investigation, those emails will be closely scrutinized and can be misinterpreted. That is not a good idea. We have also found a couple of emails that are not helpful. They are not 'smoking guns' but they are clearly not helpful."

On Jan. 29, The Oregonian filed a petition with AG Rosenblum and the Oregon Department of Justice, seeking the agency to compel Hayes to produce her emails. (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker.) On Feb. 12, DOJ found that contrary to her attorney's argument, she had acted in a public capacity and therefore her emails are public records and should be released to The Oregonian. Hayes then went to Marion County Court to fight that ruling.

Hayes' appeal is pending. The ethics commission proceeding has been halted in lieu of a federal criminal investigation—the same one Kitzhaber's lawyer is now seeking to delay.

Emails Show Ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber Made Only One Paid Speech While In Office

Kitzhaber had asked ethics commission's permission to earn extra money.

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

In December 2012, then-Gov. John Kitzhaber took the extraordinary step of asking the Oregon Government Ethics Commission if could have permission to make paid speeches.

It was a surprising request for a public servant who'd prided himself on high ethical standards. Taking money for speeches could give at least the appearance that Kitzhaber was trading on his position as governor.

In January 2013, the ethics commission approved his request to make private speeches but placed strict conditions on that approval. Kitzhaber could not get paid to speak in Oregon, he could not use his title or any public resources including staff time, computers or supplies to prepare his speeches and he had to book his speeches through an agency, rather than directly.

Now, emails that Kitzhaber's office sought to delete from state servers on Feb. 5 reveal what Kitzhaber did with that blessing.

The emails show last year Kitzhaber agreed to be paid $20,000 to the World Health Care Congress at a conference in Maryland. (Emails show Kitzhaber's booking agent took 25 percent of the fee as commission.) The event sponsors also provided first-class airfare, a hotel room and meals with expenses capped at $4,500.

The emails are among the thousands that Kitzhaber's assistant, Jan Murdock, asked state officials to remove from state servers. The emails were subject to records requests by WW and The Oregonian. Kitzhaber has claimed the emails, from personal accounts, were private. WW's reporting has show Kitzhaber was using his personal email to do state business, making them public records.

After he finished his first two terms as governor in 2003, Kitzhaber supported himself in part by making speeches around the country about healthcare reform. The former emergency room doctor had built a national reputation while a lawmaker and governor as one the architects of the Oregon Health Plan, which aimed to spend public healthcare dollars more efficiently.

When Kitzhaber returned to the governor's office in 2010, he was short of money. His salary was less than $100,000. That's not peanuts but he was twice-divorced, had a mortgage on his primary residence and as The Oregonian has pointed out, had alimony and child-support payments to make and would soon begin paying for his son's college education.

The emails show another group tried to hire Kitzhaber. In July 2013, Bill Leigh, the agent whose speakers' bureau represented Kitzhaber, wrote to the governor with an opportunity.

"Mid-Atlantic Permanente is interested. Can you speak for them, as they are a Kaiser subsidiary—one which does not work in Oregon," Leigh wrote to Kitzhaber on July 2, 2013. "If so, would they be prohibited from using [the title of] Governor in their publicity?"

Kitzhaber ran that request by Liani Reeves, his general counsel.

"Liani says groups that invite you to speak . . . should not be marketing you as 'Governor,'" Kitzhaber's assistant, Murdock, told him via email on July 3, 2013.

That speech never happened.

Patricia McCaig Bills Former Gov. John Kitzhaber's Campaign for January Work

Emails show adviser helped Kitzhaber prep for disastrous Jan. 30 press conference

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber - Steven Lane

Patricia McCaig, a political consultant for former Gov. John Kitzhaber, filed an $8,500 invoice for payment from Kitzhaber's campaign fund yesterday.

Emails between McCaig and Kitzhaber during his last month in office show some of the work for which McCaig is now seeking payment. Those emails are among the thousands that Kitzhaber sought on Feb. 5 to have deleted from state servers.

In particular, McCaig helped prepare Kitzhaber for what turned out to be his final press conference on Jan. 30 before announcing he would resign Feb. 18. McCaig, Kitzhaber's most trusted political adviser, scripted a press conference aimed at helping Kitzhaber by focusing attention on his removing first lady Cylvia Hayes from any role in his administration.

But Kitzhaber's unwillingness to answer questions about the influence peddling allegations enveloping his office instead made the event a debacle.

A week earlier in preparation for press questions, Kitzhaber emailed McCaig a history of his involvement with the Genuine Progress Indicator, an alternative measure of economic output that Demos, a New York advocacy group, paid Hayes to promote in 2013.

In the emails, McCaig and Kitzhaber joked about Kitzhaber's preparation for the press conference and his need to develop answers that reporters would almost certainly ask about GPI. The subject line in Kitzhaber's email to McCaig when he emailed the GPI information was "pre-whiskey reading."

On Jan. 26 at 7:32 pm, Kitzhaber wrote to McCaig, "It is a good thing us pirates like our Grog ... of which I have (had) much."

"Thank goodness for Grog," McCaig wrote back eight minutes later. "Go to bed. Ok, wait until 8:00 and THEN GO TO BED."

Over the next couple of days, McCaig sent Kitzhaber two scripts for the Jan. 30 press conference in Portland. She walked him through likely questions about GPI, Hayes' contracts and whether Hayes had paid taxes on $118,000 in consulting fees she'd received in 2011 and 2012.

McCaig copied Kitzhaber's then chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, his legislative director Dmitri Palmateer and his press secretary, Amy Wojcicki, on the emails.

The second draft of the press conference script was remarkably detailed, including guidance for Kitzhaber's body language—McCaig inserted directions for a "deep breath" before Kitzhaber was supposed to say that Hayes would have no further role in his administration.

"I have made a decision and Cylvia agrees that she will have no role in my administration going forward," was the line that McCaig scripted for Kitzhaber to say.

McCaig also suggested the appropriate "tone" for Kitzhaber to take: "Direct, forthright, recognizing the need for answers, feisty when appropriate."

At the press conference, Kitzhaber did provide reporters with a lengthy description of his historical interest in the GPI. However, he chose not to answer any substantive questions and left the podium, after 20 minutes, even less time than McCaig had recommended in her script.

The press conference, and the widespread perception that Kitzhaber was evasive, proved to be a major turning point on the path to his Feb. 18 resignation.

Not everybody saw it that way, however.

On Jan. 31, Jim McDermott, a lawyer with the Ball Janik firm who represents Kitzhaber and Hayes in front of the Oregon Government Ethics Commission, emailed Kitzhaber about legal strategy regarding the Ethics Commission investigation. The day before, Kitzhaber had repeatedly deferred reporters' questions to the Ethics Commission. Later, evidence surfaced that Kitzhaber and his lawyers were simultaneously attempting to thwart an Ethics Commission investigation, arguing it had no jurisdiction over Hayes.

McDermott mentioned the press conference at the end of his email.

"For what it's worth," McDermott wrote, "we [he and his partner Steve Janik] thought you handled some tough press questions very adroitly."

Kitzhaber's campaign account, from which McCaig's is requesting payment of $8,500, currently holds just over $64,000.

Kitzhaber's Secret Weapon

Newly obtained emails show ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber put his top political consultant in charge of Cover Oregon.

GOVERNMENT TAKEOVER: "I do not think the governor's office has the staff capacity on the Cover Oregon piece," Kitzhaber re-election campaign adviser Patricia McCaig wrote the governor on Feb. 8, 2014. She then proposed taking control of the Cover Oregon problem herself. - IMAGE: Vivian Johnson

A year ago, it looked as if then-Gov John Kitzhaber's biggest headache was Cover Oregon, the $305 million health care website that was pitched as a national model but became a national laughingstock.

Kitzhaber, a Democrat facing re-election, had built a reputation as a health care reformer. But his failure to make Cover Oregon work threatened his legacy.

In public, Kitzhaber assured Oregonians he was working diligently with state officials to find a solution for the website's woeful performance.

In private, however, Kitzhaber handed oversight of the Cover Oregon mess to a secretive campaign consultant who liked to call herself the Princess of Darkness.

By her own admission, Patricia McCaig knew virtually nothing about health care reform or the reasons Cover Oregon had crashed. Her primary mission was not to save a beleaguered state program but to get Kitzhaber re-elected.

Emails that Kitzhaber's office tried to delete from state computers show McCaig was effectively in charge of all decision making for Cover Oregon beginning in February 2014.

Records show McCaig oversaw the decision to shut down Cover Oregon rather than work with the state's contractor, Oracle Corp., to fix it. McCaig—rather than the governor or state lawyers—drove the decision to sue Oracle. And McCaig routinely directed senior government employees and staff in the governor's office.

The records also show McCaig and other advisers based many of their moves on polling and how voters' perceptions of Cover Oregon might affect Kitzhaber's hopes for re-election.

Kitzhaber didn't respond to questions for this story.

McCaig declined to be interviewed, but in an emailed statement to WW, she said Kitzhaber turned to her because of her experience as a governor's chief of staff and an elected official. (She worked for former Gov. Barbara Roberts and served on the Metro Council for one term in the 1990s.)

She says she did nothing wrong.

"The governor was forced to respond to the 'debacle' of Oracle's failure to deliver a working website for Cover Oregon by using the best tools and people at his disposal," she says. "Oracle's contention that politics drove the failure of Cover Oregon could not be further from the truth."

But observers say Kitzhaber placing the state's response to Cover Oregon in the hands of his chief political adviser is problematic.

"If they made decisions based on Kitzhaber's personal political interests rather than what was best for taxpayers, that's not right," says David Friedman, an associate professor at the Willamette University College of Law. "It just looks bad."

WW first reported in November that Kitzhaber relied on campaign consultants to help direct his response to Cover Oregon ("Blurred Lines," WW, Nov. 12, 2014). The newly obtained emails provide a far more detailed account of that effort.

State ethics and elections laws require a separation between political activity and official decisions. Congress, which paid for the Cover Oregon project, now wants to know where taxpayer dollars went and whether Kitzhaber put his re-election interests ahead of the public interest.

The emails between Kitzhaber and McCaig about Cover Oregon are among those Kitzhaber sought to have removed from state servers Feb. 5, claiming they contained personal communications. But Kitzhaber's personal email accounts also relate to public business and are subject to disclosure under Oregon's public records law. Federal investigators have requested the emails as part of a criminal subpoena.

On Feb. 13, investigators for the U.S. House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform wrote to Kitzhaber demanding all documents relating to his campaign staff's involvement with Cover Oregon, adding that decisions "may have been based on politics, not policy and campaign advisors working on your re-election campaign may have coordinated the state's response to the Cover Oregon roll-out."

Kitzhaber resigned Feb. 18 amid state and federal criminal investigations into allegations of influence peddling involving himself and former first lady Cylvia Hayes. The intensified congressional scrutiny could only add to his legal woes.

POWER SWITCH: Kitzhaber told McCaig he was pleased she was taking control of the Cover Oregon issue. "How did I get so lucky to be on your team?" he wrote her on Feb. 8, 2014.

IMAGE: WW Staff

McCaig has played a unique role in Kitzhaber's career.

She ran his successful 2010 election campaign. Soon after he took office, Kitzhaber made her his top adviser on the Columbia River Crossing, the proposed $3 billion highway project connecting Portland and Vancouver, Wash. McCaig then worked for the CRC's top contractor, David Evans & Associates ("The Woman Behind the Bridge," WW, Feb. 27, 2013). McCaig eventually collected $553,000 for her work on the CRC, which was never built.

Cover Oregon was another big Kitzhaber initiative. The website was supposed to allow Oregonians to purchase health insurance online.

But the project missed its "go-live" deadline Oct. 1, 2013 and never worked properly. By early 2014, Kitzhaber was taking a political beating over the failure from The Oregonian, which reported in detail his failure to oversee the project.

In early February 2014, McCaig emailed Kitzhaber, offering to take over damage control for Cover Oregon.

"I'd also like to request any publicly available information on the independent review—it's charge timeline, etc," McCaig wrote to Kitzhaber Feb. 6, 2014. "Let me know if you'd rather I let it all alone."

"No not at all," Kitzhaber responded that same day. "I like it when you don't leave things alone (like my last campaign for example)."

McCaig told Kitzhaber his current approach was failing. She proposed that his chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, blend his official duties with a campaign-led effort on Cover Oregon.

"We need more accountability and follow-thru from the campaign and some specific, intensive management of the Cover Oregon issues. I do not think the governor's office has the staff capacity on the Cover Oregon piece," McCaig wrote Feb. 8. "How about? Mike chairs a joint campaign and key staff meeting weekly starting ASAP. I staff him (quietly, privately)."

On Feb. 8, McCaig told Kitzhaber that Tim Raphael, a lobbyist and former Kitzhaber spokesman, would direct the governor's staff on how to handle communications about Cover Oregon. Kitzhaber's campaign would put Raphael on its payroll.

"To do that [Raphael] would identify what Mike [Bonetto] and [Kitzhaber's state spokeswoman] Nkenge [Harmon Johnson] need to be managing from the gov's office, bridging the information gap with the campaign, and most importantly identifying and teeing up the critical and emerging Cover Oregon issues for the combined team so we can develop a plan and be more prepared both at the state level and the campaign," McCaig wrote.

"You have know idea how much better this makes me feel," Kitzhaber wrote her back the same day. "You truly are a Princess. How did I get so lucky to be on your team?"

"Because you are you and you are governor of the great state of Oregon," McCaig responded. "And I believe."

McCaig told Kitzhaber she was being careful not to create a record of her actions—"being mindful of not putting too much on paper," she wrote in a Feb. 16, 2014, email.

She also acknowledged, in preparing a Cover Oregon battle plan, that she knew almost nothing about the issue. "I have no pride of authorship, and barely know enough about the topic to write the goals," she wrote in the same email.

By March 2014, emails show, McCaig was in full control of Cover Oregon. She routinely advocated keeping key details concealed from the public. For example, when the state was preparing responses to the U.S. Government Accountability Office, the investigative arm of Congress, McCaig argued against sharing information with Oregon Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum.

"Why is the AG reviewing?" McCaig wrote in a March 20 email to Kitzhaber and Bonetto. "Sending it to the AG could produce questions and allow speculation there is criminal behavior. It escalates the concern, gives the press another place to keep/promote a negative narrative, and expands external reviews." (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker.)

Kitzhaber continually expressed his appreciation for McCaig's help.

"HAPPY BIRTHDAY PRINCESS!!!" he wrote her March 30, 2014. "Your Faithful Friend and Fan. I am glad you are in my Life."

In April, Cover Oregon's board of directors was supposed to decide whether it should abandon the state's Oracle-built system and switch over to the federal government's health insurance exchange.

But records show McCaig had already made the call. In an email dated April 9, 2014, McCaig presented Kitzhaber with a memo titled "MANAGING/STAGING THE DECISION." She laid out an eight-step process that would provide the illusion of deliberation. "Regardless, the Cover Oregon Board would hear and accept the federal exchange recommendation," McCaig wrote.

The emails also show McCaig orchestrated the state's legal strategy against Oracle. Polling showed voters blamed the governor for Cover Oregon's failure. McCaig wanted Kitzhaber to demand money back from Oracle.

"We need to start the discussion from a different place," McCaig wrote to Kitzhaber on April 7, 2014. "Mike [Bonetto] and I talked offline about Oracle—we're leaning, regardless of which option, of announcing we're going 'after' them."

McCaig added in a May 19, 2014, email to Kitzhaber: "We need to show the taxpayers that we are going after the money. It doesn't really matter if it is $200 million or $40 million, or how many people enrolled, until we make it clear that we're going after the money."

On May 27, 2014, McCaig drafted a letter for Kitzhaber to send to Rosenblum: "Dear Attorney General Rosenblum I am writing today to ask you to immediately initiate legal action to recover payments and other damages from Oracle."

The next day, in an email, McCaig told Bonetto and the governor's general counsel, Liani Reeves, to coordinate with Rosenblum's office.

Then, success: Politico, an influential Washington, D.C., news website, highlighted the looming lawsuit. "Headlines coming in are all good! Politico is great," McCaig wrote to Kitzhaber on May 29. "We've got another first.... First in the country to sue Oracle!"

KGW TV reported that day a poll showing Kitzhaber leading his Republican opponent for governor, state Rep. Dennis Richardson, by 15 percentage points.

"If true this may require an extra round of whiskey," Kitzhaber wrote McCaig on May 29. 2014.

"If true, two extra rounds," she replied.

By mid-June, McCaig told Kitzhaber their Cover Oregon media strategy was working.

"Quite a week," she wrote to him on June 13, "it wasn't all about Cover Oregon. (FYI—no cameras at [Cover Oregon] board meeting and only 2 reporters, that's great progress)."

Records show dozens of emails between Kitzhaber and McCaig on Cover Oregon. During this time, McCaig wasn't billing Kitzhaber's campaign. That enabled Kitzhaber not to disclose her work on his campaign finance reports, as required by law.

McCaig says her work was properly documented. "All of my state-related work is a public record, and my campaign work has been appropriately reported," she says.

In August 2014, WW reported that McCaig was effectively running Kitzhaber's re-election campaign and that Kitzhaber was not reporting her contributions. On Sept. 12, Kitzhaber emailed McCaig from the Pendleton Round-Up. He joked about that lack of transparency.

"No cheering crowds (but, then again, only one hiss), more horse shit that you can possibly imagine, highly efficient [fundraising] call time," Kitzhaber wrote. "I can pay you now... really."

Claim: State data center managers 'in trouble' for talking to Kitzhaber-Hayes investigators

Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive By Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive

Email the author | Follow on Twitter

on February 26, 2015 at 2:53 PM, updated February 26, 2015 at 7:08 PM

State data center managers recently placed on leave over unauthorized efforts to preserve evidence found themselves "in trouble" for contacting federal prosecutors scrutinizing former Gov. John Kitzhaber and his fiancée, Cylvia Hayes, a state email obtained by The Oregonian/Oregonlive reveals.

The Feb. 20 email by Darin Rand, a mid-level manager at the data center, provides a blow-by blow view from inside the facility used to warehouse emails that has become central to the reported leak of Kitzhaber's private emails.

It shows a rift between managers over how best to respond to a high-pressure legal and political situation.

The data center is now the focus of an Oregon State Police criminal investigation of the leak. The investigation was requested by state Chief Operating Officer Michael Jordan. He oversees the data center as director of the state Department of Administrative Services. The leak occurred after a Kitzhaber staffer attempted to get state employees to delete thousands of emails.

Rand sent his email shortly before Jordan placed the data center's top two managers, Michael Rodgers and Marshall Wells, on administrative leave. Jordan linked their leave to an effort to secure computers and phones of governor's office employees who had worked for Kitzhaber.

DAS officials said Wells' move could have damaged evidence. Jordan said his intent was to preserve that potential evidence.

Rand indicates Wells was already in hot water for talking to federal prosecutors at the U.S. Attorney's Office, which is taking part in the Kitzhaber investigation. Rand wrote that he was told he was in trouble for talking to the Oregon Department of Justice about the federal request for state documents.

Asked about the email, Jordan said Wells' contact with the federal prosecutors is part of the personnel investigation.

"There are questions about many of the statements that have been made," said agency spokesman Matt Shelby. "That's one of the things that our (personnel) investigation is looking at."

Rand's email, sent to a human resources manager with the state Department of Administrative Services, also undermines an early claim by the Kitzhaber administration that his personal emails were forwarded to and stored by DAS inadvertently.

Rand writes that when Kitzhaber was returned to office in 2011, the governor's personal emails were forwarded to the state "at the direction of the governor or the governor's staff."

Janet Hoffman, Kitzhaber's criminal defense attorney, has maintained that the emails were retained by mistake. Because of that and because some were attorney-client communications, she has insisted that they should not be reviewed by state officials.

Rand said he suspected the emails were not leaked by data center employees but by either Jordan or a Kitzhaber staffer given a set of the emails. Filled with skepticism and suspicions, Rand's email also explains why data center staffers went to the governor's office Feb. 19 and Feb. 20 to switch out and take control of certain computers and cell phones.

Shelby said the move grew out of a disagreement over how to secure evidence. Jordan and Chief Information Officer Alex Pettit thought it best to leave computers in place.

Rand wrote that on Feb. 20, Jordan and Pettit went to the governor's office to stop a tech staffer from taking possession of the remaining phones and computers.

Jordan denied that, saying that instead he directed the staffer to finish what he was doing.

"Everything we are doing has to do with the integrity of those records that are in our custody," he said.

Similarly, Rand wrote that Rodgers and the rest of data center staff refused to comply with an instruction by Shelby on Feb. 18 to delete copies of the Kitzhaber emails. Shelby said the originals were maintained, and he intended to limit the risk that other emails would be leaked.

Rand's email said he and colleagues were suspicious of Jordan because of what they saw as a lack of firm action to rebuff the effort out of Kitzhaber's office to get the emails deleted.

A Kitzhaber spokeswoman said the intent was not to destroy public records, but to secure them and the evaluate which were personal and not subject to disclosure.

Rodgers and data center staff, however, felt the move could have resulted in the improper destruction of records. Kitzhaber and his staff would effectively have called the shots on which emails were considered personal, allowing them to be destroyed.

Jordan said he supported ignoring the deletion request when he heard about it the next day.

Rand's email also said an OSP detective looking for the email leaker told him the investigation was "purely political."

What He Left Behind

Emails ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber's office sought to destroy reveal tensions over power, money and former First Lady Cylvia Hayes.

Ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber resigned last week amid allegations his fiancee, former first lady of Oregon Cylvia Hayes, improperly used her access to him to influence state policy while benefiting financially.

From 2011 to 2013, Hayes collected more than $220,000 from private consulting contracts she landed while working as an adviser to Kitzhaber. Her dealings have sparked state and federal criminal investigations ("First Lady Inc.", WW, Oct. 8, 2014).

But before Kitzhaber's resignation and the investigations, Hayes had even grander plans for herself—in terms of influence and money—for the governor's final term in office.

Newly obtained emails reveal Hayes told Kitzhaber in late 2013 that she wanted to further leverage her access to his office into "lucrative work," including an official state position, paid speaking appearances and book contracts.

The first lady proposed her expansive plans to Kitzhaber, even as the governor's staff searched for ways to narrow Hayes' official role and make sure she wasn't violating state ethics laws.

Hayes' big plans and the staff's concerns are contained in emails that are among thousands of communications Kitzhaber's office sought on Feb. 5 to have destroyed. (See here for an analysis of this action.) Neither Kitzhaber nor Hayes agreed to be interviewed for this story.

The emails obtained by WW provide an extraordinary window into Kitzhaber's administration and the complexities Hayes' ambitions presented.

The emails show that Kitzhaber's staff was especially alarmed by Hayes' role in the governor's office after she signed at least $85,000 worth of private consulting contracts with three nonprofit advocacy groups in 2013.

The contracts prompted Kitzhaber's then-chief of staff Curtis Robinhold in July and August of that year to get Hayes to sign conflict-of-interest forms that required her to abide by state ethics laws.

Those guidelines would have forced Hayes to change some of the ways she conducted her private business, including prohibiting her from using the title "first lady" when doing private work, and from holding client meetings at Mahonia Hall, the governor's mansion.

Hayes pushed back. As WW has previously reported, Hayes wouldn't go along with those guidelines until they were rewritten to allow her to continue operating as she had been.

The newly obtained emails show that, with Kitzhaber preparing for a 2014 re-election campaign, Robinhold suggested some ways to eliminate Hayes' conflicts of interests without depriving her of income.

In a Sept. 26, 2013, memo to Hayes and Kitzhaber, Robinhold outlined six options that would allow Hayes to continue working on issues she cared about while eliminating outside contracts and the potential conflicts of interest they presented.

The possibilities included finding her a job at a university, such as Portland State, letting her work for a state agency, hiring her to work for the Kitzhaber re-election campaign or having the state hire Hayes as a consultant.

Robinhold said in his email the goal was a position for Hayes that "maintains clear lines of authority in the Governor's Office and avoids confusion about Cylvia's supervisory and staff management responsibilities."

The ideal situation, Robinhold wrote, "avoids giving Cylvia responsibility for broad, overarching policy issues that cross over multiple policy advisors and state agencies" and "minimizes confusion around who Cylvia is speaking for."

It's not clear how Kitzhaber responded to the memo. Robinhold declined to be interviewed by WW.

Robinhold's memo and other emails make it clear that Kitzhaber's staff wanted Hayes out of the governor's office.

That's not what Hayes wanted.

The first lady was busy preparing her own proposal—one that embedded her more deeply in the governor's office and put her in a position to make more money.

On Nov. 29, 2013, she sent a memo to Kitzhaber titled "Cylvia Game Plan: Dec. 2013-Dec. 2018."

Hayes summarized her goal at the top: "Intended Outcome: Build my policy and professional credibility and desirability so that I land lucrative work making big positive impacts at end of term."

On the top of Hayes' list: getting more publicity for her work. Or, as she put it in the memo to Kitzhaber: "Claim the work that is mine."

That work included her role as "originator and one of the key authors of the Ten Year Energy Plan." She wanted to be recognized for the environmental and economic consulting work she had done for her private clients, which dovetailed with her state policy interests.

FORMER GOV. JOHN KITZHABER

The first lady wanted Kitzhaber to lend the weight of his office to her accomplishments: "Have John develop specific message about my substantive roles."

Hayes' work plan was at times contradictory. She said she wanted to end her existing consulting contracts and "go to full-time volunteer status." In the next line, however, Hayes wrote that she intended to "explore opportunities for income from non-policy, non-Oregon, non-time-consuming work."

After the campaign, Hayes expected Kitzhaber to formally name her to a staff position that she could leverage financially.

Here's how she put it:

"Jan. 2015: Get appointed to official policy positions. Feb. 2015–June 2017: Work the policy areas hard. Develop paid speaking and outside Oregon income opportunities. Speak a lot. Get published a lot. Set foundation for book/s – me, John, John and me (outline, generate interest, sample chapters).

"June 2017–Jan. 2018: Transition Phase: Line up next big work and significant income. Write book (maybe get grant to do it). Move out of Mahonia."

The emails the governor's office sought to destroy also show the relationship between Kitzhaber's personal finances and Hayes' income.

The first lady's agreement to let her outside contracts lapse in early 2014 had financial consequences for the governor.

"Hey dear, well, I just paid bills with my own money for the last time in our current plan," Hayes wrote Kitzhaber on March 14, 2014. "Attached is my best estimated monthly and annual expenses."

Those expenses came to about $62,000 a year—and they would now be the governor's responsibility. Emails show Kitzhaber began making direct monthly deposits into Hayes' bank account so she could pay her bills.

There's been debate about exactly how Kitzhaber's and Hayes' finances intermingled. That's an important question because the answer sheds light on whether the governor benefited from Hayes' consulting work.

For four years, Kitzhaber stated on state financial disclosure forms that Hayes was a member of his household, which would suggest their finances were linked. But at a Jan. 30, 2015, press conference, the governor suddenly said he wasn't sure that was the case.

Kitzhaber's decision to begin monthly deposits into Hayes' account when her contract work lapsed, however, shows money she had been earning from consulting was money the governor didn't have to spend. Therefore, it appears that Kitzhaber benefited from her contracts.

Kitzhaber's shifting position on whether Hayes was a member of his household was part of a legal strategy devised by lawyers hired to defend the governor and the first lady against complaints filed with the Oregon Government Ethics Commission.

Kitzhaber and Hayes wanted to establish that neither was dependent on the other for money—a strategy intended to knock down the assertion that Kitzhaber benefited from Hayes' contracts.

The strategy is spelled out in an email exchange between the governor and Steve Janik, a Portland lawyer representing Kitzhaber and Hayes before the ethics commission.

"As I understand it," Kitzhaber wrote to Janik on Dec. 22, 2014, "we will make the case that: (1) Cylvia is not a public official, and (2) that she is not a member of my household — and therefore that the OGEC has no jurisdiction in the matter and that the complaints should be dismissed."

Janik agreed. "We will argue," the attorney wrote back that same day, "that because Cylvia is not a member of your household, her activities pursuing private income cannot be attributed to you."

But the email exchange reveals something else: Despite the defense they were mounting, the governor and first lady had no interest in a long fight with the ethics commission.

"We will convey that we are willing to take this all the way and have a strong case for prevailing," Kitzhaber wrote to Janik on Dec. 22. "But the end game is not actually to have the complaints dismissed but rather to negotiate a stipulated settlement agreement in which we might acknowledge some minor mistakes we may have made and have the matter resolved at the March [2015] meeting. Do I have that right?"

Janik's answer: "Your summary of the strategy is correct."

Hit the Delete Button

The governor's office's explanation for a request to delete emails doesn't hold water.

SEEKING ACCESS: News media fill the lobby of the governor's office in the Oregon state Capitol on Feb. 13, the day Kitzhaber announced his resignation. - IMAGE: James Rexroad

Did Gov. John Kitzhaber's office seek to destroy his personal emails stored on state computers?

That's what WW first reported Feb. 12, based on records obtained by the newspaper and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101.1 KXL radio.

That same day, state officials offered reassurances that no one was trying to destroy anything.

It's a crucial question, given that the effort to remove emails came as investigators and the news media sought information about influence-peddling and conflict-of-interest allegations that had enveloped the governor's office.

State officials claimed that Kitzhaber's personal emails were inadvertently stored on state servers. They also claimed they had only recently discovered the mistake. And, they asserted, his staff was simply trying to separate Kitzhaber's personal messages from those relating to state business.

"There was no blanket order to delete all records, and the emails are in the process of being sorted to determine which records are public records that are required to be kept," says Kitzhaber spokeswoman Amy Wojcicki.

Records show none of those official explanations is true.

Kitzhaber elected to have his personal emails stored along with his government account more than three years ago. That allowed him to manage emails from various accounts—public and private—all at once.

In August 2011, Kitzhaber's office requested that Oregon Department of Administrative Services begin archiving his personal emails on state servers, according to sources familiar with the situation.

Records show that from that point forward, Kitzhaber routinely used his personal email accounts for public business through this month. Those emails, even if they were sent from or received by his personal email accounts, would be public records if stored on public servers.

In fact, Kitzhaber was concerned about the amount of crossover between his accounts.

"I want to make sure we are all using the official governor email whenever possible," Kitzhaber wrote in an email to his chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, on June 24, 2014. "I am getting a lot of traffic on my personal email that should be official public record."

Nobody seemed worried about Kitzhaber's personal emails until two weeks ago. On Feb. 2, WW and The Oregonian filed new records requests for Kitzhaber's emails.

Soon after, Kitzhaber general counsel Liani Reeves mentioned to other members of the governor's staff that Kitzhaber's personal emails had been inadvertently stored on a state server, according to people present. Some staffers warned Reeves at the time that those emails might be subject to Oregon's public records law.

A few days later, on Feb. 5, Jan Murdock, Kitzhaber's executive assistant, contacted the Department of Administrative Services with a request to remove emails.

A DAS staffer described Murdock's request in a Feb. 5 email. "Governor's office wants anything that is in [Kitzhaber's] email account removed from archive," wrote Tracy Osburn, a DAS support technician.

"Removing" emails would have meant deleting them—that's how DAS administrators saw it. Several state employees—apparently believing the request was inappropriate—refused to carry it out.

Murdock asked that the emails be deleted one day before the Oregon Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation into the allegations against Kitzhaber and Hayes, and long after the Oregon Government Ethics Commission had mounted an investigation.

Under Oregon law, it's a crime to improperly destroy or tamper with public records or material that might become evidence in a criminal investigation.

A day after WW reported the effort to destroy the emails, the U.S. Department of Justice swept in with a wide-ranging subpoena, including for emails that Kitzhaber's office sought to delete.

Federal officials won't say whether WW's story about the request to destroy emails triggered the subpoenas. But one state employee whose records the feds subpoenaed was Tracy Osburn —the DAS technician who had first reported receiving the order to destroy the emails.

NIGEL JAQUISS

Emails Show That Unlike Gov. John Kitzhaber, Cylvia Hayes Had No Doubts About Holding On To Power

She called Kitzhaber's tenure as governor "our administration."

First Lady Cylvia Hayes - IMAGE: oregon.gov

Last week, WW published emails showing that former Gov. John Kitzhaber had been ambivalent about seeking re-election, and that he worried that he lacked the energy and desire to continue.

The emails show that, while Kitzhaber wavered, then-first lady Cylvia Hayes did not—she wanted him to run again and to give her an even larger role in his administration.

The emails are among those Kitzhaber's office sought to have deleted from state servers Feb. 5, eight days before he announced he would resign amid allegations of influence peddling and conflicts of interest against both Hayes and Kitzhaber.

Records show that Kitzhaber worked to balance Hayes' demands for a greater political role against his staff's concerns about her influence in the governor's office.

"My only priority is for you to be happy," Kitzhaber wrote to Hayes in a May 14, 2013, email, "for you to feel fulfilled in the mission-driven work to which you have dedicated your life; for you to be as effective as you can possibly be; and to help support in any way I can moving your career to the next level and for you to be known and sought after as a national and international speaker, consultant and messenger."

"I know you remain very frustrated about your role in the administration," Kitzhaber continued. "But I never, ever want you to feel like my 'side kick.' And if I have somehow done something to make you feel that way–again I am sorry. My intention is just the opposite as I said before: to support your work and your career. I obviously have no way of really knowing how difficult the 'First Lady' role is but I recognize that it is very challenging."

On July 27, 2013, Hayes sent Kitzhaber an email about her plans to expand the reach of one of her top priorities, the adoption of the "genuine progress indicator," or GPI, as an alternative measure of economic output.

Hayes had been hired earlier in the year to promote the GPI by Demos, a New York-based advocacy group. In April 2013, she and Kitzhaber had traveled to Bhutan to meet with a Demos representative and other GPI supporters. Hayes' $25,000 contract with Demos was part of the more than $220,000 in private consulting contracts she obtained while serving as first lady and an adviser to Kitzhaber.

The July email Hayes sent to Kitzhaber makes clear Kitzhaber was aware of her desire to mix her role as first lady with her job as a paid consultant to Demos.

That email detailed Hayes' hope to get other states and institutions to adopt the GPI. The plan reveals significant conflicts between her role in the governor's office and her work as a private consultant.

Here's an excerpt from that plan:

Work Components:

1) Directly assisting targeted states:

- Drilling down with Washington state: maybe the next step is to work with Wendy from [Washington Gov. Jay] Inslee's office to spearhead a high-level briefing for Inslee and key staff.
- Engage with the Colorado folks to help shape where that effort is heading in terms of government engagement and stakeholder alignment—maybe heading toward a concrete strategic planning meeting.
- Oregon GPI
    - Assist with development of structure of GPI "ownership" and management
    - Identify and communicate with targeted constituents and partners
    - Assist with development of "Launch Plan"

Next Steps:

- Develop list of OR targeted constituents/ partners
- Set up Seattle meetings in August
- Follow up contact with Nike sustainability leaders (maybe they could provide modest funding for the Oregon GPI through PSU; also, it looks like we may be doing a federal event probably in January or February, and as part of this it would be great to have a dialogue between the private and public dimensions of sustainability measurement.

- Follow up with Ecotrust in the GPI work (maybe they can help us development a state-level environmental account)

On Dec. 2, 2013, Kitzhaber announced he was running for re-election. The three senior staff members who'd resisted Hayes' gaining more power—chief of staff Curtis Robinhold, economic adviser Scott Nelson and communications director Tim Raphael—all left the governor's office before 2014.

Hayes soon asked for regular time on Kitzhaber's work calendar.

"John and I would like to have you begin scheduling a weekly meeting for the two of us. One hour ideally in person but can be by phone," Hayes wrote to Kitzhaber's assistant, Jan Murdock, on May 14, 2014. "This will be to discuss our collective work and any currently pressing issues for our Administration."

A week later, on May 21, 2014, she sent Kitzhaber an email with an attachment titled "My Work Plan: May—Dec. 2014."

That plan included speaking engagements in New Orleans, Boise, Chicago, Boston and Russia.

She also outlined greater policy responsibilities, including inserting herself into the selection process for a new director of the agency closest to her business interests—the Oregon Department of Energy.

Here's an excerpt from that three-page work plan:

Energy and Climate:

- Part of planning, fundraising and implementation of build up to carbon pricing campaign in Oregon (numerous calls, meetings, strategic thinking, stakeholder development)
- Assist with hiring ODOE Director
- Providing vision, leadership and strategic thinking on coal, natural gas, oil trains and ODOE strategic planning

ODOE did hire a new director—Michael Kaplan, a Kitzhaber staffer who'd worked with Hayes in the governor's office.

But one part of her plan, her journey to Russia, fell victim to international tensions.

Hayes frequently referred to herself as a CEO—her title at her consulting company, 3E Strategies, where she was the only employee. Still, she took that title seriously when it came to warnings from the White House about relations with Russia.

"With great disappointment I have decided not to do the Russia trip," Hayes wrote to Kitzhaber and his political adviser, Patricia McCaig, on May 30, 2014. "I just think it is too problematic at this time. President Obama recently asked U.S. CEO's not to attend an economic summit in Russia scheduled for later this year. I feel I need to honor that request."

"Moreover, there is no question that news of my visit to Russia will be taken out of context and used to try to create a scandal," Hayes continued. "None of the positive aspects of the work I would be doing in Russia will get mentioned — it will be all about trying to turn this into a scandal.... This was about working with small business people who are trying to do good by the environment in a very special part of our world. Arggghhh."

Gov. John Kitzhaber's Office Sought To Destroy Thousands of His Emails

Records show state bureaucrats refused to carry out the request

Gov. John Kitzhaber - WW Staff

Gov. John Kitzhaber's office last week requested state officials destroy thousands of records in the governor's personal email accounts, according to records obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL.

The request came as investigations into allegations of influence-peddling involving Kitzhaber and first lady Cylvia Hayes were intensifying.

Records show the request to destroy Kitzhaber's emails came from Jan Murdock, Kitzhaber's executive assistant. She wanted all emails from Kitzhaber's personal email accounts removed from state servers.

The request from Murdock was described in a Feb. 5 email. "Governor's office wants anything that is in the email account [Kitzhaber's account] removed from archive," wrote Tracy Osburn, a field technician in the DAS Technology Support Center, wrote in the email obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL.

Personal emails of public officials can be subject to the state's open records laws if they are used to discuss public business. Earlier documents previously released by the governor's office show Kitzhaber used both his personal and state email accounts to communicate with his aides and discuss state business.

The request from Kitzhaber's office to destroy emails came one day before the Oregon Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation into the allegations against him and Hayes.

At the time Kitzhaber's office requested emails be destroyed, the governor and Hayes faced a pending Oregon Government Ethics Commission investigation. WW had earlier reported that the FBI had opened an investigation.

The request for destruction of records came while Kitzhaber was promising to be open and honest with Oregonians about the allegations against him and Hayes.

The records indicate that state employees refused to carry out the request from Kitzhaber's assistant to destroy emails.

Oregon law makes it a crime to improperly destroy or tamper with public records or evidence. Evidence includes "part of official proceeding which is then pending or to the knowledge of such person is about to be instituted."

One observer says the timing of the request raises concern.

"At a very minimum, it shows consciousness of guilt," says Tung Yin, who teaches criminal law at Lewis & Clark Law School. "Why else would you suddenly start destroying documents?"

In a Feb. 5 email, Osburn, the DAS field technician, said Kitzhaber's personal emails had been routed to his state account. At 5:41 pm that day, she passed the request to destroy emails up the chain of command.

The prospect of deleting thousands of emails clearly made Osburn's supervisor, Arian Turpin, uncomfortable.

"Guys, hold on processing this request until we receive approval from a higher authority," Turpin wrote in a Feb. 5, 2015 email at 6:52 pm. "Given the unusual nature of the request, I'm reluctant to have my team move forward without the active awareness and consideration of the possibilities and a direct approval from higher levels of the action."

Turpin then kicked the request up another level to his supervisor, Shawn Wagoner. After consulting with colleagues, Wagoner also refused to delete the governor's emails.

"Take no action at this time," Wagoner wrote. Wagoner then passed the issue up the chain of command to yet another DAS manager, Gary Krieger.

Krieger told his supervisor, Michael Rogers, that he would not destroy the emails.

"I am not willing to make the call to delete information out of the email archive," Krieger wrote on Feb. 5 at 7:24 pm. "As I stated we will need to discuss."

UPDATED:

Kitzhaber spokeswoman Amy Wojcicki said the request to delete emails was routine.

"There was no blanket order to delete all records and the emails are in the process of being sorted to determine which records are public records that are required to be kept," Wojcicki said in an email. "The Oregon Public Records Act requires retention of public records. It was recently brought to our attention that there are a number of the governor's personal emails residing on the state server. Some of the emails do not relate to any activity, transaction or function of state business and are not public records required to be retained."

DAS spokesman Matt Shelby confirms that no emails were deleted, and the final decision on the matter was made by DAS Director Michael Jordan.

"We have a responsibility to maintain records per the secretary of state's retention schedule," Shelby said. "Removal of records would require a record-by-record review to determine what, if anything, was removable."

Oregon Department of Administrative Services Director Michael Jordan Resigns

State's chief operating officer ordered criminal investigation into publication of Kitzhaber emails.

DAS Director Michael Jordan

Michael Jordan, the director of the Oregon Department of Administrative Services, abruptly announced his resignation to agency staff this morning.

Jordan, who is in effect the state's chief operating officer, made what observers believe was a career-ending choice the morning of Feb. 18 when he ordered a criminal investigation by the Oregon State Police into how WW obtained personal emails from former Gov. John Kitzhaber.

The emails concerned state business, were stored on a state server, and were part of a batch of emails Kitzhaber's assistant asked Jordan's agency to destroy.

Jordan later told The Oregonian he'd made the choice to launch a criminal investigation without consulting with his new boss, Gov. Kate Brown, who'd been sworn in less than two hours before he summoned state police.

His decision to launch a criminal investigation into the emails contradicted Brown's pledge that she would bring a new era of transparency to Oregon government.

After launching the investigation, Jordan subsequently placed two Department of Administrative Services employees on administrative leave. That action gave the appearance of a witch-hunt. Jordan seemed to be punishing employees who'd refused a Feb. 5 request from Kitzhaber's office to delete thousands of Kitzhaber's emails.

Jordan's sudden resignation suggests that Brown is serious about transparency; it also marks a strong signal that she is taking charge after replacing Kitzhaber, who resigned Feb. 18.

Jordan's last day on the state payroll will be April 1. Brown will launch a search for his successor but, in the meantime, DAS chief financial officer George Naughton will serve as interim director.

John Kitzhaber lawyers act to keep emails from federal grand jury

Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive By Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive

Email the author | Follow on Twitter

on March 06, 2015 at 4:13 PM, updated March 06, 2015 at 4:50 PM

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber has managed through his attorneys to stall the state's disclosure of thousands of his emails to a federal grand jury conducting an influence peddling investigation.

Records obtained by The Oregonian/OregonLive show the state Justice Department agreed to hold off complying with a federal subpoena until March 16. The delay, state attorneys said, would give Kitzhaber time to seek a federal judge's order blocking the state from providing the emails. The subpoena required the state to turn over the emails by Tuesday, March 10.

The state Justice Department acted in the face of twin threats recently from Janet Hoffman, Kitzhaber's criminal defense attorney, and James McDermott, representing the former governor on ethics matters.

The attorneys asserted in contacts with Oregon Justice Department lawyers that the state shouldn't produce emails they said included Kitzhaber's privileged communications with his lawyers. McDermott also said Kitzhaber may hold the state legally liable for the leak of such emails to Willamette Week.

At issue are emails Kitzhaber generated on a private email account that were subsequently routed to and saved on state computer servers. They were housed on servers maintained by the state Department of Administrative Services. A separate state criminal investigation into the leak is underway.

Letters and emails provided to The Oregonian/OregonLive by the state Justice Department show that Kitzhaber's lawyers intended to file a motion in U.S. District Court that would quash the subpoena. The emails were sought as part of a sweeping subpoena served on state officials the same day Kitzhaber announced his resignation. The grand jury is seeking several hundred thousand pages of state records as it investigates Kitzhaber and his fiancée, Cylvia Hayes.

Hoffman wouldn't discuss the matter Friday, citing legal rules prohibiting lawyers from making statements about grand jury proceedings. She said such legal matters are usually done in secret with sealed filings and court proceedings not open to the public.

Details of the back-and-forth were contained in a Feb. 27 letter from Deputy Attorney General Fred Boss to Hoffman.

"We understand ... that you are preparing a motion to quash the subpoena with respect to the e-mails in question, so that a federal judge can resolve the (disclosure) question," Boss wrote.

He said the state "will agree not to produce these emails for a period of two weeks from the date of this letter.

That time will allow you to file your motion to quash."

Boss wrote that the state wouldn't take a stand on the matter, but would turn over the emails if Kitzhaber hasn't acted in federal court by March 16.

Document: Fred Boss letter to Janet Hoffman

In earlier email and mailed correspondence, Kitzhaber's lawyers said the state was liable for the leaked emails. Emails exchanged with lawyers for purposes of legal advice, even if sent by public officials, are typically considered off-limits to public disclosure.

However, Boss, in his letter to Kitzhaber's lawyers, noted that Kitzhaber may have waived his attorney-client privilege by sharing the emails with the state archives.

Hoffman has argued the emails were inadvertently sent to the state, but an internal DAS email obtained by The Oregonian/OregonLive asserted that the storage was intentional.

In a Feb. 17 email to Boss, McDermott said, "Our client will hold the state fully responsible for any and all adverse consequences, both civil and criminal, that result from this" leak.

McDermott demanded that the state Justice Department, headed by Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum, file a temporary restraining order to block the publication by Willamette Week of emails Kitzhaber had exchanged with McDermott's partner, Stephen Janik. Rosenblum is married to the weekly paper's publisher, Richard Meeker.

"Someone in the state has wrongfully misappropriated the governor's personal and private emails, including his most sensitive email communications with his attorneys, and someone in the state has compounded this wrongful misappropriation by turning over attorney-client privileged private emails to the press, and you are not even trying to fix it," McDermott wrote. "We are talking about the attorney-client privilege, which is one of the most sacrosanct privileges in the American judicial system. As you know, our client has not waived his attorney-client privilege. Your conduct makes me wonder if your failure to take any corrective action is designed to aid your office in the criminal and civil investigations that your office has underway."

Document: James McDermott email to Fred Boss

Boss replied the same day that the state didn't think it had legal grounds to go to court to block publication of the emails.

"If your client believes there are grounds for enjoining the publication of this story, you and Ms. Hoffman are his attorneys," Boss wrote.

After Gov. John Kitzhaber Calls for Transparency, First Lady Cylvia Hayes' Attorney Fights Release of Her Emails

Hayes' criminal defense attorney says her emails should not be made public.

First Lady Cylvia Hayes - IMAGE: oregon.gov

Oregon First Lady Cylvia Hayes' criminal defense attorney said this afternoon she should not have to release emails that relate to her work in the governor's office.

The legal move stood in sharp contrast to Gov. John Kitzhaber's claim earlier in the day he and Hayes were dedicated to openness and transparency and want a thorough examination of the influence-peddling allegations that threaten to end Kitzhaber's political career.

This morning, Kitzhaber wrote to Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum, asking the Oregon Department of Justice to "use its authority to undertake a full and independent factual review of any or all allegations as you see fit."

In his letter, Kitzhaber said he and Hayes believe the public deserves to know the circumstances around the private consulting contracts she obtained while serving as first lady and policy adviser to Kitzhaber.

"No one wants these questions answered more than we do," Kitzhaber wrote.

Later in the day, Hayes argued just the opposite.

Whitney Boise, the criminal defense lawyer who represents Hayes, filed a motion with Rosenblum's office seeking to block the release of Hayes' emails. News organizations, including WW and The Oregonian, have sought Hayes' emails in order to better understand how she obtained more than $200,000 in private contracts from groups seeking to influence state policy, while she was also serving as first lady and adviser to Kitzhaber.

Boise argued specifically against a request by The Oregonian that Hayes' emails be released. Boise said the emails are not subject to the Oregon public records law because Hayes is a private citizen, rather than a public official—and even if she is a public official, media requests for her emails are an invasion of privacy.

And in addition, Boise argued, the emails should not be disclosed because Hayes might be involved in future litigation, which would make the emails temporarily exempt from disclosure.

Here's Boise's conclusion:

> "As set forth above, the Attorney General should deny The Oregonian's petition because Ms. Hayes is not a "Public Body" within the meaning of ORS 192.410(3). As such, Ms. Hayes' personal emails are not "public records" subject to disclosure under the public records law. Furthermore, even if Ms. Hayes is somehow a "Public Body," requiring her to publicly disclose her private emails would unreasonably invade her privacy. Finally, the records The Oregonian seeks pertain to pending and/or threatened litigation and are exempt from disclosure under ORS 192.5011)."

The Oregonian, in a request filed with the Oregon Department of Justice on Jan. 29, asked Rosenblum to compel Hayes to produce copies of "all emails concerning state business Hayes had sent or received" since Jan. 1, 2011.

Hayes had refused to comply with a request The Oregonian made to her directly in December. That's not surprising, given that Kitzhaber's office since July has been stonewalling WW and other media's records requests relating to Hayes' business dealings.

Boise is a highly experienced lawyer but he will have an uphill battle proving Hayes is not a public official.

As WW and other media have shown, Hayes represented the state as first lady, attended senior staff meetings; co-chaired the group that wrote Kitzhaber's 10-year Energy Plan; contributed to his 10-Year Budget Plan; and worked closely with top state officials to incorporate something called the "genuine progress indicator" in state policy. She also traveled regularly on state business, even as she noted on the website of her company, 3E Strategies, "leading a State of Oregon trade mission to Ghangzhou, China."

All of that is to say that she acted as a public official. Hayes never used a public email address, although she communicated constantly via email with Kitzhaber's staff, agency directors and other state employees.

The Attorney General's Public Records Manual is clear as to what constitutes a public record: "any writing that contains information relating to the conduct of the public's business."

Hayes' use of private email accounts to communicate about public matters does not shield her from disclosure. "Records need not have been prepared originally by the public body to qualify as public records," the AG's manual says.

Subject: Second GPI in the States summit SAVE THE DATE

Hi all: Demos's second GPI (Genuine Progress Indicator) in the States Summit will be held on June 13-15 in Baltimore, MD. Developed in collaboration with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources and the Town Creek Foundation, GPI in the States is a one-of-a-kind opportunity for education, dialogue, and strategic planning (and collective inspiration!) among leaders and potential leaders of state-level efforts to develop and implement alternative measurement systems for a more sustainable economy. While these efforts are not limited to the GPI, we are generally in favor of the GPI orientation of supplementing the conventional growth measures with metrics that re-focus decision-making on key areas of well-being and sustainability. This meeting comes with great timing, as GPI initiatives are now gaining very significant traction in several states, with significant potential to expand this work in a number of new states and also to expand the resources available to support this work.

I am sending you this alert so you can save the dates in your calendar, with many more details to follow. As soon as possible, please get in touch with me directly if you want to attend or are interested in learning more about this opportunity. Travel costs will be covered for those coming from outside the DC-Baltimore region, and hotel lodging will be provided for any who need it.

Who should attend? We are particularly looking for participation from people who are interested in getting involved in strategic planning for GPI-type initiatives at the state level. At this point, there is serious engagement in 4 states (MD, VT, OR, and UT), and we hope to expand GPI work in 6-8 additional states by the end of the year. At the first GPI in the States meeting, we had a very good mix of researchers, advocates, and public officials, and we hope to replicate that kind of diversity in the second meeting. We encourage you to think about bringing together small delegations of 2-3 from your state, including interested government staff or officials who want to learn more or could be champions of GPI initiatives.

The program will begin Thursday evening, with a keynote event that we hope will feature Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley (confirmation pending). Governor O'Malley is a pioneering leader in state GPI efforts, and we hope we can share with you an inspiring opportunity to hear about his GPI vision for Maryland and our wider society. The program will continue all day Friday and conclude Saturday morning with planning and brainstorming on next steps.

For reference: Included in this email list is one group of people who attended our first GPI in the States meeting last fall in Annapolis, and a second group of people who have expressed interest in getting involved and bringing new states into the conversation. Among other things, the Baltimore meeting will provide a great opportunity for those who are newer to this work to engage with leaders from the four states represented at the first meeting (Maryland, Oregon, Vermont, and Utah), who will report on their progress.

I look forward to hearing from you very soon!
All best, Lew Daly

Subject: Annapolis meeting update
Importance: High

Hi folks: I just have a few last things to convey before our meeting next week. Again, my cell number: [redacted]
Please read the following notes carefully!
I note first (to avoid oversight) that we have arranged prepaid shuttle service (in two groups) for those flying in on the afternoon of October 8 (see details below).

Location Details
Please find attached a power point with several pertinent map-diagrams for navigating the downtown Annapolis area, where we will be. Here are our three main locations:

Loews Annapolis Hotel, 126 West Street, Annapolis, MD 21401 410) 263-7777

Dinner, Oct. 8, 7:30: Galway Bay Irish Restaurant, 63 Maryland Ave, Annapolis, MD 21401, (410) 263-8333

Meeting space, October 9 (meeting begins at 8:50 am): StateStat Room, 4th Floor of Jeffrey Building (or the outside placard may say "Wineland" building, as the building is in the process of being renamed), 16 Francis Street, Annapolis, MD 21401. You will need to present ID at the security desk.

Oct 9 Meeting, Additional Details

--Dinner will be partly "working," with introductions and general reflections.

--Regarding Governor O'Malley's visit: we will keep the agenda as is (attached here again), but if and when the governor arrives (he is tentatively scheduled to join us from 10 to 11), we will interrupt the agenda. The governor is likely to make some remarks, and then there may be time to have a dialogue with him about his policy vision and the role of alternative accounting frameworks like the GPI.

--We will have projection equipment in the meeting if you need it (use flash drive); please be in touch over the weekend if you have any further questions about components of the agenda or your speaking role.

--Breakfast is on your own on the 9th (see attached map for nearby breakfast spots). We will have coffee available during the meeting, and then lunch.

Transportation Details From Airport

PLEASE NOTE: Jason has arranged prepaid group shuttles to get us from BWI airport to the hotel, as follows:

There will be 2 vans to pick up conference participants from the BWI airport on Monday, October 8th. The Airport Shuttle van is a big white van with large green lettering "GO" on the side. Airport Shuttle Contact info: Phone: 800-776-0323; In Maryland: 410-381-2772.

Here are passenger instructions:

First Wave
The shuttle will pick up Lew Daly and Mijin Cha at the nearby BWI Amtrak station at 3:21; then the shuttle will go to BWI lower level, terminal door 3, to pick up Ken Bagstad (arriving 3:00) and Jon Erickson (arriving 3:20).

Second Wave
Cylvia Hayes, Gunseli Berik, and John Bennett are all scheduled to arrive at 4:13. After baggage claim, they will go to doorway 10 in the lower level of the BWI arrivals terminal. Unfortunately, they will have a modest amount of time to kill as they wait for Nicole Gorko (arriving 4:51) and Alyson Richards (arriving 4:57) to land (our meeting budget appreciates your patience!). Once all the flights have landed and the five participants have made it through baggage claim, they will meet the van at the roadway closest to terminal door 10 to be picked up. The driver will have your names. Also, the gratuity is included in the reservation.

In the case of a lengthy flight delay, please email or call me if and when you know you will be delayed, and I will alert the other parties to go ahead in the shuttle without you. When you do arrive, you can take a regular cab to Annapolis and I can reimburse you.

Getting back to the airport(s): This was much harder to coordinate with shuttles, so we will have to rely on regular cab service, which we can arrange at lunch and during the afternoon break. Here is contact info for the Annapolis Cab Co., (410) 268-0022. I will reimburse you for the fare; sorry for that inconvenience.

OK! Please feel free to call or email me today or over the weekend if you have any questions, suggestions, or concerns at this point.

See you very soon! Lew

Subject: Baltimore in June
Greetings Lew,

As I mentioned in a previous email I will need to be back in Oregon at a reasonable hour on June 15th because I then have to turn around and get over to Bend for a speech. Can we get most of the substance of the GPI in the states worked into the 13th and 14th? Also, is there decent and fast train service between Vermont and Baltimore or should I just fly?

Thanks,
C

To change the routing of Cylvia's trip United's reissue fee is $150 plus difference in airfare. The current pricing is showing an additional collection of fee and fare of $759.80, might be able to tweak pricing a few dollars if Cylvia is able to return on early morning flight schedule.

Hello Friends: We are arranging travel and lodging now for the GPI in the States Summit in Baltimore, June 13-15. Those of you who have not yet been in touch with me about attending or recommending others to attend, I would appreciate your response. We welcome your attendance, or recommendations of other potential participants from your state. At this point, we have people coming from 8 states, with more on the way.

Those of you who have been in touch about attending, please contact my assistant Jason Hochman at JHochman@demos.org about travel arrangements. He will book and pay for your flights or train if needed, and put you on our hotel room list, if you need lodging. We need to start making these arrangements, so please be in touch with Jason as soon as you are able to specify your travel itinerary for the Summit. Of course the sooner the better for flight costs....

Subject: Second GPI in the States summit SAVE THE DATE

Hi all: Demos's second GPI (Genuine Progress Indicator) in the States Summit will be held on June 13-15 in Baltimore, MD. Developed in collaboration with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources and the Town Creek Foundation, GPI in the States is a one-of-a-kind opportunity for education, dialogue, and strategic planning (and collective inspiration!) among leaders and potential leaders of state-level efforts to develop and implement alternative measurement systems for a more sustainable economy. While these efforts are not limited to the GPI, we are generally in favor of the GPI orientation of supplementing the conventional growth measures with metrics that re-focus decision-making on key areas of well-being and sustainability. This meeting comes with great timing, as GPI initiatives are now gaining very significant traction in several states, with significant potential to expand this work in a number of new states and also to expand the resources available to support this work.

I am sending you this alert so you can save the dates in your calendar, with many more details to follow. As soon as possible, please get in touch with me directly if you want to attend or are interested in learning more about this opportunity. Travel costs will be covered for those coming from outside the DC-Baltimore region, and hotel lodging will be provided for any who need it.

Who should attend? We are particularly looking for participation from people who are interested in getting involved in strategic planning for GPI-type initiatives at the state level. At this point, there is serious engagement in 4 states (MD, VT, OR, and UT), and we hope to expand GPI work in 6-8 additional states by the end of the year. At the first GPI in the States meeting, we had a very good mix of researchers, advocates, and public officials, and we hope to replicate that kind of diversity in the second meeting. We encourage you to think about bringing together small delegations of 2-3 from your state, including interested government staff or officials who want to learn more or could be champions of GPI initiatives.

The program will begin Thursday evening, with a keynote event that we hope will feature Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley (confirmation pending). Governor O'Malley is a pioneering leader in state GPI efforts, and we hope we can share with you an inspiring opportunity to hear about his GPI vision for Maryland and our wider society. The program will continue all day Friday and conclude Saturday morning with planning and brainstorming on next steps.

For reference: Included in this email list is one group of people who attended our first GPI in the States meeting last fall in Annapolis, and a second group of people who have expressed interest in getting involved and bringing new states into the conversation. Among other things, the Baltimore meeting will provide a great opportunity for those who are newer to this work to engage with leaders from the four states represented at the first meeting (Maryland, Oregon, Vermont, and Utah), who will report on their progress.

I look forward to hearing from you very soon!

All best, Lew Daly

Subject: Annapolis meeting update
Importance: High

Hi folks: I just have a few last things to convey before our meeting next week. Again, my cell number [redacted]
Please read the following notes carefully!
I note first (to avoid oversight) that we have arranged prepaid shuttle service (in two groups) for those flying in on the afternoon of October 8 (see details below).

Location Details
Please find attached a power point with several pertinent map-diagrams for navigating the downtown Annapolis area, where we will be. Here are our three main locations:

Loews Annapolis Hotel, 126 West Street, Annapolis, MD 21401 410) 263-7777

Dinner, Oct. 8, 7:30: Galway Bay Irish Restaurant, 63 Maryland Ave, Annapolis, MD 21401, (410) 263-8333

Meeting space, October 9 (meeting begins at 8:50 am): StateStat Room, 4th Floor of Jeffrey Building (or the outside placard may say "Wineland" building, as the building is in the process of being renamed), 16 Francis Street, Annapolis, MD 21401. You will need to present ID at the security desk.

Oct 9 Meeting, Additional Details

--Dinner will be partly "working," with introductions and general reflections.

--Regarding Governor O'Malley's visit: we will keep the agenda as is (attached here again), but if and when the governor arrives (he is tentatively scheduled to join us from 10 to 11), we will interrupt the agenda. The governor is likely to make some remarks, and then there may be time to have a dialogue with him about his policy vision and the role of alternative accounting frameworks like the GPI.

--We will have projection equipment in the meeting if you need it (use flash drive); please be in touch over the weekend if you have any further questions about components of the agenda or your speaking role.

--Breakfast is on your own on the 9th (see attached map for nearby breakfast spots). We will have coffee available during the meeting, and then lunch.

Transportation Details From Airport

PLEASE NOTE: Jason has arranged prepaid group shuttles to get us from BWI airport to the hotel, as follows:

There will be 2 vans to pick up conference participants from the BWI airport on Monday, October 8th. The Airport Shuttle van is a big white van with large green lettering "GO" on the side. Airport Shuttle Contact info: Phone: 800-776-0323; In Maryland: 410-381-2772.

Here are passenger instructions:

First Wave
The shuttle will pick up Lew Daly and Mijin Cha at the nearby BWI Amtrak station at 3:21; then the shuttle will go to BWI lower level, terminal door 3, to pick up Ken Bagstad (arriving 3:00) and Jon Erickson (arriving 3:20).

Second Wave
Cylvia Hayes, Gunseli Berik, and John Bennett are all scheduled to arrive at 4:13. After baggage claim, they will go to doorway 10 in the lower level of the BWI arrivals terminal. Unfortunately, they will have a modest amount of time to kill as they wait for Nicole Gorko (arriving 4:51) and Alyson Richards (arriving 4:57) to land (our meeting budget appreciates your patience!). Once all the flights have landed and the five participants have made it through baggage claim, they will meet the van at the roadway closest to terminal door 10 to be picked up. The driver will have your names. Also, the gratuity is included in the reservation.

In the case of a lengthy flight delay, please email or call me if and when you know you will be delayed, and I will alert the other parties to go ahead in the shuttle without you. When you do arrive, you can take a regular cab to Annapolis and I can reimburse you.

Getting back to the airport(s): This was much harder to coordinate with shuttles, so we will have to rely on regular cab service, which we can arrange at lunch and during the afternoon break. Here is contact info for the Annapolis Cab Co., (410) 268-0022. I will reimburse you for the fare; sorry for that inconvenience.

OK! Please feel free to call or email me today or over the weekend if you have any questions, suggestions, or concerns at this point.

See you very soon! Lew

Subject: Second GPI in the States summit SAVE THE DATE

Hi all: Demos's second GPI (Genuine Progress Indicator) in the States Summit will be held on June 13-15 in Baltimore, MD. Developed in collaboration with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources and the Town Creek Foundation, GPI in the States is a one-of-a-kind opportunity for education, dialogue, and strategic planning (and collective inspiration!) among leaders and potential leaders of state-level efforts to develop and implement alternative measurement systems for a more sustainable economy. While these efforts are not limited to the GPI, we are generally in favor of the GPI orientation of supplementing the conventional growth measures with metrics that re-focus decision-making on key areas of well-being and sustainability. This meeting comes with great timing, as GPI initiatives are now gaining very significant traction in several states, with significant potential to expand this work in a number of new states and also to expand the resources available to support this work.

I am sending you this alert so you can save the dates in your calendar, with many more details to follow. As soon as possible, please get in touch with me directly if you want to attend or are interested in learning more about this opportunity. Travel costs will be covered for those coming from outside the DC-Baltimore region, and hotel lodging will be provided for any who need it.

Who should attend? We are particularly looking for participation from people who are interested in getting involved in strategic planning for GPI-type initiatives at the state level. At this point, there is serious engagement in 4 states (MD, VT, OR, and UT), and we hope to expand GPI work in 6-8 additional states by the end of the year. At the first GPI in the States meeting, we had a very good mix of researchers, advocates, and public officials, and we hope to replicate that kind of diversity in the second meeting. We encourage you to think about bringing together small delegations of 2-3 from your state, including interested government staff or officials who want to learn more or could be champions of GPI initiatives.

The program will begin Thursday evening, with a keynote event that we hope will feature Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley (confirmation pending). Governor O'Malley is a pioneering leader in state GPI efforts, and we hope we can share with you an inspiring opportunity to hear about his GPI vision for Maryland and our wider society. The program will continue all day Friday and conclude Saturday morning with planning and brainstorming on next steps.

For reference: Included in this email list is one group of people who attended our first GPI in the States meeting last fall in Annapolis, and a second group of people who have expressed interest in getting involved and bringing new states into the conversation. Among other things, the Baltimore meeting will provide a great opportunity for those who are newer to this work to engage with leaders from the four states represented at the first meeting (Maryland, Oregon, Vermont, and Utah), who will report on their progress.

I look forward to hearing from you very soon!
All best, Lew Daly

Subject: Annapolis meeting update
Importance: High

Hi folks: I just have a few last things to convey before our meeting next week. Again, my cell number [redacted]
Please read the following notes carefully!
I note first (to avoid oversight) that we have arranged prepaid shuttle service (in two groups) for those flying in on the afternoon of October 8 (see details below).

Location Details
Please find attached a power point with several pertinent map-diagrams for navigating the downtown Annapolis area, where we will be. Here are our three main locations:

Loews Annapolis Hotel, 126 West Street, Annapolis, MD 21401 410) 263-7777

Dinner, Oct. 8, 7:30: Galway Bay Irish Restaurant, 63 Maryland Ave, Annapolis, MD 21401, (410) 263-8333

Meeting space, October 9 (meeting begins at 8:50 am): StateStat Room, 4th Floor of Jeffrey Building (or the outside placard may say "Wineland" building, as the building is in the process of being renamed), 16 Francis Street, Annapolis, MD 21401. You will need to present ID at the security desk.

Oct 9 Meeting, Additional Details

--Dinner will be partly "working," with introductions and general reflections.

--Regarding Governor O'Malley's visit: we will keep the agenda as is (attached here again), but if and when the governor arrives (he is tentatively scheduled to join us from 10 to 11), we will interrupt the agenda. The governor is likely to make some remarks, and then there may be time to have a dialogue with him about his policy vision and the role of alternative accounting frameworks like the GPI.

--We will have projection equipment in the meeting if you need it (use flash drive); please be in touch over the weekend if you have any further questions about components of the agenda or your speaking role.

--Breakfast is on your own on the 9th (see attached map for nearby breakfast spots). We will have coffee available during the meeting, and then lunch.

Transportation Details From Airport

PLEASE NOTE: Jason has arranged prepaid group shuttles to get us from BWI airport to the hotel, as follows:

There will be 2 vans to pick up conference participants from the BWI airport on Monday, October 8th. The Airport Shuttle van is a big white van with large green lettering "GO" on the side. Airport Shuttle Contact info: Phone: 800-776-0323; In Maryland: 410-381-2772.

Here are passenger instructions:

First Wave
The shuttle will pick up Lew Daly and Mijin Cha at the nearby BWI Amtrak station at 3:21; then the shuttle will go to BWI lower level, terminal door 3, to pick up Ken Bagstad (arriving 3:00) and Jon Erickson (arriving 3:20).

Second Wave
Cylvia Hayes, Gunseli Berik, and John Bennett are all scheduled to arrive at 4:13. After baggage claim, they will go to doorway 10 in the lower level of the BWI arrivals terminal. Unfortunately, they will have a modest amount of time to kill as they wait for Nicole Gorko (arriving 4:51) and Alyson Richards (arriving 4:57) to land (our meeting budget appreciates your patience!). Once all the flights have landed and the five participants have made it through baggage claim, they will meet the van at the roadway closest to terminal door 10 to be picked up. The driver will have your names. Also, the gratuity is included in the reservation.

In the case of a lengthy flight delay, please email or call me if and when you know you will be delayed, and I will alert the other parties to go ahead in the shuttle without you. When you do arrive, you can take a regular cab to Annapolis and I can reimburse you.

Getting back to the airport(s): This was much harder to coordinate with shuttles, so we will have to rely on regular cab service, which we can arrange at lunch and during the afternoon break. Here is contact info for the Annapolis Cab Co., (410) 268-0022. I will reimburse you for the fare; sorry for that inconvenience.

OK! Please feel free to call or email me today or over the weekend if you have any questions, suggestions, or concerns at this point.

See you very soon! Lew

Hello Friends: We are arranging travel and lodging now for the GPI in the States Summit in Baltimore, June 13-15. Those of you who have not yet been in touch with me about attending or recommending others to attend, I would appreciate your response. We welcome your attendance, or recommendations of other potential participants from your state. At this point, we have people coming from 8 states, with more on the way.

Those of you who have been in touch about attending, please contact my assistant Jason Hochman at JHochman@demos.org about travel arrangements. He will book and pay for your flights or train if needed, and put you on our hotel room list, if you need lodging. We need to start making these arrangements, so please be in touch with Jason as soon as you are able to specify your travel itinerary for the Summit. Of course the sooner the better for flight costs....

Thanks, Lew

The governor is likely to make some remarks, and then there may be time to have a dialogue with him about his policy vision and the role of alternative accounting frameworks like the GPI.

--We will have projection equipment in the meeting if you need it (use flash drive); please be in touch over the weekend if you have any further questions about components of the agenda or your speaking role.

--Breakfast is on your own on the 9th (see attached map for nearby breakfast spots). We will have coffee available during the meeting, and then lunch.

Transportation Details From Airport

PLEASE NOTE: Jason has arranged prepaid group shuttles to get us from BWI airport to the hotel, as follows:

There will be 2 vans to pick up conference participants from the BWI airport on Monday, October 8th. The Airport Shuttle van is a big white van with large green lettering "GO" on the side. Airport Shuttle Contact info: Phone: 800-776-0323; In Maryland: 410-381-2772.

Here are passenger instructions:

First Wave

The shuttle will pick up Lew Daly and Mijin Cha at the nearby BWI Amtrak station at 3:21; then the shuttle will go to BWI lower level, terminal door 3, to pick up Ken Bagstad (arriving 3:00) and Jon Erickson (arriving 3:20).

Second Wave

Cylvia Hayes, Gunseli Berik, and John Bennett are all scheduled to arrive at 4:13. After baggage claim, they will go to doorway 10 in the lower level of the BWI arrivals terminal. Unfortunately, they will have a modest amount of time to kill as they wait for Nicole Gorko (arriving 4:51) and Alyson Richards (arriving 4:57) to land (our meeting budget appreciates your patience!). Once all the flights have landed and the five participants have made it through baggage claim, they will meet the van at the roadway closest to terminal door 10 to be picked up. The driver will have your names. Also, the gratuity is included in the reservation.

In the case of a lengthy flight delay, please email or call me if and when you know you will be delayed, and I will alert the other parties to go ahead in the shuttle without you. When you do arrive, you can take a regular cab to Annapolis and I can reimburse you.

Getting back to the airport(s): This was much harder to coordinate with shuttles, so we will have to rely on regular cab service, which we can arrange at lunch and during the afternoon break. Here is contact info for the Annapolis Cab Co., (410) 268-0022. I will reimburse you for the fare; sorry for that inconvenience.

OK! Please feel free to call or email me today or over the weekend if you have any questions, suggestions, or concerns at this point.

See you very soon! Lew

Subject: GPI in the States program update

Importance: High

Hello Friends:

Below you will find the draft program for our GPI in the States Summit in Baltimore, June 13-15. First, though, if you have not yet made your travel arrangements, please do so immediately, as we have deadlines for our hotel list and also want to avoid expensive last minute air fares. Jason Hochman, at jhochman@demos.org, is your contact for travel arrangements and related questions. Please be in touch with me if you have questions related to the meeting itself, including inviting additional participants.

A quick update on our group: First, I'm happy to report that we have people coming from at least 18 states, including researchers, advocates, and public officials. The roster of represented states so far includes--ME, MA, NY, VT, MD, VA, OH, IL, MN, MI, WI, MO, CO, UT, NV, CA, OR, and HI. In fact we'll likely have one or two other states represented as well. So, this is a significant and various turnout and portends a fascinating, intensive dialogue process, especially for those of you who are relatively new to this work.

I'm also happy to share with you the exciting news that Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley, and Earth Institute director Jeffrey Sachs, are now confirmed speakers for a public keynote event as part of our Summit. Such a high-profile program related to our meeting is not only a great honor for us but also a strong sign that we are getting political and public traction in this work!

Due to the short notice on this event (given initial uncertainties with the governor's schedule), we do not yet have logistical details confirmed. But the keynote event is definitely scheduled for Friday, June 14, in the late afternoon, almost certainly in a venue near our meeting. One caveat is that, normally, June 14 would be our "all day" program. Now, however, we will be working around the O'Malley/Sachs keynote, including starting early on Friday, and sliding certain things over to Thursday evening and Saturday morning.

Here is a draft schedule for the program. Pending feedback, confirmation of speaking roles, and further keynote details, we will follow up with a detailed final program by the end of the month. For now, I include the initial draft below, and invite your feedback.

Special Request: One session focuses on state progress reports. In that session, I have included reports from MD, OR, and VT so far. But, there may be progress in other states of which I am not yet aware. Please be in touch with me if you have some progress to report, and we can discuss how to fit this into the program.

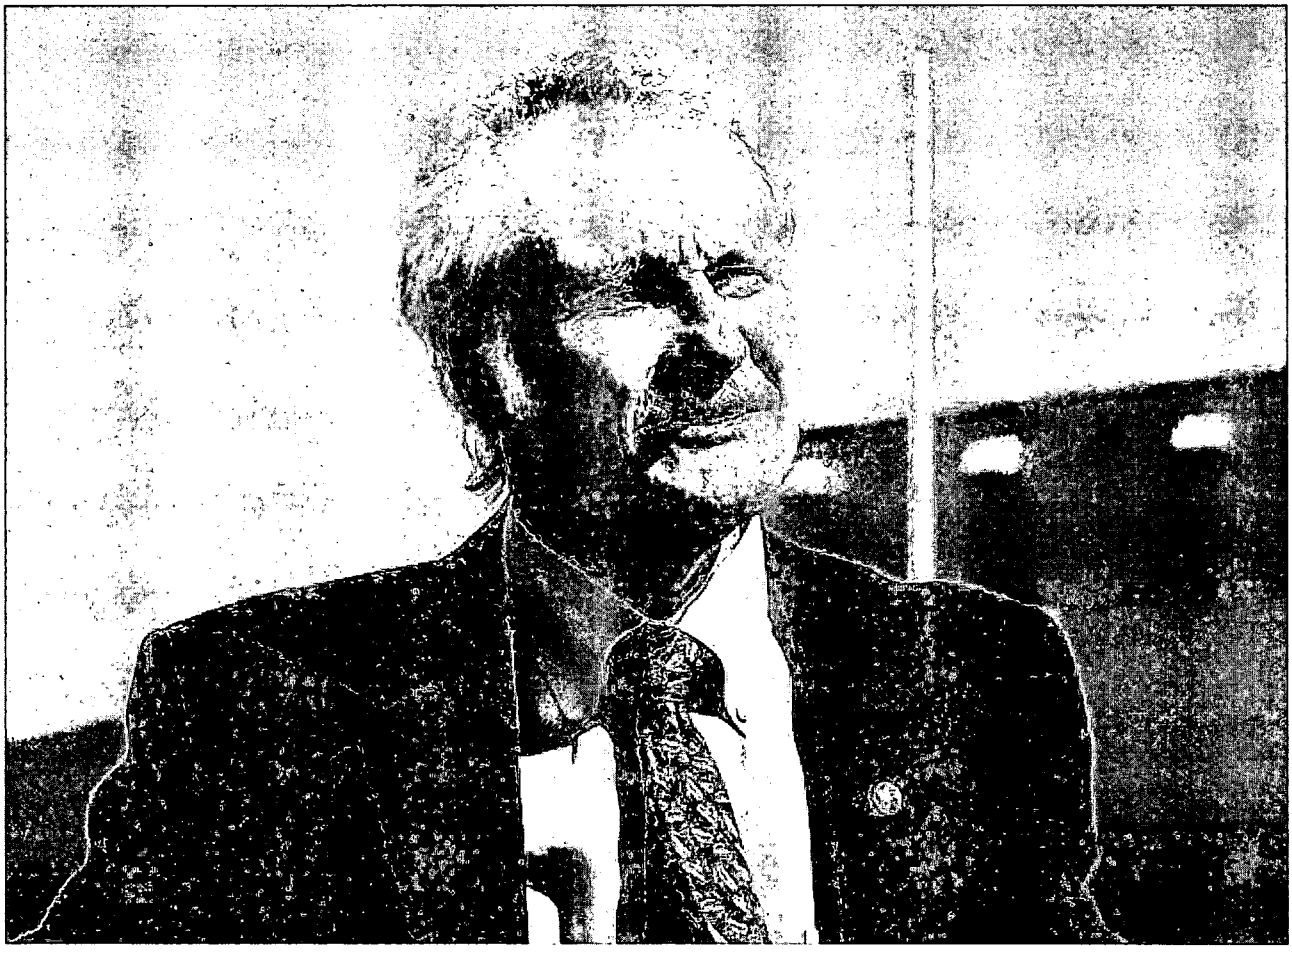
Blurred Lines

How Kitzhaber's re-election campaign secretly shaped state policy around Cover Oregon.



WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM HIS FRIENDS: Gov. John Kitzhaber won a fourth term Nov. 4, defeating Republican Dennis Richardson. - IMAGE: oregon.gov

Gov. John Kitzhaber used campaign advisers to secretly direct his administration's response to Cover Oregon, the state's failed $250 million health insurance exchange.

Previously undisclosed records show that the state's official announcements about Cover Oregon were in fact often shaped by Kitzhaber's re-election campaign consultants.

Emails obtained by WW show his campaign advisers went so far as to shape the explanation a Kitzhaber adviser gave to Congress for the Cover Oregon failure.

Kitzhaber's campaign officials were also deeply involved in discussions about settling a dispute with Oracle Corp., the vendor that created the exchange's website. And emails show Kitzhaber provided his campaign staff with confidential information regarding the legal dispute with Oracle.

There's supposed to be clear separation between an elected official's work of governing, which serves the public's interest, and his campaign, which serves the candidate's interest. Some overlap is inevitable. But emails show Kitzhaber's campaign consultants in the past 10 months drove state policy to an unusual degree.

In the end, sources tell WW, consultants for his re-election campaign orchestrated the decision to shut down Cover Oregon and switch to the federal health care exchange. That means hundreds of thousands of Oregonians will now have to re-register in the federal system, and that Kitzhaber surrendered control of a key part of his health care agenda putting politics ahead of policy.

Kitzhaber's chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, acknowledged the governor's office turned to campaign consultants for advice.

"Our office routinely seeks outside advice, review, input and counsel as the governor or I deem necessary," Bonetto wrote in an email. "As it relates to Cover Oregon, I recognized that the multitude of Cover Oregon issues required additional experience and expertise beyond what we had available within our internal communications staff."

Bonetto says seeking outside help was beneficial.

"As on any other issue, the governor took that advice and counsel and moved forward independently," he says. "His leadership around Cover Oregon resulted in a less risky and less expensive move to the federal exchange, and a reduction in overall operating costs at Cover Oregon."

Observers say, however, the appearance of campaign consultants shaping state policy is troubling.

"It's problematic," says Paul Gronke, professor of political science at Reed College. "There's supposed to be a bright line, but the lines have gotten so blurred between John Kitzhaber as candidate and as governor that people don't see them anymore."

Political science professor Todd Donovan of Western Washington University says outside advisers should be objective, rather than campaign-driven.

"If Kitzhaber had hired a PR firm that had never done any campaign work and they were doing messaging, I think we'd look at that differently," Donovan says. "But the campaign staff has only one job—to get the governor re-elected."

Kitzhaber won re-election Nov. 4, defeating Republican Dennis Richardson, and is now headed to a historic fourth term as Oregon governor.

He and his fiancee, first lady Cylvia Hayes, face ethics complaints alleging Hayes used her position in Kitzhaber's office for personal gain and used state-paid staff to help run her private consulting business.

The state also faces a legal battle with Oracle. Oregon has accused the high-tech multinational of fraud and racketeering and is seeking $2 billion in damages.

That litigation is likely to provoke an aggressive response as Oracle explores what Kitzhaber knew about Cover Oregon, when he knew it and what he did.

Since at least January, emails show, state officials worked closely with Kitzhaber's campaign staff.

A Feb. 7 email shows Kitzhaber was heavily involved. That day, there was a conference call about campaign strategy, including Bonetto, Kitzhaber spokeswoman Nkenge Harmon Johnson, Kitzhaber staff health care adviser Sean Kolmer and legislative director Dmitri Palmateer, Oregon Health Authority director Bruce Goldberg, OHA communications director Patty Wentz and five campaign consultants to discuss Cover Oregon.

The conference call included several Kitzhaber campaign consultants: Patricia McCaig, his top campaign adviser; former senior aides Tim Raphael and Scott Nelson, both of whom were paid by the campaign; and campaign consultants Kevin Looper and Mark Wiener.

By late February, the state was holding confidential negotiations to reach a legal settlement with Oracle.

Despite the secrecy of the negotiations, Kitzhaber and his state staff shared confidential information about them with campaign consultants.

On Feb. 28, Bonetto, Kitzhaber's chief of staff, emailed that the governor's general counsel, Liani Reeves, had just given him the latest update on the talks, including details of a potential financial settlement.

Copied on the email were three members of Kitzhaber's re-election team—Raphael, Looper and Wiener—and state employees Harmon Johnson, Wentz and Palmateer.

"We're 10 million apart in numbers and the timing of when that is paid," Bonetto wrote. "We're thinking about offering $16 million—they want it next week and we had offered to pay it in two installments over 60 days."

The state soon decided it would cut off talks and sever its relationship with Oracle. On March 2, Kitzhaber sent an email, labeled "Attorney Client Communication" in the subject line, to state officials and his campaign staff about what the official announcement should say.

"This language is intended to mean that we are ending our current relationship with Oracle," Kitzhaber wrote (his emphasis added), "which does not mean we could not use them as a subcontractor under a system integrator in the future."

Kitzhaber shared the confidential information with three state employees and three campaign consultants—again Raphael, Looper and Wiener.

State-paid officials trying to manage Cover Oregon fallout were also told they must first run their responses to the press through a Kitzhaber campaign consultant.

That consultant was Raphael, formerly the governor's staff spokesman and now with the lobbying and communications firm Strategies 360.

In a March 14 email, Raphael spelled out how two state-paid officials, Kitzhaber spokeswoman Harmon Johnson and OHA spokeswoman Wentz, were to respond to media inquiries.

"We need a process for quick, strategic responses to breaking stories and reporter calls coming into the Governor's Office, Cover Oregon and other agencies," Raphael wrote in the email, which went to Kitzhaber, three state-paid staff members and consultants Looper and Wiener. "Nkenge and Patty agree to contact Tim promptly upon receiving reporter inquiries on anything other than routine Cover Oregon/IT related questions."

The level of control Kitzhaber's campaign staff exerted extended even to communication with Congress, which had provided the $250 million in federal funds spent on the Cover Oregon website that never worked as promised.

In late March, the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee requested that Dr. Bruce Goldberg of the Oregon Health Authority come to Washington, D.C., to testify.

On March 21, Bonetto emailed Kitzhaber's campaign staff for advice.

"Please see email below from House Oversight Cmt to Cover Oregon requesting Bruce as a witness," Bonetto wrote. "Need to make a decision on this by Monday."

Greg Van Pelt, retired CEO of Providence Health and Services' Oregon region and an adviser to Kitzhaber, was selected to go in Goldberg's place, Van Pelt says, because Goldberg had recently broken his leg.

Kitzhaber's campaign consultants made sure Van Pelt was on message.

On April 2, Raphael sent Harmon Johnson changes he and McCaig had made to Van Pelt's testimony.

"Priority changes are attached. Patricia and I have reviewed the testimony and have focused edits in two areas," Raphael wrote. "1) Greg's introduction—with a goal of establishing his private sector health care credibility and volunteer capacity with the state; and 2) The transition from ACA success to broken website and the Governor's action to make sure it is not a barrier to enrollment."

On April 2, the day before Van Pelt's testimony, McCaig sent an email to schedule a meeting that night between Kitzhaber's re-election team and top officials in the governor's office. McCaig made clear that she—not anyone from the governor's office—was in charge.

"I'd like to run tonight's meeting and I think it should be limited to Cover Oregon issues," McCaig wrote. "Specifically: 1) IT recommendation: content, process and timing; 2) Greg Van Pelt's appearance [before Congress] tomorrow; 3) Hamstreet: contract, reporting authority, messaging, spokespeople."

"Hamstreet" is Clyde Hamstreet, a Portland turnaround consultant hired to fix Cover Oregon's problems.

In August, at Kitzhaber's urging, the Oregon Department of Justice filed suit against Oracle.

A June 4 email, after furor over Cover Oregon had cooled, shows a continued mixture of Kitzhaber staff and campaign consultants preparing for a meeting at the governor's Portland campaign headquarters.

"We will be discussing a specific topic area: developing key messages," McCaig wrote in the email, "identifying further research needs, and establishing a timeline and calendar."

In addition to the usual mix of Kitzhaber staffers and campaign consultants, the email went to Christian Gaston and Mike Marshall of the campaign; Duke Shepard, Kitzhaber's state-paid labor adviser; and Steve Bella, a state contractor and associate of first lady Cylvia Hayes.

Over the summer, Hamstreet chafed under the watch of McCaig, who sources say led the push to shut down Cover Oregon. Hamstreet opposed that decision.

"I feel strongly that Oregon should keep its options open," Hamstreet wrote in a report the state released to The Oregonian last month.

Hamstreet also said that political expediency rather than public policy drove Cover Oregon's decision-making. In the report, Hamstreet decried "excessive politicization of health care reform nationally and in the state."

"Need to get politics out of the picture," Hamstreet wrote, as The Oregonian first reported Oct. 14.

Neither McCaig nor any of the other Kitzhaber campaign consultants agreed to be interviewed for this story.

Harmon Johnson also declined to comment. But in a Nov. 3 op-ed in The Oregonian, she wrote that she'd raised concerns about the role of Kitzhaber re-election consultants in running state policy.

"During my tenure, I was adamant that the governor's office and his closest advisers not blur the lines between state interest and other matters," Harmon Johnson wrote. "I was told that as long as things were good it did not matter whether things were right."

Cylvia Hayes and Gov. John Kitzhaber: Five Issues the Ethics Commission Should Consider

Cylvia Hayes and former Gov. John Kitzhaber

The Oregon Government Ethics Commission is meeting today to begin to consider allegations of ethical misconduct against Gov. John Kitzhaber and First Lady Cylvia Hayes.

Here are the five key issues the commission should be considering as they open the case against Kitzhaber and Hayes.

1. Hayes is a public official. On Oct. 13, Gov. John Kitzhaber asked the Oregon Government Ethics Commission whether his fiancée, First Lady Cylvia Hayes, is a public official. It's an important question. Hayes is subject to state ethics rules if she is a public official, as defined by state law. It's a curious question for Kitzhaber to ask, given that Kitzhaber has always considered Hayes to be a public official. The governor's general counsel, Liani Reeves, told WW in August that Hayes is. Kitzhaber and Hayes have variously argued the "first lady" title is not an official one, and that Hayes' work as an adviser to Kitzhaber is unpaid. None of that matters, and it's interesting that Kitzhaber is trying to extract Hayes from her role as a public official now that her actions have gotten them both into trouble. The ethics commission's own guide for public officials provides the following definition: "If the position for which you have volunteered serves the State of Oregon or any of its political subdivisions or any other public body, 'irrespective of whether' you are 'compensated' you are a public official." The guide says 200,000 people in Oregon are public officials.

2. As a public official, Hayes is subject to a central tenet of Oregon's ethics laws: Public officials cannot use their public positions for private benefit that would not be available "but for" the person's public position. As WW reported on Oct. 8, Hayes, while acting as an adviser to Kitzhaber on energy and economic development, signed three new consulting contracts in 2013 worth at least $85,000 with advocacy groups seeking to influence state policy. These are groups that she first worked with in her role as first lady and adviser to Kitzhaber. While doing so, she signed private consulting deals that enriched her personally. Those contracts tripled her income from the previous year.

3. Kitzhaber held Hayes to a different standard than other people in the governor's office—most notably himself. In December 2012, Kitzhaber asked the ethics commission for permission to make paid speeches to private groups. The commission told him he could do so, but only if he did not use his position as governor to obtain the paid work; did not use his title and did not use public resources, including staff time, to prepare. Yet when Hayes snagged her contracts in 2013, she took them on without first clearing the potential conflicts of interest with Curtis Robinhold, then Kitzhaber's chief of staff or Liani Reeves, his general counsel. In July 2013, they belatedly presented Hayes with conflict of interest forms advising her not to use her first lady title in private work or to use Mahonia Hall, the state-owned governor's mansion. Hayes declined to sign those forms. She signed them only after Robinhold and Reeves amended them to allow her to use her title and public resources—both of which the ethics commission had earlier cautioned Kitzhaber against doing—in her private consulting work.

4. The Oregon Business Council, an advocacy group funded by Oregon's largest employers, really appreciated Kitzhaber's willingness to carry out OBC's agenda—namely cutting public employee pension benefits and pushing for construction of the $3.2 billion Columbia River Crossing Project. In 2013, Hayes wanted more publicity for Kitzhaber's Prosperity Initiative than the governor's office could provide. She asked OBC executive director Duncan Wyse for help, and Wyse used grant money to hire a private spokeswoman who reported to Hayes. Ethics laws prohibit a person or group with a "legislative or economic interest" from giving something worth more than $50 to a public official or a member of that official's household. In other words, if Kitzhaber had the ability to push OBC's agenda, Hayes should not accept something worth more than $50 from the group.

5. And then there's Mary Rowinski. If her name is not familiar to most people, the ethics commission should get to know it soon. Ethics laws prohibit the use of public resources—such as computers, the governor's mansion or staff time—for private purposes. Documents Kitzhaber's office has provided to WW under Oregon's Public Records law shows Hayes instructing Rowinski, a state-paid assistant, to book meetings for her private business. WW has asked the governor's office for any and all communications regarding Hayes' use of Rowinski for her private business, but the office has not turned over those additional records. Sources tell WW many such documents exist, however; they show Hayes regularly directed Rowinski to book plane tickets, hotels and events related to her private consulting business. Hopefully the governor's office will soon comply with the public records law. The ethics commission should demand to see these records as well.

One final question: Each year, elected officials such as Kitzhaber must file a statement of economic interest with the state, detailing property holdings and sources of income. Hayes disclosed her 2013 contracts with Resource Media and the Energy Foundation, but she never disclosed a $25,000 contract with Demos, a New York-based group, whom she worked with as first lady and adviser to the governor before signing the contract. Why did Hayes fail to disclose this contract?

OREGONLIVE

Cylvia Hayes: latest records released by Kitzhaber show gaps, discrepancies

Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive By Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive

Email the author | Follow on Twitter

on January 30, 2015 at 7:30 AM, updated January 30, 2015 at 8:47 PM

Update Jan. 30, 7:17 p.m.: To read about the Kitzhaber press conference, click here or here*, or to watch the video,* click here.

Newly released records from Gov. John Kitzhaber's office leave substantial gaps in the record of how he managed ethical issues involving his fiancée, Cylvia Hayes.

Those gaps could be filled when Kitzhaber holds a 10 a.m. news conference in Portland with Hayes billed as the topic. Kitzhaber has steadfastly refused in recent weeks to answer questions about his fiancée or her conduct, as has his staff.

Follow the coverage

We'll live-tweet this morning's press conference using the hashtag #cylviahayes. We'll embed that feed and live stream the event here.

Kitzhaber's staff this week released 46 pages of internal records to The Oregonian/Oregonlive on the matter after taking four months to find and review them.

The emails and other records provide no documentation for a central issue: Why the governor's office loosened ethical restrictions on Hayes while she conducted private consulting business that has paid her at least $213,000.

Liani Reeves, the governor's legal counsel, in June 2013 directed Hayes not to use her title of first lady in her consulting work and barred her from using Mahonia Hall - the governor's official residence - or other state resources. A month later, Reeves dialed back the restrictions, giving Hayes the greenlight to use public resources in her work.

The new records show that worry about Hayes' conduct started at the top of Kitzhaber's staff in May 2013 with his then-chief of staff Curtis Robinhold. At issue was Hayes' work for Demos, a New York-based group.

"Curtis asked me to touch base with you on the Demos contract," Reeves wrote in a May 20, 2013, email to Hayes.

Yet despite that high-level concern, the governor's office reported this week, Robinold never documented his worry. Reeves said the governor's office found just six pages of material from Robinhold on the matter. The only email he sent on this highly sensitive internal issue was simply to request that a document be printed.

The new records also show that Reeves started reviewing Hayes' contract work far earlier than previously known. In an email to Hayes, Reeves mentioned a contract review she undertook in October 2012 - more than a half a year before Reeves considered imposing ethical restrictions.

But Reeves provided no records about that earlier review despite broad public records requests from The Oregonian/Oregonlive. There was no explanation for why she did the review. She earlier reported she was withholding 62 pages of her records related to ethics issues, but didn't disclose what topics they covered. The earlier review may be covered by the documents Reeves has elected to keep secret.

From October through the end of the year, based on Kitzhaber's earlier disclosures, the public and the Oregon Government Ethics Commission was led to believe Hayes had earned only about $85,000 in outside compensation since 2011, while acting as first lady and a de facto member of the governor's staff. News earlier this week that Hayes has actually accepted at least $213,000 has raised even more questions.

Time and money

Kitzhaber and Hayes still have not disclosed some of her earnings since 2011, including contracts from HDR and Waste to Energy. However, Hayes has portrayed her work as charitable, saying she volunteered "thousands of hours" to work on "prosperity" initiatives.

Those initiatives focused on environmental values and dovetailed neatly with her contracts that, among other things, included measuring prosperity in a more environmentally friendly way.

Records show that at the same time she was receiving substantial outside funds, Hayes functioned as a supervisor-level member of the governor's staff, attending staff meetings, giving orders to agency staffers and other governor's staff. It remains unclear how Hayes was able to seek, obtain and deliver on contracts for such a large amount of money while seemingly working nearly full-time for the governor.

Ethical mystery

Questions over Hayes' potential role in a Kitzhaber administration were first raised publicly in 2009, before his election to an unprecedented third term as Oregon's governor.

At the time, and in the wake of the 2010 scandal over her contracting for the state Department of Energy, Kitzhaber's office has publicly maintained it was keeping close watch on potential conflicts of interest raised by her outside work.

None of the records released to date, including those from Reeves' own files, provide any indication the governor's promised ethical review was applied to Hayes' work in 2011 and 2012 for Clean Economy Development Center. EO Media Group/Pamplin Media Group reported Hayes acknowledged receiving $118,000 from that group.

The governor's office also has provided no documentation that ethical reviews were done for Hayes' work for HDR and Waste to Energy. Reeves, charge by the governor to vet and manage ethical issues for his staff, to date has released 102 pages relating to ethics issues - most of it copies of Hayes' contracts and variations of internal conflict-of-interest forms that dictate how Hayes was to conduct herself in her public role.

Change of course

The only clear evidence that Kitzhaber's office applied any ethical review to Hayes' outside work comes in 2013. Reeves drafted conflict-of-interest forms that Hayes would have to sign that prohibited Hayes from using Mahonia Hall to meet with clients of her for-profit business.

Reeves subsequently dropped that directive, allowing Hayes to use Mahonia for her business - despite having earlier decreed that doing so would violate Oregon's ethics law.

The records released by Reeves don't include any emails or notes about why the change was needed - or who sought it. She reports directly to Kitzhaber. The governor's office has refused for months to answer questions on the matter.

The governor's office has provided shifting accounts of how much documentation existed and why releasing the material was taking months when the Oregon Department of Justice advises records typically should be made public within 10 days of a request for their disclosure.

On Reeves' own files, for instance, the governor's office said an initial search produced about 1,000 pages of material in about 500 documents, many of them duplicates. Reeves justified the lengthy delay in disclosure on a need to review her files, but this week disclosed 40 pages and made no claim that she was withholding any other material. She earlier had released 62 pages of material from her files.

Similar discrepancies are evident concerning Robinhold's records. Reeves reported last November that she was processing 200 responsive documents. On Tuesday, she released just six pages and said there was no more. She didn't explain the discrepancy in her written disclosure to The Oregonian/Oregonlive. She said her search for Robinhold's documents comprised only a narrow search of his former email account in a 12-month period.

Double Dip

Oregon first lady Cylvia Hayes used a taxpayer-funded trip to Seattle to work for her private consulting clients.

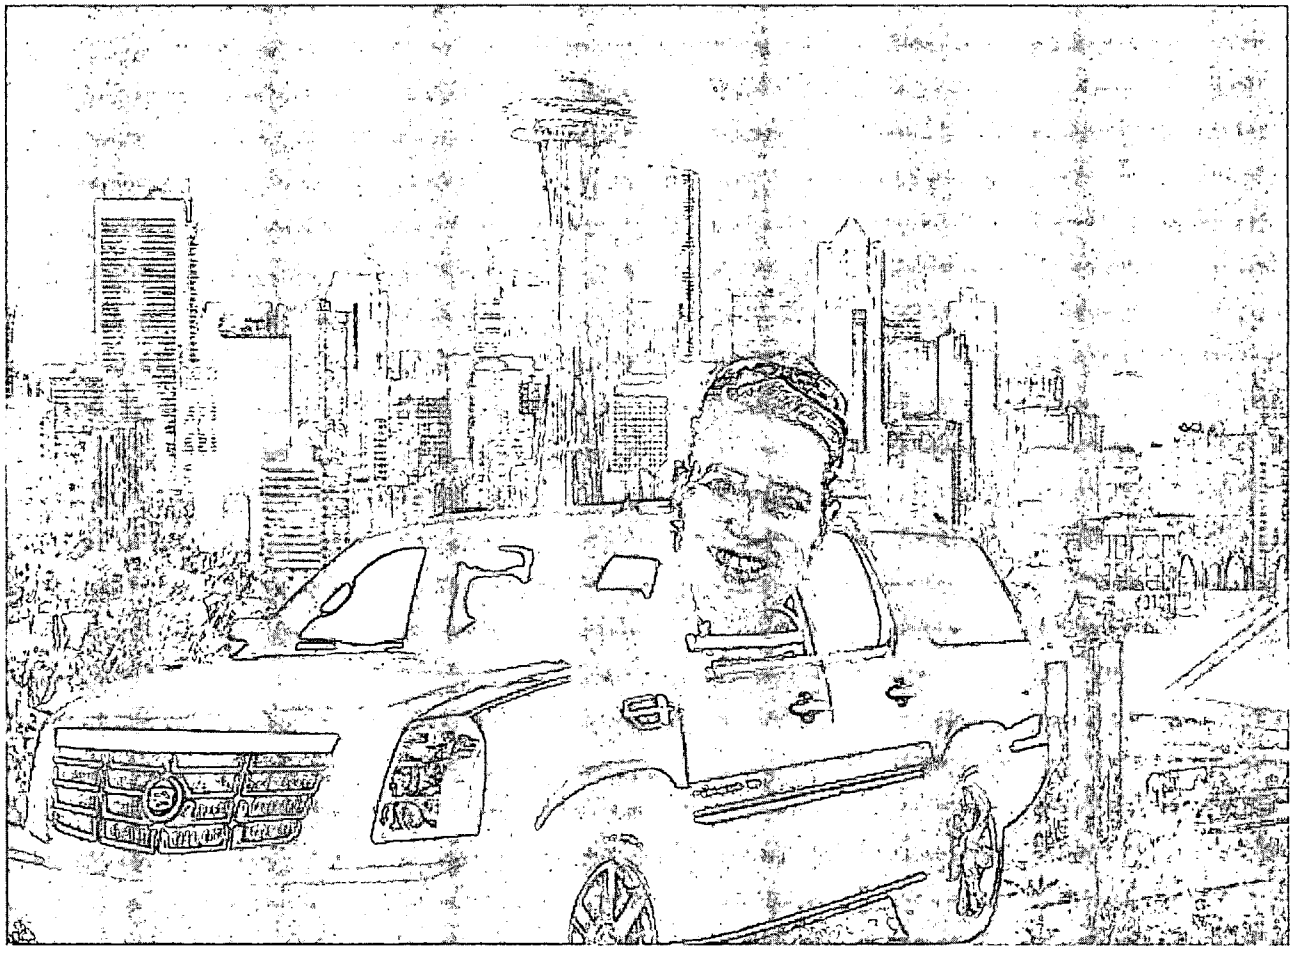

IMAGE: WW Staff

Gov. John Kitzhaber probably never imagined he would be heading into a historic fourth term as Oregon chief executive with a major daily newspaper calling for a criminal investigation into the actions of his fiancee, first lady Cylvia Hayes.

But that's what happened Dec. 28, when The (Eugene) Register-Guard called on Kitzhaber to appoint a special prosecutor to look into allegations Hayes used her position as first lady and an adviser to the governor to benefit her private consulting business.

"One possibility would be to invite a disinterested person with a high degree of credibility and a thorough knowledge of the law—a retired state Supreme Court judge, perhaps—to conduct interviews and examine documents, and then to present the evidence to a Marion County grand jury," The Register-Guard's editorial read.

Under Oregon law, only the governor has the authority to appoint a special prosecutor.

Kitzhaber is unlikely to appoint one. And no one else in state government—including Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum, a fellow Democrat and the state's top law enforcement official—seems willing to pursue a possible criminal case. (Full disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW publisher Richard Meeker.)

That leaves a possible civil investigation to the Oregon Government Ethics Commission, a seven-member board appointed by the governor.

The commission could decide this month to pursue an investigation of Kitzhaber and Hayes, based on complaints filed in November alleging that Hayes used her public position as adviser to the governor for private gain.

The commission could, for example, zero in on a single day in Hayes' blurring of her public and private roles: Aug. 27, 2013.

Newly disclosed emails show that's when Hayes took a taxpayer-funded trip to Seattle and conducted meetings on behalf of her private clients.

Hayes acknowledged doing so in an email to WW, after the newspaper raised questions about the Seattle trip.

State law prohibits the use of public money for private benefit.

Hayes worked as a consultant on energy and environmental issues before she met Kitzhaber, and she continued to do so after he entered office for his third term in January 2011.

Kitzhaber named her an as adviser, and Hayes soon established herself in the governor's office, attending senior staff meetings and communicating regularly with state agency officials.

For the first two years of Kitzhaber's term, Hayes' consulting business mostly consisted of work within Oregon and for previous clients.

That changed in 2013, when Hayes signed contracts with three private clients that she had been working with in her public role as an adviser to Kitzhaber.

Her 2013 contracts added up to at least $85,000, according to records released to WW under the state's public records law. That was more than three times the income she had declared on her tax returns the prior year.

One of the new contracts was with Resource Media, a Seattle public relations firm that specializes in environmental issues. Hayes' contract called on her to help Resource Media promote issues surrounding global warming and ocean acidification. Acidification is a growing environmental threat caused by the oceans' increasing absorption of carbon dioxide.

Hayes also signed a private consulting contract with Demos, a New York advocacy group that promotes the "genuine progress indicator," which it says is a more accurate measure of economic output than gross domestic product and other traditional yardsticks.

In August 2013, Hayes and Kitzhaber vacationed in the San Juan Islands before returning to the mainland for a dinner in Tacoma with Washington Gov. Jay Inslee and his wife, Trudi, on Aug. 26, 2013.

Kitzhaber then headed back to Oregon, and Hayes headed to Seattle. Taxpayers picked up the cost of her travel, including her room at the Hotel Vintage Park in Seattle—one that could accommodate her Rhodesian ridgeback, Tessa—parking, and a meal.

Hayes' trip to Seattle cost taxpayers $278.89—not including the cost of an Oregon State Police trooper who went along as her bodyguard.

On Aug. 27, 2013, Hayes met with an official from the Casey Family Foundation to discuss a state anti-poverty effort she was running called the Oregon Prosperity Initiative. Hayes also had another meeting scheduled with Washington first lady Trudi Inslee.

Hayes tells WW she used the time between these official state meetings to carry out private consulting work.

"In order to be efficient with my time, I also had two additional private business-related meetings between the meeting with Mr. Smith and the meeting with Trudi Inslee," Hayes wrote in an email to WW.

"The first meeting was in Seattle with Betsy Peabody of the Puget Sound [Restoration Fund] regarding the issue of ocean acidification. The second meeting took place in Olympia and was with Wendy Korthuis-Smith, who was working on developing more effective metrics of economic outcomes for Washington state.

"Following this meeting, I met with First Lady Inslee to discuss the unique challenges and opportunities to make a positive difference while in the position of first lady. I then returned to Oregon."

Hayes' first private meeting directly benefited her work for Resource Media, the client who hired her to work on climate-change issues. The second meeting benefited Demos, her client promoting alternative measures of economic output.

Hayes didn't respond to follow-up questions about whether those private meetings were appropriate.

The complaints pending before the state ethics commission concern whether Hayes improperly used her public position to advance her business interests. The commission has not yet been asked to look into other questions that have arisen since the Nov. 4 election.

Those questions include Hayes' use of a state-paid aide to help run her consulting business, first reported on wweek.com last month. They could also include Hayes' admission of her meeting on behalf of her clients while on travel paid for by taxpayers.

Ben Gaskins, assistant professor of political science at Lewis & Clark College, says he believes Oregonians are paying close attention to the Hayes ethics case.

But he's skeptical about leaving the investigation in the hands of the state ethics commission, with its small staff and members appointed by the governor.

"Kitzhaber and the [Democratic] party will give it the appearance of an investigation, but there's no reason to expect much," Gaskins says. "I doubt this will be an all-out effort to find out what happened."

Gaskins says Kitzhaber, while weakened by the controversy, is fortunate the Legislature is controlled by fellow Democrats.

"He's facing a friendly Legislature that wants this issue to go away so it doesn't detract from what lawmakers are trying to accomplish," Gaskins says. "That blunts the impact."

Game Time

Why did Hayes want Kitzhaber to meet a video-game tycoon?

During their August 2013 trip to the Seattle area, newly released records show, first lady Cylvia Hayes arranged for Gov. John Kitzhaber to meet with a video-game entrepreneur to discuss climate change.

Hayes was working on climate change, including ocean acidification, for her private consulting client Resource Media. That work brought her into contact with Washington state Sen. Kevin Ranker (D-Orcas Island), sponsor of a 2013 state law seen as a landmark in combating the effects of acidification.

Hayes and Ranker had established a working relationship around the issue, and they had become friends. Ranker wanted to introduce her to John Vechey, a wealthy Seattle environmentalist.

Vechey had co-founded PopCap Games and, according to public records, sold the company to gaming giant Electronic Arts in 2011 for at least $750 million.

It made a lot of sense for Ranker to connect Vechey and Hayes. Vechey is on the board of the environmental website Grist.org, for which Hayes writes, and Vechey's resources and interest in environmental issues could be valuable to Hayes' clients.

The meeting was scheduled for Aug. 26, 2013, at PopCap's Seattle headquarters. The get-together was not an official state meeting. Nonetheless, Hayes arranged for Kitzhaber to come along.

In the end, the meeting was rescheduled so Hayes and Kitzhaber could meet Vechey at his home on Orcas Island, near where the governor and his fiancee stayed during their San Juan Islands vacation.

Vechey could not be reached for comment, but according to the governor's office, Kitzhaber, Hayes, Ranker and Vechey spent the time watching a Seattle Seahawks game.

A spokeswoman for Kitzhaber, Amy Wojcicki, says the meeting was not an effort to leverage Hayes' relationship with the governor to benefit her clients.

"This meeting was a social meeting among friends," Wojcicki says. "There was no private business purpose for Ms. Hayes' participation."

Yet records show Ranker later helped Hayes with other meetings involving her clients and influential figures interested in ocean acidification.

For example, Ranker took part in a November 2013 meeting in Seattle with Liz Banse, vice president of Hayes' client Resource Media, and William Ruckelshaus, a Seattle lawyer who was the first administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. —NIGEL JAQUISS.

Feds Issue Criminal Subpoenas For Gov. John Kitzhaber's and First Lady Cylvia Hayes' Records

FBI zeroes in on Hayes' consulting contracts

KITZHABER AND HAYES - IMAGE: Adam Wickham

The U.S. Department of Justice has filed criminal subpoenas with the state of Oregon seeking records related to outgoing Gov. John Kitzhaber and first lady Cylvia Hayes.

The subpoenas seek all "information, records and documents, including data electronically or digitally stored on computer devices" relating to Kitzhaber, Hayes, 15 other people and 11 state agencies, including the governor's office.

Federal investigators are seeking records related to private consulting contracts Hayes obtained while she was serving as first lady and policy adviser to Kitzhaber over the past four years.The contracts paid Hayes more than $200,000.

The subpoenas, signed by U.S. Attorney for Oregon Amanda Marshall, were served on the Oregon Department of Administrative Services this afternoon, only hours after Kitzhaber announced his resignation.

The subpoenas also come one day after a report, based on records obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL, that Kitzhaber's office had sought to destroy thousands of emails from the governor's personal accounts stored on state computers.

The subpoenas are the first public confirmation of a federal criminal investigation into Kitzhaber and Hayes. WW first reported in January that the FBI had opened an investigation into the matter.

The feds are seeking an enormous quantity of information from state agencies, including emails, correspondence, phone logs, visitor logs and all documents involving at least seven of the advocacy groups and businesses with whom Hayes had contracts with.

The subpoena seeks records from the Department of Administrative Services IT offices. A Kitzhaber aide contacted that office Feb. 5 to ask that email records from Kitzhaber's personal account be removed from state servers.

The current and former officials whose records have been subpoenaed include: Mike Bonetto, Kitzhaber's chief of staff; Greg Wolf and Dan Carol, Kitzhaber aides who helped Hayes land consulting deals; Jan Murdock, Kitzhaber's executive assistant; Liani Reeves, the governor's legal counsel; Nkenge Harmon Johnson, a former spokeswoman for Kitzhaber; Michael Jordan, director of the Oregon Department of Administrative Services; and Curtis Robinhold, Kitzhaber's former chief of staff.

The agencies that received a demand for records in the subpoena include the department of Administrative Services, Community Colleges and Workforce Development, Energy, Environmental Quality, Housing and Community Services, Justice, State Lands and Revenue. The subpoena also seeks records from the Oregon Government Ethics Commission and Business Oregon.

The subpoena also seeks any records related to the organizations with whom Hayes had consulting contracts or received paid work, including Rural Development Initiatives, Energy Foundation, Clean Economy Development Center and Demos.

The federal criminal investigation is separate from a state-level Oregon Department of Justice criminal investigation that Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum launched Feb. 6.

The U.S. Department of Justice employs a large public corruption unit, which pursues cases around the country. That unit recently completed a case against former Virginia Gov. Robert McDonnell and his wife, resulting in a two-year prison sentence for McDonnell. His wife has not yet been sentenced.

The subpoena calls for the state to produce the requested records to federal authorities by March 10, 2015, at 9 am.

First Lady Cylvia Hayes: Email Shows Kitzhaber's Attorney Was Uncomfortable With Privately-Paid Spokeswoman

Proposed contract created "legal and ethical issues"

Cylvia Hayes and Gov. John Kitzhaber

Two months ago, WW reported a highly unusual situation: The Oregon Business Council, which advocates for Oregon's largest employers, in 2013 hired a spokeswoman for first lady Cylvia Hayes. A group pushing a political agenda would not usually be allowed to provide staff support for the governor's office.

Documents Gov. John Kitzhaber's office has now released to WW show that Kitzhaber's general counsel, Liani Reeves, objected to the original wording of the spokeswoman's contract because of what she termed "legal and ethical issues." She was so uncomfortable with that arrangement that she asked OBC to rework the language of the contract so that it would pass legal muster.

That contract and other issues relating to Hayes' unusual role in Kitzhaber's administration, which WW first reported in October, are currently the subject of an Oregon Government Ethics Commission investigation.

In September 2013, Oregon Business Council proposed hiring Therese Lang to publicize the Oregon Prosperity Initiative, which Kitzhaber had assigned Hayes to lead.

One email—released under Oregon's public records law in response to a request from WW made a month before Kitzhaber's Nov. 4 re-election—shows Reeves urged the business group to change the description of Lang's duties from "Focused, Proactive Support and Coverage of First Lady Activities" to "focused, proactive support and Coverage of the Prosperity Initiative" (emphasis added).

The replacement of the phrase "First Lady" with "Prosperity Initiative," would make the hiring look less like a favor, or even contribution, to the governor.

Reeves had good cause for concern. As originally proposed, the hiring would have been an end-run around state contracting laws, which require transparency.

Second, Oregon's government ethics laws prohibit public officials from accepting gifts worth more than $50 from any person or group that has a "legislative or administrative interest" in that public officials work. The Oregon Business Council's action allowed Hayes to promote herself and her agenda at a time she was pushing her private consulting business.

The prospect of hiring Lang was particularly sensitive because of the Oregon Business Council's influence.

Since winning office in 2010, Kitzhaber has adopted the annual Oregon Business Plan, which the group produced, as his own economic development plan. Last year, for example, Kitzhaber invested enormous political capital in two of the central planks of Oregon Business Council's 2013 plan—building the Columbia River Crossing Project and cuts to the Public Employee Retirement System.

For the business group to hire a spokesperson for Hayes could have the appearance of a gift—or perhaps even a reward to Kitzhaber and Hayes for his having promoted OBC's agenda.

Todd Donovan, a political science professor at Western Washington University, told WW in October that the appearance of an advocacy group hiring a spokesperson to promote a state initiative is troubling.

"The question there is, does it look like a quid pro quo?" Donovan said. "Even if it's not, it's a major problem for a business group to hire somebody who's effectively filling a spot on the governor's staff."

The situation is complicated by Hayes' unusual position. As first lady, she often represents the governor's office and the state of Oregon in speeches and at events. Kitzhaber also named Hayes an adviser on energy and economic development, including her in senior staff meetings and policy-making. Both roles make her a public official and subject to Oregon ethics laws, as Reeves acknowledged earlier this year.

Hayes earlier rejected any concerns about the business group hiring a spokeswoman for her in an October statement to WW.

> "[Gov. Kitzhaber] believes the Oregon Business Plan is the right direction for Oregon, as should be evident by every speech he's given over the past five years," > Hayes told WW. "Yes, I share a commitment to reducing poverty in Oregon with my fiance and with executives from some of the largest companies in Oregon. That's not a conflict. That's common sense, and maybe even common decency."

The Oregon Business Council complied with Reeves' request to change the wording of the contract to make it seem as if Lang reported to the business group instead of Hayes. Prosperity Initiative documents suggest that change was a distinction without a difference.

A two-page document under the heading "Office of the First Lady," for instance, described the initiative without mentioning the Oregon Business Council. A state employee, Robert Lee, was listed as the "initiative coordinator" and Lang was listed as "communications director." Press releases Lang produced were similarly focused on Hayes.

The website for the Prosperity Initiative, oregonprospers.org, has been disabled, and Hayes' official state website no longer includes any mention of the Prosperity Initiative.

Reeves did not immediately respond to questions about the legal and ethical issues she said Lang's hiring presented.

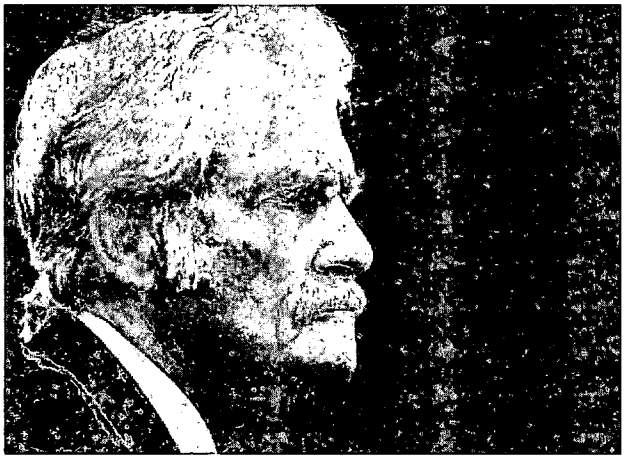
Gov. John Kitzhaber Announces His Resignation

"I apologize to all those people who gave of their faith, time, energy and resources to elect me," the governor says as he exits.



Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Gov. John Kitzhaber has resigned as Oregon's governor, little more than a month after he was sworn in as the first four-term governor in the state's history. His resignation will take effect Wednesday, Feb. 18, at 10 a.m.

The resignation caps a tumultuous week in which Kitzhaber appeared to have decided to resign, only to change his mind at least twice.

Kitzhaber, 67, has seen his 36-year political career consumed by an influence-peddling scandal centered on private consulting contracts that his fiancee, first lady Cylvia Hayes, obtained from advocacy groups seeking to impact state policy.

Those contracts, which paid Hayes more than $200,000, also benefited Kitzhaber because the two share a household. WW first reported on Hayes' contracts and the conflict of interest they presented last October and since then new allegations have emerged.

Kitzhaber, despite winning re-election in November, has seen his administration undercut by a series of questions about his knowledge and involvement that he has been unwilling to answer.

His political position weakened Jan. 30, when he held a 20-minute press conference to speak a previously undisclosed $118,000 contract Hayes received in 2011 and 2012, and the possibility she failed to report the income on her tax return. Kitzhaber's evasiveness at the press conference started the drumbeat that led state leaders to consider he might be forced to resign.

Kitzhaber said then he had no intention of stepping down. Matters worsened dramatically this week, when Kitzhaber abruptly summoned Secretary of State Kate Brown back from a conference she was leading in Washington, D.C. By law, Brown will become governor on Wednesday.

Kitzhaber told Brown he was summoning her to discuss his resignation face-to-face. But when she arrived back in Portland, Kitzhaber bizarrely told her that he was not resigning—and told reporters he didn't know why she'd come home early.

Hours later, Democratic legislative leaders and State Treasurer Ted Wheeler, also a Democrat, called for his resignation on Thursday.

Brown, who like Kitzhaber is a Democrat, will now become governor. Brown will then serve until the 2016 general election, when candidates will compete to serve out the remainder of Kitzhaber's term, which would have run through 2018.

Here is the governor's full statement as released by his office shortly after noon today:

Governor Kitzhaber Announces Resignation
Resignation effective at 10 a.m., Wednesday, February 18, 2015

(Salem, OR) — Governor Kitzhaber released the following statement today.

I am announcing today that I will resign as Governor of the State of Oregon.

It is not in my nature to walk away from a job I have undertaken – it is to stand and fight for the cause. For that reason I apologize to all those people who gave of their faith, time, energy and resources to elect me to a fourth term last year and who have supported me over the past three decades. I promise you that I will continue to pursue our shared goals and our common cause in another venue.

I must also say that it is deeply troubling to me to realize that we have come to a place in the history of this great state of ours where a person can be charged, tried, convicted and sentenced by the media with no due process and no independent verification of the allegations involved. But even more troubling – and on a very personal level as someone who has given 35 years of public service to Oregon – is that so many of my former allies in common cause have been willing to simply accept this judgment at its face value.

It is something that is hard for me to comprehend – something we might expect in Washington, D.C. but surely not in Oregon. I do not know what it means for our shared future but I do know that it is seriously undermining civic engagement in this state and the quality of the public discourse that once made Oregon stand out from the pack.

Nonetheless, I understand that I have become a liability to the very institutions and policies to which I have dedicated my career and, indeed, my entire adult life. As a former presiding officer I fully understand the reasons for which I have been asked to resign. I wish Speaker Kotek and President Courtney and their colleagues on both sides of the aisle success in this legislative session and beyond. And I hope that they are truly committed to carrying forward the spirit of bipartisanship and collaboration that has marked the last four years in Oregon.

In 1968 I was inspired to commit my life to public service by the last campaign of Robert Kennedy. Forty-one years ago I started work as an emergency room doctor in Roseburg with a goal to make life better for those in my care. Ever since then, I have sought to keep that focus by trying to make things better for the people and the communities of this state that I love. I have had the extraordinary privilege of pursuing that work as a State Representative, State Senator, Senate President and as your Governor.

Over those years, I have had the honor to be a part of some remarkable achievements.

We responded to the worst recession and financial crisis since the Great Depression by rebuilding an Oregon economy that has added jobs and vitality in many regions of our state. And, unlike many other parts of our nation, we did it together with cooperation and respect for Oregon and for each other.

We successfully defended Oregon's spectacular natural heritage of clean water, clean air, forests, farmland and special places. We created the Oregon Plan for Salmon and Watersheds and nearly 90 watershed councils.

We have also found ways to support our rural communities and to create jobs in our natural resources industries while enhancing the environment.

When forces of intolerance sought to divide us we stood up for the principal that every Oregonian deserves respect and basic rights – including the right to choose and the right to marry the person we love.

And I am proud that Oregon has not invoked the death penalty during my last four years on the watch.

We have stood by our working men and women steadfastly supporting collective bargaining and the right to form a union.

We have transformed our health care system, improving access and quality while lowering costs through our new Coordinated Care Organizations. Tonight over 95 percent of Oregonians will go to bed knowing that they have health insurance coverage. We did that together.

In a three-day special session we reformed our public pension system, provided tax relief to small businesses and raised new revenue for mental health and for public education -- the foundation of our future.

We have passionately pursued the goal of equity and opportunity – especially for those Oregonians who have been left behind: communities of color, English language learners and those in poverty, those in the rural parts of our state, the very young and the very old.

We have laid the groundwork for eliminating the achievement gap and ensuring that over 90 percent of our children could be reading at level in 3rd grade within five years.

And we are poised to reach agreements that will resolve the century-old water crisis in the Klamath Basin and expand irrigated agriculture in the Umatilla.

As important as what we have accomplished – how we have accomplished it is perhaps even more important. We have had a great tradition of overcoming partisan differences in this state and doing what is right for Oregon. That tradition had faltered, but over the past four years we have rebuilt a functional political center, reaching across party lines to do difficult, important things by reducing polarization and building community to help right the ship and chart a better course for our future.

I ran for a fourth term as your governor to continue that progress. But the questions that have been raised about my administration – specifically allegations against me concerning the work done by my fiancé Cylvia Hayes and the contracts she obtained during my last term – and the escalating media frenzy that has stemmed from this – has clearly reached the point of no return.

I am confident that I have not broken any laws nor taken any actions that were dishonest or dishonorable in their intent or outcome. That is why I asked both the Ethics Commission and the Attorney General to take a full and comprehensive look at my actions – and I will continue to fully cooperate with those ongoing efforts. I am equally confident that once they have been concluded Oregonians will see that I have never put anything before my love for and commitment to Oregon and faithfully fulfilling the responsibilities of the public offices I have held

But it is also clear that this process will take months.

I have always had the deepest respect for the remarkable institution that is the Oregon Legislature; and for the office of the Governor. And I cannot in good conscience continue to be the element that undermines it. I have always tried to do the right thing and now the right thing to do is to step aside.

One thing I hope people know about me is that I love this state and its people, its rivers, its mountains and its landscapes with every fiber of my being. It is because of that love that I tender my resignation as Governor, effective at 10 a.m. on February 18, 2015. Secretary of State Kate Brown will take the oath of office as Oregon's Governor at that time. Oregon will be in good hands and I wish her well.

Thank you for allowing me to serve you and our state. It has been the honor of my life. And I believe I can say that looking back over those years we have left it better than we found it.

Gov. John Kitzhaber Asks AG Ellen Rosenblum to Open "Factual Review" of His Office: Updated

The move—far short of a full investigation—could block access to public records Kitzhaber and Hayes have refused to release.

Gov. Kitzhaber Swearing in AG Rosenblum - KATU

Gov. John Kitzhaber this morning changed his position on whether a state-level investigation of allegations of corruption in his office was necessary.

Kitzhaber called upon Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum to begin an investigation immediately.

Rosenblum has been under increasing pressure to launch an investigation on her own. State law requires the attorney general to investigate reports of possible public corruption, but Rosenblum has failed to act. (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW Publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker.)

Kitzhaber's request today may not be what it appears.

Since July, WW has been filing requests under Oregon's public records law for emails and other documents related to the private consulting contracts that first lady Cylvia Hayes obtained while representing the state and serving as a policy adviser to Kitzhaber. The governor's office stonewalled those requests for months and has continued to block production of records to WW and other media since October, when WW first reported on Hayes' contracts.

Kitzhaber's letter to Rosenblum today will allow his office to further delay producing public records. That's because exemptions in the public records law allow public bodies—such as the governor's office—to withhold records that may be involved in litigation, a criminal investigation or a personnel investigation until those proceedings are finished.

In other words, what may look like Kitzhaber seeking an investigation could in fact be his attempt to prevent the public from finding out what really happened in his office.

Here's the text of Kitzhaber's letter:

> Dear Attorney General Rosenblum:
> As you know, I believe our office acted appropriately when we intentionally sought to ensure a clear separation between Cylvia Hayes' volunteer work as First Lady and her own paid professional work. We recognized the unique challenge involved with an independent professional woman assuming the largely undefined role of First Lady. However, the media's focus on questions and allegations concerning the work done by her and the contracts she obtained during my last term has progressively intensified.
> No one wants these questions answered more than we do and we are both fully cooperating with the Oregon Government Ethics Commission. Nonetheless, it is increasingly clear that the statutory process established to review questions of this nature, to determine the facts and to arrive at conclusions concerning whether laws have been violated has in no way stemmed the rush to judgment currently underway in the Oregon media.
> Therefore, I am requesting that your office use its authority to undertake a full and independent factual review of any and all questions or allegations as you see fit. You will have my full cooperation. The First Lady and I will make available to you any materials you deem necessary to complete your work, as will my office.
> I deeply regret that this situation has become a distraction from the important work of our state and look forward to your review and its conclusions.
> Sincerely,
> John A. Kitzhaber, M.D.

Updated at 1:00 pm with Rosenblum's letter to Kitzhaber:

Dear Governor Kitzhaber,

Thank you for your letter. My office has already opened an investigation into this matter. I appreciate your intent to cooperate fully.

Sincerely,

Gov. John Kitzhaber Says He's Not Resigning

The statement comes amid swirl of rumors he was preparing to walk away

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Gov. John Kitzhaber today sought to quash speculation that his resignation was imminent, issuing a statement that he has no plans to give up his office.

Here's the entire statement Kitzhaber issued this afternoon:

> "Let me be as clear as I was last week, that I have no intention of resigning as Governor of the state of Oregon. I was elected to do a job for the people of this great state and I intend to continue to do so."

Speculation about Kitzhaber's plans heated up this morning when Secretary of State Kate Brown—who would succeed Kitzhaber if he quits—rushed back to Oregon from a conference in Washington, D.C. A spokesman for Brown confirmed the timing of her return was unexpected.

Kitzhaber and his fiancee, first lady Cylvia Hayes, face a criminal investigation by the Oregon Department of Justice into allegations of influence-peddling and conflicts of interest. The allegations have been stacking up around Kitzhaber and Hayes since October, but talk of Kitzhaber's resignation picked up after he conducted a politically disastrous press conference Jan. 30, in which he repeatedly ducked questions about the allegations.

Gov. John Kitzhaber Used His Authority to Aid First Lady Cylvia Hayes' Client, New Records Show

Hayes also directed state employees to benefit her client's political agenda.

First Lady Cylvia Hayes and Gov. John Kitzhaber

Newly released emails show Gov. John Kitzhaber gave First Lady Cylvia Hayes extraordinary influence over the highest levels of state government, allowing her to promote the agendas of her private consulting client.

The emails, released to WW and other media on Friday by the Oregon Department of Administrative Services, are important for a number of reasons:

First, Oregon law prohibits public officials from using their public position for private benefit, or for the benefit of a member of the public official's household. The emails show that Kitzhaber advocated for policies and decisions that would aid Hayes' private consulting work for Demos, a New York advocacy group.

Second, the emails show Kitzhaber handed Hayes sweeping power to direct senior state employees and influence state government policies. Without disclosing to those employees she was working for private clients, Hayes then promoted her clients' agendas in written communication and at meetings.

Third, the emails provide evidence of something that Kitzhaber and Hayes have sought to deny—that she herself is a public official and thus subject to Oregon government ethics laws.

The newly released documents begin to lift the curtain on aspects of the Kitzhaber administration the governor has long tried to conceal.

In October, WW first reported Hayes' conflicts of interest as she served as first lady and policy adviser to the governor and used those positions to land private consulting contracts for herself (First Lady, Inc., WW, Oct. 8, 2014).

WW first filed public records requests regarding Hayes' private contracts on July 10, 2014. After months of failing to comply with the Oregon public record law, Kitzhaber's office produced a small fraction of the requested documents in the first week of October.

The resulting story reported on three consulting contracts worth $85,000 that Hayes obtained in 2013. She has also since acknowledged receiving an additional $118,000 in 2011 and 2012 from another client interested in shaping state policy, the now-defunct Clean Economy Development Center.

The Oregonian first reported the new emails Friday evening.

The new documents focus on Hayes' work on the genuine progress indicator, an alternative measure of economic output promoted by her client, Demos. Demos' position is that traditional measures such as gross domestic product encourage inefficient and sometimes harmful choices, such as the exploitation of fossil fuels. Using different measurements, Demos says, would yield different policy choices, such as greater spending on public infrastructure.

Kitzhaber personally played a role in helping Hayes land the Demos contract.

Lew Daly, a Demos executive, explained to WW in an October email how he came to know Hayes. "Ms. Hayes and I have been engaged in discussions about developing new measures of progress since 2012," Daly wrote. "Beginning in the summer of 2013, Demos was moving to expand our work in this area."

In April 2013, Kitzhaber, Hayes and Daly all traveled to Bhutan for a conference involving the genuine progress indicator and related concepts. The novelty of a governor flying to a small Himalayan nation during the middle of a legislative session to study economic theory made national news—it was the kind of publicity a wonky non-profit such as Demos couldn't buy.

The next month, in May 2013, Hayes began a $25,000 consulting contract with Demos.

She immediately called a meeting of top state officials, including Ben Cannon, then the governor's education adviser, and Michael Jordan, who as director of the Oregon Department of Administrative Services is the state's chief operating officer and Oregon's top state government administrator.

The May 13 meeting Hayes set to promote Demos' approach was set for the state-owned governor's mansion, Mahonia Hall. Holding a meeting in a public building to benefit a private client violates state ethics law.

Nowhere in Hayes' email calling that meeting, or in any of the dozens of other Demos-related emails she sent state employees, does Hayes disclose to recipients that she's a paid consultant for Demos.

As WW reported earlier, when Kitzhaber's chief of staff and general counsel tried to get Hayes in the summer of 2013 to comply with state laws regarding conflicts of interest, she balked. Kitzhaber, who is legally responsible to ensure his staff complies with ethics laws, failed to intercede.

On May 7, 2013, Jordan emailed Hayes to tell her that he and a top deputy, Sarah Miller, would miss the Mahonia Hall meeting Hayes was convening to "brainstorm the developing Oregon Genuine Progress Indicator."

"Hi Cylvia: Unfortunately, Sarah Miller and I will not be able to attend on Monday. We are in an all day session with the policy staff," Jordan wrote. "Sarah and I are leading significant parts of the agenda. Let us know how we can "catch up" and contribute to the effort."

That displeased Hayes.

"Not good," Hayes wrote to Jordan on May 7, 2013. "We went forward with this date because you had committed to attending."

Hayes signed her email to Jordan "Cylvia Hayes CEO, 3EStrategies," which suggested she was acting in her capacity as a private consultant. Yet she was requiring senior state employees to drop their state work to attend a meeting to benefit Demos.

It took Jordan just 22 minutes to email back that he'd change his plans. He canceled his participation in the state meeting.

"Hi Cylvia: I apologize," he wrote on. "I'll work out the conflict and be there on the 13th, Sarah will cover the retreat. Sorry for the confusion. Totally my fault."

Throughout the rest of 2013, Hayes pushed Jordan to adopt the genuine progress indicator, convincing him to begin incorporating it into how the state planned budgets and measured outcomes.

In October, WW reported that she'd pitched Jordan on a $125,000 pilot project that included hiring Demos—and Hayes—for implementation.

That project didn't get funded but, also in October, Hayes introduced Jordan to an associate of hers named Sean McGuire, who'd worked on GPI in Maryland.

After relocating to Oregon, McGuire worked with Hayes and Demos to pitch the GPI to Washington state. Now, McGuire needed a job and Hayes wanted the state to have a GPI director on staff. Hayes arranged for Jordan and McGuire to meet.

When Jordan didn't immediately hire McGuire, Kitzhaber himself got involved, sending Jordan an email with an unmistakable message.

"The best person to do this [GPI] work is Sean McGuire and we need to find a way to bring him on," Kitzhaber wrote in a Dec. 30, 2013 email to Jordan.

McGuire soon joined the state payroll at a $65,000 salary.

When Kitzhaber ran for governor in 2010, he pledged to shift state government away from short-term thinking and budgeting every two years. He proposed instead to establish 10-year plans.

Emails show that Hayes was heavily involved in developing that 10-year plan framework, even writing much of the draft language for the plan developed in 2014.

She also at times addressed Jordan and the state's Chief Financial Officer, George Naughton, as if they were subordinates.

A March 28, 2014 email shows Hayes' frustration with the preparation of the 10-year document. "As you know I already sent my rather minor edits of the various sections drafts. Here are my larger concerns and comments," she wrote. "I want the intro language to reflect our prosperity frame and the concepts of fiscal, human and natural capital. I am happy to help with that [and] what actually happened to developing a ten year BUDGET?"

Hayes also wanted the 10-year plan to include direct references to work she had been doing for her private consulting clients.

Her first question involved the genuine progress indicator. "How will we add GPI/triple bottom line metrics?" Hayes asked Jordan and Naughton in a March 28, 2014 email.

She also wanted the plan to incorporate references to the Pacific Coast Collaborative, a consortium of West Coast states and British Columbia that another Hayes client, Resource Media, paid her to promote. "I would like to discuss integrating our PCC work into some of these recommendations," she emailed Jordan and Naughton.

Hayes pushed state employees to produce drafts of the document, and on June 10, 2014, she provided edits of the introduction to a Department of Administrative Services communications staffer.

"This 10-Year Plan is not a report meant to be glanced at and placed on a shelf to collect dust," Hayes wrote in the intro. "The outcomes identified here are ambitious but attainable. The framework established here is crafted to guide the way in every policy and budget discussion or decision."

Since last fall, Hayes has tried to portray herself as simply an unpaid volunteer advising the governor on issues she cared about, such as clean energy and sustainable economic development.

But her roles in directing state employees and shaping public policy help establish that she meets the legal definition of a public official. That's important because it means Hayes is subject to Oregon ethics laws, which say it's illegal for her to use her position as first lady and adviser to the governor to benefit herself financially.

WW also reported last fall that Hayes—who wanted a spokeswoman of her own—pressured an advocacy group, the Oregon Business Council, to provide her with a personal $35,000 to promote her and one of her projects, the Oregon Prosperity Initiative. That $35,000 could violate state ethics laws, which prohibit gifts of more than $50.

The newspaper also reported Hayes used public employees to run her private business out of the governor's office and traveled at public expense to meet her private clients.

The new records should provide more pressure for a thorough investigation of Kitzhaber and Hayes. They are already under investigation by the Oregon Government Ethics Commission, a state agency with few resources that only handles civil matters and whose seven members are appointed by the governor.

Multiple sources have told WW that the FBI is also investigating, however that agency's activities are opaque and not subject to Oregon's public records law.

Hayes' attorney is challenging the release of her emails, which WW and other media have requested. And Kitzhaber's office still has not released emails WW requested as long ago as July.

The greatest opportunity for transparency is a state-level investigation. Kitzhaber, however, has refused to appoint a special prosecutor. And Oregon Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum has so far ignored a mandate in state law that says she "shall" investigate public corruption, although her most recent comments suggest she may be moving in that direction.

Neither Kitzhaber's spokeswoman nor Hayes responded to questions.

How Oregon First Lady Cylvia Hayes Parlayed Her Role Advising Kitzhaber Into a Private Consulting Contract

East Oregonian story uses emails to track Hayes' work

First Lady Cylvia Hayes

Today's WW includes a story about a taxpayer-funded trip Oregon first lady Cylvia Hayes took to Seattle in August 2013. On that trip, Hayes acknowledges, she conducted private client meetings. One of the issues she had been hired to work was ocean acidification. Her client was Resource Media, a Seattle public relations firm, which hired Hayes in 2013 to work on acidification and other issues related to climate change.

How, exactly, did an environmental and energy consultant from Bend pitch herself as an expert on ocean issues?

Hillary Borrud, a reporter in the EO Media Group's Capitol bureau, has produced an in-depth look at how Hayes used her position as an adviser to Gov. John Kitzhaber to learn about ocean issues, and turned that knowledge (while still working in Kitzhaber's office) into a consulting contract with Resource Media.

Borrud writes:

> "Four years ago, Oregon first lady Cylvia Hayes had little experience working on ocean policy.
> "But within 14 months, Hayes became a sought-after expert — invited to speak at the February 2012 Coastal States Organization meeting in Washington, D.C., followed by a speech at the Oregon State of the Coast conference — and she landed a contract worth at least $21,000 to promote marine conservation policy."
> "Newly released emails reveal how Hayes made the transition. Soon after voters elected Hayes' fiancé John Kitzhaber to a third term as governor, Hayes began to work with state and federal employees to create a new role for herself as an ocean health advocate. Hayes directed an aide in the governor's office to track news about marine issues, sought suggestions for events she should attend and requested talking points for the 2012 speech in Washington, D.C, according to emails released by the state."

Kitzhaber Hired Ally Who Arranged Cylvia Hayes' Fellowship, Making Him Highest-Paid Aide

Right after finding lucrative work for first lady, Dan Carol joined governor's staff

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Gov. John Kitzhaber provided a lucrative job in his administration to an longtime associate who found work for Kitzhaber's fiancee, Oregon first lady Cylvia Hayes.

In 2011, Dan Carol, a veteran political consultant, arranged a high-paying assignment for Hayes, Oregon's first lady.

Starting in July or August of 2011, Hayes began a fellowship Carol arranged with the Clean Economy Development Center, a Washington, D.C. non-profit. That fellowship would pay her $118,000 over 18 months, for work that Hayes and Kitzhaber's office have yet to describe in any detail.

Right after Carol arranged that work for Hayes, Kitzhaber hired Carol to be his director of multi-state initiatives, a job that today pays Carol $165,720, according to state figures.

That's far more than anybody else on Kitzhaber's staff and nearly twice Kitzhaber's salary of $98,600.

Carol says Kitzhaber hired him because of the skills he brings to state work, not to repay a favor.

In a Feb. 3 email to WW, Carol describes what happened.

"Like many other people and many Oregonians, Cylvia Hayes sought my help to get advice, policy ideas and funding connections especially after I came back to Oregon after being in a senior role in the 2008 Obama campaign," Carol writes. "It was common knowledge in early 2011 that her role/her consulting practice created complications and at the same time I gather that there was careful consideration in the Governor's office about how to properly handle this challenge."

Hayes had been working in the first half of 2011 at Rural Development Initiatives, Inc., a Eugene non-profit that saw its state funding spike while Hayes was on the payroll.

But that job didn't work out and Carol came to the rescue. He connected her to Clean Economy Development Center, a Washington, D.C. non-profit formed in 2010 by Jeffrey King, a former Portland resident.

"I came up with the idea of the CEDC fellowship," Carol writes. "All parties liked the idea, including the Governor's office which reviewed the proposed structure and agreed that having Cylvia focus on replicating policies outside Oregon was a solution set for her role as a consultant."

In his email to WW, Carol emphasized that he was a "private citizen" when he came up with the idea to connect Hayes and the Clean Economy Development Center.

"No one in the Governor's office or the Governor ever asked me to do anything for Cylvia," Carol writes.

Hayes got paid handsomely by CEDC in 2011 and 2012. As WW reported last week, it does not appear that she declared the 2012 income of $88,000 on her federal tax return.

Although Hayes moved on to other contracts with non-profits, who like CEDC worked in areas that overlapped with her official duties as first lady and adviser to KItzhaber, Carol is still in his state position, where he earns far more than anybody else on Kitzhaber's staff—including Kitzhaber' chief of staff Mike Bonetto, who is paid $147,324.

The Oregonian first reported the assistance Carol provided Hayes and has more news today on Kitzhaber's associates finding work for her.

Carol says his finding Hayes work had nothing to do with Kitzhaber hiring him.

"The reason I was hired because I had worked for the Governor and with his first chief of staff several times before and because I had the right skills and national connections which among other accomplishments have helped the state obtain its unprecedented $1.9 billion federal waiver to drive community health innovation," Carol writes in a Feb. 4 email

Kitzhaber's spokeswoman, Amy Wojcicki, also did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Kitzhaber's Office Bent State Ethics Standards to Suit First Lady Cylvia Hayes, Records Show

Governor's staff tried to stop her from using Mahonia Hall and her title for her private business

Gov. John Kitzhaber - IMAGE: WW Staff

Gov. John Kitzhaber's then-chief of staff and top lawyer last year tried to stop First Lady Cylvia Hayes from running her private consulting business out the governor's mansion and from continuing to use her title for paid speaking engagements, records recently released to WW show.

Hayes would not abide by those restrictions and Kitzhaber's staff backed down, records show, rewriting ethical guidelines so Hayes could continue to use Mahonia Hall and the first lady title for her personal business.

The documents reveal a different version of events from the narrative Kitzhaber has presented regarding Hayes' work in his office.

The records were released late Friday to WW under the state's public records law. The release follows an Oct. 8 WW cover story about Hayes' private consulting business. The story reported Kitzhaber's staff had struggled with potential ethical problems created by Hayes' use of her public position to drum up private contracts for herself. (The story was based in large part on records WW had requested from the governor's office starting in July.)

Under state law, Kitzhaber is responsible for making sure people in his office are not involved in conflicts of interest or are using their public positions for personal gain.

Kitzhaber's office has told WW that Hayes is a public official under state ethics laws. Kitzhaber is now trying to back away from that position. His office today asked the Oregon Government Ethics Commission for an opinion as to whether Hayes fits the definition of public official.

Hayes serves as a policy adviser to Kitzhaber. While she is not paid by the state, Hayes maintains a desk in the governor's office and works as part of his staff.

Although both Kitzhaber and Hayes have emphasized the volunteer nature of her advisory and first lady roles, ethics laws say the fact that she is unpaid is irrelevant. "Many public officials are volunteers," says the Oregon Government Ethics Commission's Guide for Public Officials.

On Oct. 8, WW reported Hayes has pushed for the state to change its economic and energy policies while accepting payments from private advocacy groups seeking to influence those same policies.

In some cases, Hayes solicited private consulting contracts with groups she was already working with in her public role as first lady and adviser to Kitzhaber. Records show she has routinely used her title as first lady and as adviser to Kitzhaber when making paid appearances at the behest of her private clients.

State ethics law prohibits public officials from using public resources for personal benefit. That would include Mahonia Hall, the governor's mansion owned by the state.

Kitzhaber, seeking re-election to a fourth term, has defended his actions, saying his office held Hayes to the highest ethical standards.

On Oct. 10, the governor appeared at a Portland City Club debate against his Republican opponent, state Rep. Dennis Richardson (R-Central Point).

Richardson asked Kitzhaber whether he would call for a special prosecutor to look into allegations against Hayes. Kitzhaber said no investigation was necessary, adding that his office had set up "protocols, guidelines and legal reviews" to make sure Hayes was following ethics laws.

"We welcome whatever scrutiny people want to give," Kitzhaber said at the debate. "We have not violated the law; we have simply given a modern professional woman an opportunity to continue her career. And in 2014, it seem ludicrous to conclude that a woman, who has had a successful career long before she met me, and long before she became first lady, should be expected to give up her career and her life's work because she is married—hopefully soon—to a governor."

But records show Kitzhaber did more than simply encourage Hayes to continue with her career; he gave her free access to the inner working of the governor's office and allowed her to land private consulting deals based on contacts she developed there.

The newly released records show how Kitzhaber's office shaped the standards applied to Hayes.

In 2013, Hayes signed consulting contracts worth $85,000 with three advocacy groups with issues before the governor's office: Demos, Resource Media, and the Energy Foundation. That sum more than tripled the income Hayes reported on her 2012 tax return.

Hayes' contracts, signed between March and June 2013, all posed potential conflicts of interest. Hayes had worked with the Energy Foundation and Demos in her role as first lady as adviser to Kitzhaber, and Resource Media was promoting many of the same issues Hayes was advocating in her public role.

In July 2013, Kitzhaber's then-chief of staff, Curtis Robinhold, and his general counsel, Liani Reeves, pushed to have Hayes make full disclosure of these potential conflicts, as the law requires.

Records show that on July 23, Robinhold and Reeves provided Hayes with a response to her notification that her contracts could present a potential conflict of interest.

The two Kitzhaber staff members wrote out directives that Hayes was to follow to prevent her from violating conflicts of interest laws.

"You should not engage in any consulting activities for [clients] using State supplies, facilities, equipment, employees, records or other public resources," Robinhold and Reeves wrote. "This includes use of government buildings such as conference rooms and the state-owned Mahonia Hall."

Robinhold and Reeves also tried to curb Hayes' use of her title of first lady in her consulting business. For example, in their July directive regarding her contract with the advocacy group Demos, they wrote to Hayes:

"You should not use your 'First Lady' title in the work that you are doing for Demos. In your outreach to government officials, stakeholders, business leaders, etc. or in conjunction with your organizing, information sharing, fundraising, public speaking or writing activities in your work for Demos, you should identify yourself as Cylvia Hayes, 3E Strategies and consultant for Demos, and you should not refer to your title or position as 'First Lady.'" (3E Strategies is Hayes' consulting company.)

Kitzhaber spokeswoman Rachel Wray tells WW the July directives were "drafts."

But that doesn't fit with what the records show. The directives are not labeled as drafts, and both Robinhold and Reeves signed and dated them. Records show, however, Hayes did not.

That forced Robinhold and Reeves to craft new guidelines Hayes would accept.

"Cylvia asked for clarification on different aspects of the forms, specifically related to her part-time residence at Mahonia and the First Lady title," Wray tells WW. "That clarification is reflected in the final versions."

More than a month later, Robinhold and Reeves then produced a second set of conflict guidelines dated Aug. 29. Those revised guidelines dropped the prohibition on using Mahonia Hall for work with her existing clients—and the prohibition on Hayes using her title.

"You may include your 'first lady' title in a biographical profile associated with your contract work already obtained," they wrote in the Aug. 29 document. "You should keep a clear distinction between when you are performing work related to your paid position with Demos and when operating as First Lady of Oregon," they wrote.

Hayes signed the Aug. 29 documents that relaxed the ethical standards Robinhold and Reeves originally sought. Records show, however, Hayes continued to advocate on behalf of clients using the first lady title and without disclosing her work as a paid consultant.

Robinhold, who left Kitzhaber's office earlier this year, was traveling and unavailable for comment. Reeves assisted Wray in responding to WW's questions about the conflict forms.

Kitzhaber's Staff Aided Financially Troubled Former Client of First Lady Cylvia Hayes

The governor's office intervened with state Energy Department to delay foreclosure

Oregon First Lady Cylvia Hayes and Gov. John Kitzhaber - oregon.gov

The owner of the Pronghorn Golf Course in Bend was in deep financial trouble.

It was November 2011, and the golf course had been slammed by the recession that had battered Bend. The course's developer, California-based Hix Rubenstein, faced foreclosure on a $58 million bank loan and a $1.8 million loan from the state of Oregon.

The company's owner, Tom Hix, needed help in a hurry. If the state went through with its foreclosure, that could jeopardize his efforts to keep his golf course afloat.

So Hix turned to his former business consultant who was in a position to help bail him out: First Lady Cylvia Hayes.

Emails released to WW under the state's public records law show Gov. John Kitzhaber's office went to extraordinary lengths to intervene in the Hix case and to delay a scheduled foreclosure sale of Hayes' former client's property.

The state loan came from the Oregon Department of Energy, and officials there tell WW they cannot remember another example of Kitzhaber's office getting so deeply involved in the case of a troubled loan.

In the end, the intervention of Kitzhaber's office only delayed the foreclosure. But the efforts came at a key time in Hix's efforts to rescue his golf course. An email obtained by WW shows Hix sending Hayes a note of gratitude, along with Kitzhaber chief of staff Curtis Robinhold and business adviser Scott Nelson, for the governor's office efforts to delay the foreclosure.

"Curtis, Scott & Cylvia, I wanted to personally thank you for your help and cooperation with our situation with [the Oregon Department of Energy]," Hix wrote on Dec. 1, 2011.

The records show Hayes' influence in the governor's office on behalf of her private consulting clients ran deeper than has been previously known. Emails show Hayes was kept up to date on Hix's pressure on the governor's office to delay foreclosure.

The records also raise new questions about why Kitzhaber required so little oversight of the intersection of Hayes' personal business and her role as a public official.

As WW has already reported, Hayes used her position as first lady and policy adviser to Kitzhaber to land private consulting deals with advocacy groups seeking Kitzhaber's support.

Records show Hayes traded on her title, making speeches billed as first lady without disclosing she was being paid by her private clients. Records also show Hayes used state employees to book her travel and help administer her private consulting business.

Hayes declined to answer written questions about her involvement in the Hix foreclosure in 2011.

"My work for Hix Rubenstein ended well before John was elected, and I have no ongoing relationship with the company," Hayes said in a statement to WW. She would not specify the date she last worked for the company.

Hayes denies she has engaged in conflicts of interest or any other wrongdoing.

"I comply with the very good advice given to me by the Governor's Office, which is designed and intended to protect the office and meet all applicable laws," Hayes said in her statement.

Hayes' long relationship with Hix's company is a matter of public record—and state documents show it continued at least through Kitzahber's 2010 campaign for governor. She listed Hix's company as a client in 2011 state disclosure forms and she still lists them as a client on the web site of her company, 3E Strategies, along with a testimonial from a Hix company executive.

"Our company enlisted the services of 3EStrategies to guide sustainable design on a number of our developments. Their breadth of understanding of sustainability, energy and green building concepts and solutions has been of great benefit to us," wrote Neal Aronson, Hix Rubenstein Development Companies. "Their strong ability to guide innovating thinking in business models and strategies has been invaluable."

In September 2005, records show, Hix's company borrowed $1.8 million from the Oregon Department of Energy to install solar panels on a maintenance building at its Bend golf resort. The company made payments for years, paying its debt down to $1.2 million but after it defaulted in 2010, the Department of Energy offered a variety of settlement options but Hix could not pay.

The Department of Energy then scheduled a foreclosure sale for Dec. 1, 2011.

On Nov. 18, 2011, less than two weeks before the sale, records show, Hix called Kitzhaber's then-Chief of Staff, Curtis Robinhold.

On the following day, a Saturday, he followed up, copying Hayes on an email to Robinhold.

"I have attached the letter and additional supporting information," Hix wrote in his email to Robinhold. "After you've reviewed the attachments, please let me know your availability for a call."

But Robinhold apparently did not respond, and the tone of Hix's next communication contained a note of desperation.

"We are a week away from the scheduled foreclosure sale which will have dramatic impacts on the project and its employees," Hix wrote on Nov. 23, 2011. "This is an extremely urgent issue and I would appreciate any assistance you can offer."

Robinhold asked Nelson, a senior Kitzhaber staffer, to look into the matter. Meanwhile, Hix and his colleagues kept pressure on the state.

"As an employer of 190 Oregonians and contributor to the state economy, I am stunned by the cavalier, dismissive and inflexible attitude taken by this agency," Reece Fulgham, a Hix official, wrote to Nelson in a Nov. 30 email at 9:21 in the evening, less than a day before the scheduled foreclosure sale. "I would appreciate anything you could do on our behalf and, assuming it's not a laughable request, would appreciate the opportunity to speak to Governor Kitzhaber."

The next morning, Nelson, the Kitzhaber staff adviser, pushed the Department of Energy for a delay on the foreclosure.

"Is there any downside (as a matter of risk and protection of our rights) to an extension?" Nelson asked the Department of Energy loan officer in an email sent Dec. 1, 2011, at 5:36 am.

The agency caved in and rescheduled the foreclosure auction for 14 days later.

Then-Department of Energy director Bob Repine didn't like his agency being pushed around.

"It appears we have agreed to extend the sheriff sale," Repine wrote to Nelson at 8:43 am on Dec. 1, 2011. "This last minute effort by the owners using statements such as 'state not being responsible' are very concerning to me since, in my opinion, we have gone well out of our way to work with this group for over 2 years with little response from their side until the twelve (sic) hour of the sale."

Repine declined to comment. Robinhold is in Asia and could not be reached for comment. Nelson didn't respond to WW's requests for an interview.

If Repine was frustrated, Hix was thrilled with the Department of Energy's giving him a two-week extension on the foreclosure.

"Their agreement to extend the date of the sale is extremely helpful. I just wanted the three of you to know that I appreciate your efforts," he wrote to Hayes, Robinhold and Nelson on Dec. 1. "Hopefully, this extension will allow us the opportunity to re-cap[italize] the company and resolve the ODOE situation once and for all."

Emails show that Hix engaged in frantic negotiations over the next two weeks with two potential buyers, so the delay gave his company opportunities to better its financial position it otherwise would not have had. Plenty of businesses come to the governor's office seeking help of various kinds but few can trade on a long-time business relationship with a first lady who also advises the governor.

Neither current Department of Energy director Michael Kaplan nor other agency officials could point to another example of the governor's office intervening with the agency on behalf of a borrower.

"It's really hard to say," Kaplan told WW.

New Emails Show First Lady Cylvia Hayes Regularly Used State Employee To Book Personal Business Travel

Oregon First Lady Cylvia Hayes - Courtesy of KATU

Newly released emails show that Oregon first lady Cylvia Hayes regularly used a state-paid employee in the office of her fiancé, Gov. John Kitzhaber, to book travel and hotel for Hayes' private consulting business.

The emails show Hayes used public resources for her personal benefit, treating her government assistant as a private secretary for her consulting business.

The emails further illustrate reporting in an Oct. 8 WW story that showed Hayes mixed her dual role as first lady and adviser to the governor with her private consulting business, 3E Strategies. In November, following WW's stories, the Oregon Government Ethics Commission announced that it would investigate Hayes and Kitzhaber under the state's conflict of interest law, which prohibits a public official such as Hayes from using her position for personal gain.

Kitzhaber's office released the emails to WW on Friday, as a result of a request made by the newspaper in early October under the Oregon public records law.

The records show Hayes directed Mary Rowinski, a $60,000-a-year aide in Kitzhaber's office, to book hotels, airplane reservations and ground transportation for trips so Hayes could travel for her private consulting business, which expanded after Kitzhaber took office in 2011.

Rowinski also scheduled business meetings for Hayes, maintained Hayes' personal calendar, scheduling details such as troubleshooting meetings for Hayes' business website.

Kitzhaber spokeswoman Amy Wojcicki says the governor's staff was unaware that Hayes was using a state-paid assistant to make travel arrangement for her private business.

"If she engaged state staff to assist with travel arrangements and was reimbursed for any travel expenses, it was because our office had the understanding that she was making the request in her official role as first lady," Wojcicki told WW in an email.

As first lady, Hayes frequently represents the state and the governor. She has also served as an adviser to Kitzhaber on energy and economic development issues.

That work for the Kitzhaber administration put Hayes into contact with three private nonprofits seeking to influence state policy: Demos, a New York think tank; the Energy Foundation, a San Francisco group that advocates for renewable fuels; and Resource Media, a Seattle public relations firm that works on climate change issues.

In 2013, Hayes signed consulting contracts with all three groups, seeking to advance their agendas even as she served as an adviser to Kitzhaber on the same policy areas that concerned her clients. The contracts paid Hayes $85,000 and marked a major expansion of her business.

The newly released emails show numerous examples of Hayes instructing Rowinski to book her travel.

In April 2013, for example, Hayes arranged to speak at a conference on ocean acidification at the University of California, Irvine on behalf of her client, Resource Media.

"Hi Cylvia. You've been confirmed as a panelist (or a speaker, details to come) for the OA conference on the afternoon of Friday, May 3rd at UC Irvine," Resource Media's Julie Dixon wrote to Hayes on April, 1, 2013.

Hayes then instructed Rowinski to make arrangements for her business trip.

"Greetings M," Hayes wrote to Rowinski on April 9, 2013. "Will you please check into airfare from PDX to Irvine California departing May 2nd late in the day and returning late in the day May 3rd?"

Rowinski booked that flight and many others.

In May 2013, Hayes arranged to speak at Capitol Hill Ocean Week, in Washington, D.C., again on behalf of Resource Media.

"Greetings M," Hayes wrote on May 20, 2013. "Please reserve a room for me June 4th and 5th."

Later that month, Hayes traveled to Vermont to speak at a conference and afterwards to Maryland to host a panel for another client, Demos. That trip required dozens of emails between Hayes and Rowinski because Hayes had initially committed to going just to Vermont. She subsequently told Rowinski to cancel that ticket and rebook a ticket that would allow her to go both places.

"Could you check on a flight from Vermont to Baltimore on June 13th and then Baltimore to PDX on the 15th?," Hayes wrote to Rowinski on March 21, 2013. In that email to the state-paid employee, she identified herself as CEO of 3E Strategies, her consulting company.

Hayes' frequent travel was often confusing to Rowinski because it was often unclear to her whether Hayes was making trips on behalf of the state or her private consulting clients.

"Refresh my memory—are you supposed to get reimbursed for this trip? If so, do you have any receipts?" Rowinski wrote after Hayes returned from a trip to Washington in April 2013.

Emails show Hayes' travel required a lot of Rowinski's time to document.

"I will leave a pile of things for you on the counter at Mahonia [the governor's mansion]," Hayes wrote to Rowinski on June 18, 2013. "There will be several sets of receipts. Will you please copy and scan those into electronic docs for each organization/client so that I can send them?"

Sometimes, the arrangements grew more complicated. In October 2013, for example, Hayes wanted to travel to Seattle on behalf of Demos, her New York-based client. On that trip, she wanted to bring her dog, a Rhodesian ridgeback named Tessa.

Finding a Seattle hotel that allowed dogs proved challenging—and the job fell to Rowinski, who was on the public payroll while doing work for Hayes' private business.

"Boy, every hotel/motel I've tried in the downtown area do not take pets, like the Travelodge, Quality Inn, Red Lion, Holiday Inn Express and Motel 8 will only take pets under 30 lbs," Rowinski wrote. "Will the state be paying for this? I know it's a lot of money, but this is fairly last minute. The Monaco has government rate cheaper rooms, but it is too late to grab one of those."

The best deal Rowinski could find was the Hotel Monaco at $312 a night. Hayes could live with that.

"Let's leave it as is then," Hayes wrote. "Demos will reimburse me."

Oracle Files New Lawsuit Against Patricia McCaig and Other Kitzhaber Campaign Advisers

Software giant, seeking $23 million in damages, alleges the consultants interfered with Cover Oregon for political reasons.

Patricia McCaig - IMAGE: Vivian Johnson

Oracle America Corp. today filed a lawsuit in Multnomah County Court against the campaign consultants for former Gov. John Kitzhaber. The lawsuit alleges the consultants interfered with the state's handling of the troubled Cover Oregon health care web site in order to help Kitzhaber get re-elected.

The lawsuit names as defendants Patricia McCaig, Kevin Looper, Scott Nelson, Tim Raphael and Mark Wiener. Oracle is seeking damages of $23 million.

The lawsuit is the latest chapter in the dispute over who's to blame for the failure of Cover Oregon, the website that was supposed to allow Oregonians to buy health insurance online. The federal government provided $350 million for the project but it never worked.

As Kitzhaber approached the election year of 2014, reports of his mismanagement of Cover Oregon in The Oregonian and on KATU battered his popularity with voters.

As WW reported last year and again this week, Kitzhaber responded to his plummeting popularity by turning over control of the response to Cover Oregon to his campaign consultants, led by McCaig, a long-time confidante of the governor's. (Kitzhaber resigned Feb. 18 amid influence peddling allegations involving him and former first lady Cylvia Hayes.)

The 33-page complaint Oracle filed alleges that political expediency, rather than the public interest, drove the state's decisions to abandon the website Oracle built and to sue the company. Oracle says that by February, the website worked, but political consultants convinced Kitzhaber to abandon it.

Here's what the lawsuit says:

> Defendants' interference caused Cover Oregon to "throw away something that has value" to the citizens of Oregon in order to further their own political objectives of ending public discussion of Oregon's HIX in order to win re-election.

State law requires that campaign activity, which is aimed at electing candidates, be kept separate from government operations and decision-making. Oracle's lawyers make that argument today:

> Persons holding political office are tasked with acting— and are vested with power and authority to act—in the best interests of their constituents. Failure to maintain clear lines between the actions of the candidate and the actions of the elected official creates a conflict of interest and constitutes unethical behavior. When Defendants, paid campaign workers, tampered with the decision-making of Cover Oregon, they used the power and influence afforded them by their association with Governor Kitzhaber to shape the decision- making of an independent public corporation. These actions were unethical and improper.

"The lawsuit speaks for itself," Deborah Hellinger, an Oracle spokesperson said in a statement. "The work on the exchange was complete by February 2014, but going live with the website and providing a means for all Oregonians to sign up for health insurance coverage didn't match the former-Governor's re-election strategy to 'go after' Oracle.

"Political operatives Patricia McCaig, Kevin Looper, Scott Nelson, Tim Raphael, and Mark Wiener acted in the shadows," Hellinger continues, "and took actions to undermine the ability of Oregonians to receive health coverage; create a false narrative blaming Oracle for the state's failures; and ultimately interfere with Oracle's business."

The defendants were not immediately available for comment.

Oracle Files Tort Claim Notices Against Former Gov. John Kitzhaber and Top Aide

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Oracle America Inc. this afternoon filed tort claim notices with the Oregon Department of Administrative Services, notifying the state that the company may sue former Gov. John Kitzhaber and his former chief of staff, Mike Bonetto.

Oracle's filings say it may sue the two because of their alleged role in deciding to abandon the work Oracle had done to create a website for Cover Oregon, the failed $305 million health insurance website. Oracle says that decision was made to help get Kitzhaber re-elected, rather than because it was the best policy outcome for Oregonians.

Oracle this morning filed a lawsuit against five Kitzhaber campaign consultants, alleging they made decisions that harmed Oracle for Kitzhaber's political benefit. Kitzhaber resigned Feb. 18 amid allegations of influence-peddling involving him and former first lady Cylvia Hayes.

Here's a copy of the tort claim filed today against Kitzhaber.

Michael Jordan
Chief Operating Officer and Director
Oregon Department of Administrative Services
155 Cottage Street NE, U20
Salem, Oregon 97301-3966

Re: Tort Claim Notice

Dear Mr. Jordan:

Oracle America, Inc. ("Oracle") hereby provides notice that it may assert a claim for damages against former Governor John Kitzhaber in his personal capacity related to his involvement with the "Kitzhaber for Governor" reelection campaign and Oregon's health insurance exchange, including, but not limited to, decisions not to pay Oracle America, Inc. ("Oracle") for work it performed in connection with the exchange and the decision to move to the federal exchange, Healthcare.gov. Oracle provides this notice out of an abundance of caution to ensure that it has satisfied the requirements of ORS § 30.275, in the event that Oracle pursues a claim against former Governor Kitzhaber in his official capacity.

Oracle discovered the facts and circumstances giving rise to this claim on February 25, 2015, when they were disclosed in an article published in the Willamette Week. From at least late 2013 through August 2014, the "Kitzhaber for Governor" political committee, including Governor Kitzhaber and other individuals associated with the political committee, improperly inserted themselves into the decision-making process of the Oregon Health Insurance Exchange Corporation's ("Cover Oregon") in an effort to deflect blame for problems with the Oregon Health Insurance Exchange ("HIX") away from former Governor Kitzhaber. In particular, Governor Kitzhaber and individuals associated with his campaign caused Cover Oregon to abandon the Oregon HIX, to not pay Oracle for work it performed in connection with the Oregon's HIX, and to blame Oracle publicly and erroneously for the failed October 2013 launch of the Oregon HIX.

DAS spokesman Matt Shelby said the state does not comment on potential or pending litigation.

Relying On An Old Man's Money

After Hayes got nearly $40,000 from an octogenarian, Kitzhaber bailed her out.

TIGHT FOCUS: Gov. John Kitzhaber (seen here with Republican Dennis Richardson during the Oct. 15, 2014, governor's race debate sponsored by The Oregonian and KGW-TV) said in his resignation statement Feb. 15 that he had been "charged, tried, convicted and sentenced by the media with no due process and no independent verification of the allegations involved." - IMAGE: James Rexroad

Tom Bates could have warned former Gov. John Kitzhaber about getting mixed up with Cylvia Hayes' finances.

Bates' father, Whitney Bates, was 46 years older than Hayes when he became enthralled and then financially entangled with her before his death in 2006.

Bates says his father, a retired history professor who taught at Portland State University, took Hayes to Paris and loaned her nearly $20,000. He also invested another $18,500 to help Hayes buy a house in Bend.

Tom Bates says he spent years after his father's death trying to get the money back from Hayes.

"She's really good at manipulating the truth," Bates says.

Neither Hayes nor Kitzhaber agreed to be interviewed for this story.

Documents that Bates provided to WW detail a complicated and sometimes contentious financial relationship between Hayes and the Bates family.

Whitney Bates was a keen fisherman and gardener, and an ardent Democrat who ran unsuccessfully for the Oregon House in 1970. He met Hayes in 2002, when he was a widower and she was running for an Oregon House seat as a Democrat from Bend.

He was 81; she was 35.

"He was really smitten," says Charles M. White, a retired PSU professor who says he once had lunch with Hayes and Bates in Portland. "She talked a good game. He'd talk about her all the time, telling people how wonderful she was."

Hayes lost her legislative race but won a friend in Bates.

Tom Bates said his father had about 100,000 frequent-flyer miles on Alaska Airlines when he and Hayes met. Neither of them had ever been to Paris, so they decided to use the miles to go.

"There was nothing romantic between them," Tom Bates says. "But they went over there for a week or so."

Tom Bates recalls his father saying he wanted to loan money to Hayes, but he was unaware how much money Whitney Bates had given her until after the retired professor's 2006 death. Only then did Tom Bates find out his father had loaned Hayes nearly $20,000.

"I told my dad it was OK to lend her a few thousand. I had no idea he had loaned her so much," Bates says. "We got a lawyer involved and went round and round trying to get her to sign a promissory note—and she finally did."

Bates says Hayes slowly repaid the debt.

But he also learned his father had given Hayes another $18,500—money she told him was an investment in a house in Bend.

In 2004, records show, Hayes bought a home in Bend for $149,000. The property deed and a mortgage registered with Deschutes County show that Hayes claimed to be the sole purchaser of the house.

Hayes swore on her mortgage documents that nobody else had an ownership interest in the home. But records provided to WW by Tom Bates show that was not true.

Hayes had formed a partnership called Triple E Investments. (She never registered that business with the state Corporation Division.)

Records that Hayes sent to Tom Bates show Triple E Investments actually owned the house. Records show that Bates' father had given Hayes $18,500 for a 40 percent stake in the house.

Hayes didn't disclose any of this information on the mortgage documents or in county records.

The documents also show Hayes owned 30 percent, while two couples, Carol and Bob Tucker and Kathryn and Steve Gray, owned the remaining share of the house. (Neither the Grays nor the Tuckers responded to WW's questions.)

Tom Bates wanted Hayes to cash out his father's investment, but it proved difficult to get Hayes to agree.

"Obviously your offer is a great deal for me," Hayes wrote to Bates in a September 2008 email. "But I need to see if I can get the financing to work."

Six months earlier, however, Hayes had drained most of the equity in the house by taking out a $50,000 second mortgage.

That left only $10,000 in equity for all the partners combined. So even though the house had increased significantly in value, Whitney Bates' original investment had shrunk.

In September 2010, Tom Bates agreed to sell his late father's stake back to Hayes for $7,000—a significant loss.

Bates says even then Hayes didn't pay him. He says it was John Kitzhaber who wrote him a personal check.

Bates says he never shook the feeling that Hayes had taken advantage of his elderly father. He's also troubled that Kitzhaber knew about her debts and the house-investment scheme.

"I think the whole thing with the house was kind of a sham, not on the up and up," Bates says. "It does seem kind of strange that this was an investment—yet nobody's name is on the deed except hers."

Also in this week's paper:

"What He Left Behind": What's in the emails Kitzhaber's office tried to have destroyed.

"Hit the Delete Button": Kitzhaber's office's explanation for requesting deletion of emails doesn't hold water.

"Ringing the Truth": Could Kitzhaber and Hayes benefit from spousal privilege if they married?

"Carbon Copy": A climate-change bill will test Gov. Kate Brown's independence.

WW intern Anna Walters contributed reporting to this story.

Title Fight

New documents show why first lady Cylvia Hayes is subject to Oregon's ethics laws.

OFFICIAL BUSINESS: One way first lady Cylvia Hayes can avoid investigation by the Oregon Government Ethics Commission is convincing the panel she never met the legal definition of "public official." - IMAGE: oregon.gov

Cylvia Hayes has garnered many titles in her career. She is CEO of her consulting business, 3E Strategies. She has carried the designation of adviser to her fiance, Gov. John Kitzhaber. And she's best known as first lady of Oregon.

But right now there's one title Hayes, who declined to comment for this story, is trying to avoid —that of "public official" as defined by state law.

That might seem a trivial distinction. It's not.

The allegations of wrongdoing against Hayes—that she used her position in the governor's office to enrich herself by $85,000—could turn on whether she fits that legal definition.

Following WW's initial stories about her actions ("First Lady Inc.," WW, Oct. 8, 2014), Hayes faces a possible investigation by the Oregon Government Ethics Commission. Only people defined as public officials are subject to state ethics laws.

Hayes could get out from under that investigation in a hurry if she can convince the ethics commission she never qualified as a public official.

But records recently released to WW by the governor's office strengthen the case that Hayes was not only a public official, as defined by law, but someone who sought increasing clout and authority in Kitzhaber's administration.

Here's evidence from the newly released documents—as well as previously disclosed records—that the ethics commission is likely to weigh as it determines whether to investigate Hayes:

Hayes ran a state program. The title of first lady is not defined in state law, and Hayes was never paid for her work on behalf of the state.

That hardly matters. According to the ethics commission's 2010 guidebook, a public official includes anyone who is "an unpaid volunteer for a state, county or city agency or special district [or] anyone serving the State of Oregon or any of its political subdivisions."

Hayes has her own official page on the state's website, uses the Oregon state seal in her correspondence, and refers in that correspondence to the "office of the first lady."

She also runs a major Kitzhaber program, the Oregon Prosperity Initiative, dedicated to, according to a now-deleted Web page, "overcoming poverty and empowering citizens to maximize their potential."

As part of that initiative, Hayes worked closely with Kitzhaber's staff and convened meetings among leaders of nonprofit organizations and state officials. As the records released last week show, she frequently traveled the country representing Kitzhaber and the state of Oregon while giving speeches in California, Louisiana, Minnesota and New York.

The state paid for Hayes to travel on official business. The records show the state routinely reimbursed Hayes for travel she characterized as official state trips for her, not just as Kitzhaber's companion.

The documents released last week show Hayes sought $8,334 in state reimbursement on 19 separate expense forms for official travel. Records show that in August, Hayes traveled to Seattle with a security officer from the Oregon State Police dignitary protection unit to meet with Washington Gov. Jay Inslee and his wife, Trudi.

Other out-of-state travel paid for by taxpayers included a $2,413 trip in February 2012 to Washington, D.C., for a meeting of the National Governors Association. Hayes filled out the conference registration form to say she was "representing: state of Oregon."

Her taxpayer-paid travel also included a $1,475 trip to New Orleans in May for the Association for Enterprise Opportunity's national conference, where she represented the state on a panel that discussed the "power of microbusiness."

Hayes routinely directed state officials. Since Kitzhaber took office in January 2011, Hayes has joined in senior staff meetings, met regularly with top state officials and, in her own words, served as "a policy advisor to the Governor on the issues of clean energy and economic development."

On the website of her consulting firm, Bend-based 3E Strategies, Hayes says her duties as first lady included "leading a State of Oregon trade mission to Ghangzhou China."

The records show that on June 24, 2013, while visiting family in Oklahoma, Hayes sent Kitzhaber's official energy adviser, Margi Hoffmann, orders for a reception that night to mark the end of the legislative session. Hayes could not be there, but she told Hoffmann to speak for her. Her directions demonstrated that Hayes considered herself a key player in policy and legislative debates.

"Margi, I would suggest you make a few comments in my stead (but obviously in your voice and perspective)," Hayes wrote. "Might be good for you to sum up all our successes this session and thank the advocates for all their help."

Kitzhaber's own lawyer considered Hayes a public official. Records show the governor's general counsel, Liani Reeves, repeatedly tried to get Hayes to follow ethics rules that govern public officials.

But more recently, Kitzhaber has tried to cast doubt on the nature of Hayes' role. He directed Reeves to send a letter to the ethics commission Oct. 13 asking whether Hayes really fit the definition of public official.

In that same letter, however, Reeves acknowledged there had previously been no doubt about her role before questions surrounding Hayes' private dealings had been made public.

"Over the past three-and-a-half years," Reeves wrote, "the Governor's office has treated Cylvia Hayes in her first lady role as a 'public official.'"

Top official in Kate Brown administration launches criminal probe of Kitzhaber email leak

Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive By Nick Budnick | The Oregonian/OregonLive

Email the author | Follow on Twitter

on February 23, 2015 at 9:43 AM, updated February 25, 2015 at 11:02 PM

This article has been updated with new information from state officials.

A top official in Gov. Kate Brown's administration has launched a criminal investigation searching for the person who leaked former Gov. John Kitzhaber's personal emails.

Meanwhile, two high-ranking state managers were placed on administrative leave on Friday pending a personnel investigation that is separate from the criminal one. One, Michael Rodgers, is the same manager who blocked a well-publicized effort by Kitzhaber's staff to delete copies of his personal emails stored in state archives.

Rodgers is the interim director of the state data center that warehouses state emails. Marshall Wells, the center's technical engineering and security manager, was also placed on leave. State officials wouldn't explain why the two are on leave and whether it concerns the leak, or their participation in the department's response to the leak.

Many sensitive state emails have leaked over the years, but none have sparked a known criminal probe. The leaker at worst likely could face a relatively minor criminal charge: second-degree official misconduct, a misdemeanor.

Michael Jordan, director of the state Department of Administrative Services, disclosed the investigation in an email to agency employees last Wednesday. He stated that he'd requested the Oregon State Police investigate, and to expect to see investigators on site.

"The OSP investigation was initiated by Michael Jordan," said DAS spokesman Matt Shelby. He added that to the best of his knowledge, Brown did not direct Jordan to do so. Jordan called Oregon State Police Superintendent Richard Evans, Jr., who also reports to Brown.

Jordan is Brown's highest ranking administrator, reporting directly to her. Brown spokeswoman Kristen Grainger said Jordan informed Brown of the criminal investigation only after it was underway, but the governor does not question the decision.

Brown trusts Jordan's intent to "carry out the duties of his office" including "security and transparency," Grainger said.

The leak investigation was triggered by the Feb. 18 publication of the leaked emails by Willamette Week. The newspaper didn't cite the source of the material.

Among the emails was an exchange between Kitzhaber and his ethics lawyer, Stephen Janik, that confirmed the ex-governor's involvement in a strategy to blunt an ethics review of Hayes' conduct. The Oregonian/OregonLive earlier reported on that strategy, citing filings made with the Oregon Government Ethics Commission.

The significance of the strategy is that it predated Kitzhaber's statements at a Jan. 30 news conference that he and Hayes would cooperate fully with the ethics review.

Jordan was one of Kitzhaber's closest allies in state government. Jordan and Cylvia Hayes, Kitzhaber's fiancée, shared an office for a time, and he worked closely with Hayes on some of her policy initiatives.

"This comes down to trust," Jordan wrote in his Feb. 18 email. "Trust in our ability to securely store sensitive information; trust in our process to determine what information is public; trust that we can work with agencies to strike the appropriate balance between security and transparency."

The state data center that is the focus of the investigation is part of Jordan's department. However, on Friday, Jordan transferred direct management of the center from his deputy director, Sarah Jo Chaplen, to Chief Information Officer Alex Pettit, an at-will appointee who reports directly to the governor.

Removing Chaplen, Rodgers and Wells from the administration of the data center in effect places the archive of state emails directly under Brown's control as the state responds to a wide-ranging federal subpoena about the activities of Kitzhaber and Hayes.

The FBI and the state Justice Department have launched separate but overlapping investigations into possible influence peddling involving Kitzhaber and Hayes.

On Feb. 5, a Kitzhaber staffer and friend, Jan Murdock, contacted the state data center to order the deletion from state archives of emails Kitzhaber sent and received from his personal account.

The effort to delete documents, coming as it did among allegations of potential criminal activity by Kitzhaber and Hayes, raised concerns among data center workers that potential evidence would be destroyed.

Rodgers backed up staff and did not allow the emails to be deleted. Subsequently, Kitzhaber's staff said the personal emails would be reviewed to determine which should be disclosed. Kitzhaber resigned before that review was completed.

The seriousness of the investigation will likely send a message to public servants who want to blow the whistle on misconduct, said Tung Yin, a criminal law expert at Lewis & Clark Law School, in an email.

"It wouldn't be surprising if this investigation turns out to have a chilling effect on future whistleblowers/leakers," he wrote.

James Moore, a politics professor at Pacific University, said the leaker may have been a whistleblower whose primary motivation was to avoid improper destruction of public records. He called a criminal investigation "overkill" and said it conflicted with Brown's public statements embracing transparency.

"I think it raises questions about how open the state government wants to be," said Moore, who directs the Tom McCall Center for Policy Innovation. "You want to figure out what the leaks were and you want to try to figure out motives, but all that can be done in a non-criminal kind of way."

Grainger, the Brown spokeswoman, said the probe "in no way affects our intention to release as many records as we can, as soon as we can."

The scope of the state police investigation, and whether it focuses only on the state data center, is unclear. Copies of Kitzhaber's personal emails gathered by Jordan's department were shared with the then-governor's staff before they were leaked. It's also unclear whether others had access to his personal gmail account.

Kitzhaber's defense lawyer, Janet Hoffman, on Friday requested an independent criminal investigation into the leak, apparently not realizing a probe had already begun. She asked Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum to hire an independent investigator because of the AG's marriage to Willamette Week publisher Richard Meeker. Hoffman noted that some of the emails were attorney-client privileged and would never be subject to disclosure under the state's records law.

With IRS, FBI investigating Kitzhaber, Oregon manager denies punishing managers for preserving evidence

The IRS has partnered with the FBI in the broad-ranging federal investigation of former Gov. John Kitzhaber and his fiancée, Cylvia Hayes, The Oregonian/OregonLive has learned.

Michael Jordan, the state's chief operating officer, said Wednesday that he was questioned two weeks ago by agents from the FBI and IRS.

Jordan's revelation is the first public sign the IRS is part of the public corruption investigation. An IRS spokesman said the agency doesn't comment about ongoing investigations.

The Oregonian/OregonLive was the first to report that Hayes' federal tax return for 2012 didn't appear to reflect all her income from her environmental consulting business. The income could have been reported on her business tax return, but Hayes and her attorneys have not responded to repeated requests for those returns or for comment. Hayes hired a criminal defense attorney to deal with her tax situation.

Jordan, who runs the state Department of Administrative Services, also disclosed in an interview Wednesday that state technicians swept through offices of the governor after Kate Brown took office to gather up computers and other electronics used by Kitzhaber staffers. They told Jordan they did so after discussions with the office of U.S. Attorney Amanda Marshall.

Marshall's office didn't return a call seeking comment, and Brown's office declined comment.

Kitzhaber has repeatedly denied wrongdoing, while Hayes has declined repeated requests for comment.

Jordan volunteered for the interview to follow up on the report by The Oregonian/OregonLive Monday that he initiated a criminal investigation to determine who leaked Kitzhaber's personal emails. Jordan said he wanted to flesh out the minimal responses provided by his staff for that story.

Two days after asking police to investigate, Jordan put two managers from his agency on administrative leave while a separate internal investigation got underway.

Some observers thought that the first move looked like overkill done to avenge Kitzhaber while the second cast suspicion that the two managers were the leakers. Jordan said the two were not placed on leave in connection with the leak probe. He said he did not punish them for preserving evidence, either.

Jordan also said he wasn't using the criminal probe as a way to punish the leaker. He said his job is to protect the state's records. He requested the Oregon State Police investigate because the agency has forensic experts and because he had concerns about the agency's computer security.

The two managers, he said, were placed on leave primarily to combat a situation he felt was "out of control" - including an apparently unauthorized move by one of them to seize computers and cell phones from the governor's staff as evidence for the federal probe.

In the interview, Jordan recounted the events leading to the leak investigation. Brown, in office just a week, has taken considerable public heat after it appeared her administration was trying to find whistleblowers.

"I've been doing this for 30 years now," he said. "This is the most bizarre set of circumstances I've lived through as a manager."

Jordan said in December Kitzhaber called, asking to confirm that the state data system was archiving emails from a gmail account he established for state business. Jordan said the call was sparked by questions from The Oregonian/OregonLive about Kitzhaber's use of non-state email accounts for public business.

Jordan said he assured Kitzhaber his emails had indeed been preserved.

The matter became complicated earlier this month as the agency processed a Feb. 2 request from The Oregonian/OregonLive for the governor's emails, Jordan said. Agency officials then realized emails from two private accounts kept by the governor for personal business had also been archived by the state.

Three days later, a Kitzhaber friend and staffer, Jan Murdock, called the agency, asking that the personal emails be "removed" or deleted from state archives. State workers and managers of the state data center feared the move would result in the illegal destruction of records. They refused, backed up by Michael Rodgers, acting director of the center. Federal investigators have demanded documents about the incident.

Jordan said he supported the decision when he found out about it the next day.

The following week, Jordan said he was at home in Canby following a stressful day with rampant rumors Kitzhaber would resign. There was a knock at the front door.

Two agents - one FBI, one IRS -- questioned Jordan for an hour. He said they focused on three questions. Two were about Hayes' work for Demos, a nonprofit that was one of her consulting clients. They asked about emails showing that Kitzhaber urged Jordan to hire a man connected to Demos.

Jordan said he told the agents he didn't feel pressure to hire the man and that he didn't know at the time Hayes was being paid by Demos.

Jordan said he also answered agents' questions about whether Kitzhaber's emails were being preserved. They were, he said.

The next morning Jordan said he was leaving his office to walk to the Capitol when he encountered "my two buddies" -- the agents. They climbed out of their parked car and handed him the federal subpoena demanding email correspondence sent and received by Kitzhaber, Hayes, and 15 employees - including Jordan.

After arriving at the Capitol, in an 11 a.m. meeting, Kitzhaber announced to Jordan and other senior staffers that he was resigning.

The following week, on Feb. 17, Jordan said a Kitzhaber aide tipped him that there might have been a leak of Kitzhaber's personal emails. The following morning, those emails were the basis of a story published in Willamette Week that cited, among other topics, attorney-client communications.

Jordan said he called State Police Supt. Rich Evans to ask for an investigation because he felt potential evidence should not be leaked during a probe. He said he wasn't sure a crime had occurred.

Thoughts of Kitzhaber or retribution against the leaker never crossed his mind, he said.

He said Kate Brown hadn't formally taken office at the time he called Evans. Jordan said deciding to seek the investigation was within his authority.

Jordan described how on the next day Marshall Wells, an executive in the state's data center, took a technical worker with him to the governor's office.

Wells secured computers apparently belonging to some of the people named in a Feb. 12 subpoena issued by a federal grand jury. He also took possession of some state-owned cell phones and iPads that had been used by Kitzhaber's staff.

That collection effort continued into the next day, Jordan said.

Wells has said he gathered the equipment after speaking to prosecutors in the U.S. Attorney's office, according to Jordan. However, Jordan says that office denies encouraging the move.

Jordan immediately placed Rodgers and Wells on administrative leave pending a personnel investigation. Jordan did not explain why he placed Rodgers on leave or what became of the seized equipment.

He said he sought the expertise of state Chief Information Officer Alex Pettit to review security concerns at the data center. He placed Pettit in charge of the center, which has had a history of internal discord with employees complaining of retaliation, discrimination and other unfair treatment.

Rodgers and Wells referred questions to the department.

Jordan said he was motivated to launch the personnel investigation over concern his managers weren't following the chain of command, triggered by the seizure of computers.

"We did enough interviewing with enough folks preliminarily to determine that there was no one within the structure of our leadership that had given permission to do that," he said.

> Dear ETS staff,
> As you are likely aware, emails to and from Governor Kitzhaber have been a subject of much scrutiny over the past several weeks. While responding to a recent records request, staff in my office discovered that DAS was archiving emails from the governor's personal as well as professional accounts. That prompted a discussion with the Governor's Office to ensure we were maintaining the records we have a responsibility maintain, while discontinuing the archival of emails that contain no state business and are personal in nature.
> It has become apparent, that about that same time, some or all of the Governor's emails in DAS possession were provided to a reporter.
> As a public agency, many laws govern our actions. Some laws require us to disclose public information; others require us to maintain confidentiality in certain circumstances. The clandestine disclosure of these emails occurred before any analysis of our responsibilities could be completed.
> That work will continue. Governor Kitzhaber's emails have been secured in their entirety. In addition, I've asked Oregon State Police to investigate this information breach. You may see OSP investigators on site over the next several days, performing their work.
> Bottom line, this comes down to trust. Trust in our ability to securely store sensitive information; trust in our process to determine what information is public; trust that we can work with agencies to strike the appropriate balance between security and transparency. The recent breach has upset that balance. We're working now to restore it.

Remarks:	Meeting with Rodgers, Wells, Vahan, Ritchie at ETS for log search

DISTRIBUTION:

MENTIONED OFFICERS:
Previously mentioned

ACTION TAKEN:

On 02/20/2015, at about 10:00 AM, John Ritchie and I met at the Enterprise Technology Services building (ETS) on Airport Rd. in Salem for follow up. We met with Michael Rodgers, Marshall Wells and Vahan Michaelian to discuss what computer evidence was available for our investigation.

The five of us met in Marshall's office. Vahan brought in his laptop to Marshall's office for access to logs and files that might be of interest. Vahan and I sat together where I could see his laptop; neither Marshall, Ritchie, nor Michael could see what was on Vahan's laptop screen while Vahan and I searched.

Marshall provided me with a thumb drive (entered into evidence as SLP-E01), which had some initial logs and screen captures recovered by John Ritchie and Shawn Dawson on 02/17/2015 when they were initially tasked with limiting access to email archive services related to John Kitzhaber.

I had asked John Ritchie to join me in this meeting due to his enterprise system knowledge. He was present for the first half of the day, but later it was determined he would not be needed after lunch.

Vahan explained the ETS email infrastructure to me and provided suggestions to what might be useful to this investigation. Vahan explained that ETS has an archive manager called Dell Archive Manager (DAM), which contains all email, sent and received to the "state.or.us" and "oregon.gov" domains. This included the Governor's office (GOV), Chief Operating Officer (COO) and the DAS Technical Support Center (TSC).

Vahan explained that the DAM could be accessed by any user, from any location on the Internet, but they would only have access to their own email account. DAM provides the ability to conduct basic types of searching, such as date and time ranges and keywords. A standard user can export archived emails from their own account but they don't have the ability to delete emails from the DAM. A person with administrator privileges or members of TSC, have the added ability to [redacted] After a search has been completed the user has the ability to export the results into a single file that can be opened with Microsoft Outlook. This file type has the three letter file extension of .PST. Vahan showed me that each search conducted on the DAM system was also logged, showing the account user account, account searched, keywords used and date range used. A person with administrator privileges has the ability to [redacted] Members of the TSC staff did not have the ability to delete emails from the DAM.

Vahan also explained that the state had a file server and file activity on this server is recorded [redacted]

SLP-E01 contained [redacted]ogs created by Marshall of the any files with the file extension of .PST. These initial logs covered the file server domains of GOV*, COO*. The logs listing PST files from the TSC unit were just "dir" outputs using the DOS cmd.exe shell instead of Vernois logs. This was explained to me by Marshall and Vahan that the TSC staff requested servers in their office for storage of PST files after search results were completed. This activity was typical for TSC, who conducted public records requests for all state agencies. In the interim, the TSC staff stood up two ad-hoc file servers that was not seen by [redacted] Marshall was able to remotely access these file servers and create a list of all files with PST extensions.

I asked Vahan about the governors email account. Vahan explained that it was rarely used directly, that is the "jkt.mjo@das.state.or.us" was not used as an email address but only as a link to the MJOJKT email storage. Vahan told me he had learned the governor had governor.kitzhaber@gmail.com which was setup by TSC staff member Tracy Osburn on 08/05/2011 (see NICHE attachment – 20150302_HelpTicketsFromMichaelRodgers.pdf), to forward all emails to the MJOJKT repository. There was general discussion in the room that since unknown date, it had been learned that John Kitzhaber had other email accounts from Gmail.com and ATT.net forwarded to the governor.kitzhaber@gmail.com account, creating a cascading forwarding event into the states email system.

I asked Vahan about his actions on 02/06/2015, when Michael Rodgers asked him to export all emails from the MJOJKT* email account. Vahan stated he had initially searched for "hundredthmeridian" which revealed about 2,500 emails. These results were placed on a thumb drive by Vahan at ETS and hand delivered to Rodgers also at

ETS. Vahan stated a second search was conducted after he was told to search for "jk.hundredthmeridian." This search revealed about 3,500 more emails. Vahan told me that [redacted] there were two email archive systems to query. [redacted] Vahan stated he ran the identical search on both DAM systems to provide additional emails.

I asked Vahan if he had a list of files he placed on these thumb drives given to Rodgers, and he stated he didn't make one and he had deleted the directory on his laptop where he saved the PST's after they were transferred to the thumb drives. Vahan told me he thought he had exported at least 10 PST's between the two thumb drives.

I asked everyone in the room if there was a concern over access to the states email system. There was general discussion that up until now there wasn't. And that it was nearly impossible to remove or delete emails from the states DAM due to [redacted] Michael Rodgers asked what crimes a person was looking at for leaking emails and I told him it would probably fall under the state's Computer Crime law and Official Misconduct. Rodgers asked if we (OSP) were investigating the governor's offices, and I told everyone that our team was only looking at the ETS and TSC group. All other locations were left for other agencies in the investigation. I explained that since there was more than one law enforcement agency involved each agency is investigates a certain area to avoid overlap in the overall review.

Michael Rodgers told me he was having Marshall determine if anyone had been granted full access to the MJOJKT account, Marshall stated there was no record of this. Vahan provided additional account access information, revealing the creation of the MJOJKT account was created in 2003 and was last accessed on 01/28/2011.

I explained to the group that we were also trying to determine who leaked the initial "Tracy Osburn" email sent to his supervisors. [redacted] I asked if anyone had checked Rodgers or Kriegers email account – both high level managers. Marshall told me he had checked both Rodgers and Kriegers email accounts for this type of granted access and neither where sharing their accounts.

From an earlier interview with Michael Rodgers (see Cpt. Davie's report), Rodgers stated he had printed out a hard copy of the "Tracy Osburn" email. Marshall Wells confirmed this was also the case and knew Rodgers was taking it to Matt Shelby or Michael Jordan.

I tasked Vahan with exporting all emails sent from the state's email system, addressed to "njaquiss@wweek.com" and "nickbudnick@gmail.com." This review revealed nothing of evidentiary value that mentioned emails or contained content which shouldn't have been released.

By reviewing [redacted] file server logs you could see the MJOJKT.PST file, which was believed to contain over 20,000 emails from John Kitzhaber's email account was created by TSC staff member Scot Conner. This file was added to several members of the Governor's office and Chief Operations Officer;

- Added to Matt Shelby's home folder on 02/05/2015, at about 10:08 AM
- Added to Amy Wojcicki's home folder on 02/05/2015, at about 1:45 PM
- Added to Liana Reeve's home folder on 02/05/2015, at about 1:51 PM

From initial interviews with Shawn Dawson of DAS, he had mentioned a past director of ETS Julie Bozzi. Shawn stated he wasn't sure what involvement she had with ETS since she was now working at the Oregon Health Authority as their IT Director. I asked Vahan to check on her permissions into the ETS and DAM and through his searching of Active Directory accounts determined she was no longer a member of any administrator permission groups.

Another search conducted was on Matt Shelby's email account for any email activity with large attachments. Vahan searched Matt's account using the DAM and determined he had emailed a PDF of the initial email thread between Tracy Osburn, several ETS/TSC managers and Michael Rodgers. This PDF was created on a copy machine located within the COO's office at the DAS West building, then distributed by Matt to seven other entities.

This meeting ended at about 03:00 PM, the same day. I did not leave with the thumb drive (SLP-E01) given to me by Marshall due to the requests I had made of Vahan. He stated it would take him a few hours and since it was Friday he would get it finished until Monday the 23rd.

ACTION TAKEN:
On 02/23/2015, at about 2:35 PM, I arrived at ETS to meet with Vahan Michaelian. Vahan had been working on retrieving several file and email access logs of the states file server and email archive system. This data was placed on a thumb drive which is logged as SLP-E01.
At about 3:30 PM, I arrived at General Headquarters with SLP-E01. I placed this drive into my government owned Macbook Pro 13" computer and created an encrypted, password protected copy. This copy was stored on the desktop of this laptop. I advised Captain Davie of my actions.
At about 4:00 PM, I arrived at the Salem Area Command and enter SLP-E01 into evidence.

Remarks:	Ben Garvey Interview on March 3rd

SUBJECT: Interview of Ben Garvey

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 3rd, 2015 @ 12:56 pm Sergeant Payne and I met with Ben Garvey on the fifth floor of the State Revenue building in a conference room within the Technical Support Center (TSC). I told Ben that we were conducting a criminal investigation of some email leaks to certain news organizations and that we would like to speak with him about it. I told him that his cooperation with the investigation was purely voluntary and that he could leave at any time. I told him that I would be recording the conversation. The following is a summary of the interview. I later copied the audio recording of the interview onto a DVD-R and logged into evidence.

Ben Garvey said that he worked as a radio-tech in Prineville for the Department of Forestry prior to getting a job with DAS in 2003. He worked as a field tech for 2 1/2 years, then transferred to the Oregon Wireless Interoperability Network, where he worked as an architect for nearly five years. From 2010 to present he has held various jobs at TSC and the State Data Center (ETS), and is currently a Team Lead for TSC. He and Adrian Turpin run the show on a day to day basis, and they both report to Gary Kreiger.

Ben said that on February 5th, 2015 Tracy Osburn received an after-hours phone call. TSC staff typically went home for the day at 4:30 pm, and this call came in some time after that. Ben said that Tracy received the call directly to his desk and the he and Tracy were the only two people still at work at that time. After the call, as they were leaving, Tracy told Ben that he had gotten a request from the Governor's office to remove the Governor's personal email accounts from the state email archives. Ben told Tracy that the request didn't seem right and that Tracy needed to "escalate" this and send an email to management. Ben said that Tracy didn't tell him who specifically had called him from the Governor's office.

Ben said that he was in the email chain. Several days later, there was a management meeting where Tracy told the group more details regarding the actual phone call from the Governor's office. Based on what was said in this meeting, Ben said that he is under the impression that Shelby Campos is the one that called Tracy and made the request (this is significant because it was actually Jan Murdoc that called Tracy. Jan Murdoc's name was mentioned in Nigel Jaquis' 2-12-15 article about the "Tracy Email", but Jan's name was never mentioned in the email chain, nor was she part of the distribution group. Whoever had leaked the information in this email to the Willamette Week would have had to inform Nigel Jaquis of this fact, because it is nowhere to be found in the actual email.)

Ben said that he never forwarded the email or blind-copied anyone on the email. He said he never printed it out. He said that he never talked to anyone outside of work, about the email, other than his wife. He said that the general attitude around the office was that the request from the Governor's office was unethical and didn't seem right at all.

Ben said that he was not involved in the creation of and of the MJOJKT.PST file, but had knowledge that it had occurred. Ben said that, after it was learned that the emails were leaked to the press, he was asked by Adrian Turpin to use the [redacted] tool to see if anyone had manipulated (copied, moved, accessed) the file after Scot Connor had created it and placed it on their [redacted] server. He said that [redacted] reported that none of these things had occurred. Ben said that this was the first time that he was aware of the file's existence (see Sgt. Payne's report for more details on this). Ben said that he never copied, moved or accessed the file himself.

Ben said that he has never searched the state email archives for John Kitzhaber or Cylvia Hayes' emails to his knowledge (he said that he services a large amount of public records requests (PRR's) and can't say for certain that an email or two may have been captured in a search that he did in response to a valid PRR).

Ben said that he is not aware of any of his co-workers accessing the .PST file, reading any emails from John Kitzhaber or Cylvia Hayes, leaking confidential emails of any kind or being disciplined for leaking confidential information of any kind.

Ben said that he has not shared any information with the press or had any contact with Nick Budnick or Nigel Jaquis of any kind.

Ben said that he hasn't noticed any of his coworkers acting suspiciously since this all began.

Ben said that the list of people who had the ability to access the MJOJKT.PST file are himself, Scot Conner, Tony Creasey, Brian, Tracy, several of the field techs, maybe Adrian Turpin.

Ben said he was not aware of the fact that there were .PST files created by TSC/ETS, with John Kitzhaber's personal emails on them, that they were placed on thumb drives and transported to the Governor's office. He said he knew nothing about this.

ACTION TAKEN:
On 03/02/2015, at about 9:30 AM, I met with Vahan Michaelian at ETS. This meeting was to continue the search and review of log files from systems used by ETS.
Vahan and I continued to review the Dell Archive Manager (DAM) log he had created on 2/20/2015 upon my request. This log showed all DAM activity from 1/2/2015, at 10:37 AM to 2/12/2015, at 4:55 PM. This date range included our target activity, when initial email leaks were reported by the Willamette Week reporter Nijel Jaquiss. This review confirmed that only Scot Conner from the DAS Technical Support Center and Vahan had exported emails from the DAM, that was related to the MJOJKT account.
CASE STATUS: Open Active

Remarks:	Terry Kirkpatrick Interview on March 3rd

SUBJECT: Interview of Terry Kirkpatrick

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 3rd, 2015 at about 2:46 pm Sergeant Payne and I met with Terry Kirkpatrick on the fifth floor of the State Revenue building in a conference room within the Technical Support Center (TSC). I told Terry that we were conducting a criminal investigation of some email leaks to certain news organizations and that we would like to speak with him about it. I told him that his cooperation with the investigation was purely voluntary and that he could leave at any time. I told him that I would be recording the conversation. The following is a summary of the interview. I later copied the audio recording of the interview onto a DVD-R and logged into evidence.

Terry Kirkpatrick said he had worked for TSC for about two years. Prior to working for state, he worked IT for that Statesman Journal and for several software companies. Terry said that he is now a Field Tech, but he started working at the Help Desk.

Terry said that he was not directly involved in the circumstances surrounding the "Tracy Email", nor did he ever see the actual email. He said that the only thing he knows about it, is what he has heard from other coworkers or on the news.

Terry said that, in the last few months, he has serviced several public records requests that came from the Governor's Office. He said that some of them were for Cylvia Hayes emails or emails in which Cylvia Hayes was mentioned. He said that that requests typically came from Liani Reeves or Jen Andrew. He said for awhile, he and Brian Tipsword were doing the bulk of the PRR requests for TSC. Terry said that, in the case of PRR's that came from the Governor's office, he would typically put the extracted .PST file onto a network drive designated for PRR's at the Governor's office that could be accessed by the Governor's staff and then send the requestor an email letting them know that the task had been completed. His email would contain information on what he had found, to include that # of .PST files he'd created related to the search parameters requested and how many records each .PST file contained. He said that the only time he would open the files, is if the file size seemed extremely small. He said he opened the files in these cases to see if there was an error extracting the data. He said that this was rare, and if the file size appeared correct, he would not open the .PST file to check its contents.

Terry said that, after he creates a .PST, and sends it to where it needs to go, he deletes the original .PST file that he created and does not retain it at all. He said that he taught Brian Tipsword how to use the Archive Manager tool and that he believes that Brian is doing it the same way (Brian is not actually doing this. He is retaining a copy of the .PST on one of the two Tool Servers [redacted] that resides at TSC. It was apparent during our interviews with TSC staff that these files were not being handled in the same manner by TSC staff.) Terry said that he is not aware of any locations in which .PST files pulled in response to PRR's are retained internally. He said that, when he is working on a particular request, he would put the extracted file on his desktop temporarily, but eventually delete this file.

Terry said that he is not aware of any requests involving the Governor's emails that TSC staff have serviced. Terry had nothing else useful to add to the investigation.

Remarks:	Adrian Turpin Interview on March 3rd

SUBJECT: Interview of Adrian Turpin

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 3rd, 2015 at about 2:22 pm Captain Davie and I met with Adrian Turpin at the Technology Support Center (TSC). We had met with him briefly during the prior day and asked him if we could interview him at that time, but he told us that he had an attorney and wanted to consult with him prior to the interview. On this day, Mr. Turpin informed us that he would consent to a recorded interview without his attorney present.

We conducted the interview in a conference room on the fifth floor. The interview was audio recorded and this recording was later logged into evidence. Prior to turning on the recorded, I reminded Mr. Turpin that this was a criminal investigation, not a personnel investigation and that his statement was voluntary, and that he was not required to talk to us. He told us that he understood this. The following is a summary of the interview.

Adrian Turpin began working for the State of Oregon at DAS in 1996 where he worked as an Information Security Lead worker for field technicians. He has worked for TSC for about 18 months in the capacity of Team Leader.

Adrian said that during the early evening hours on February 5th, 2015, after he had gone home from work and finished dinner, he checked his work email. He saw the email from Tracey Osburn ("Tracy Email") and realized that he was unusual and required attention. He said he immediately forwarded the email to Gary Kreiger.

Adrian said that he has worked on completing public records requests (PRR's) for Matt Shelby in the past, and has typically dropped the .PST files he created onto Matt Shelby's network drive (home drive).

Adrian said that during the morning on February 6th, he spoke with Tracy Osburn about the email that he had sent (the "Tracy Email"). Tracy told him that Jan Mordoc was the one from the Governor's office had called him and asked him to remove the Governor's personal emails from the state email archive.

Adrian said that he did not forward the email to anyone other than Gary Kreiger. He said he did not "blind copy" anyone on the email when he forwarded to Gary. Adrian said that he printed the email one time on March 2nd or 3rd and showed it to his attorney. He said that, outside of work, he only shared the details of the email with his partner Lisa and his attorney.

Adrian said that he was not surprised by the request from the Governor's office to remove emails from the state email archives, but felt like it was not a decision that he could make at his level.

Adrian said that in 2011 a Help Desk ticket was created to set up to forward John Kitzhaber's gmail account to the state email archived. Kitzhaber's personal laptop computer was also set up to access all of his email accounts.

Regarding the .PST files of the Governor's state email address that was created by TSC at the request of Matt Shelby, Adrian said that he got involved on February 5th when he learned that the request had been made. He said that TSC staff created the file and transferred it to Matt Shelby's home directory. Matt Shelby also made a request later that day to Scot Conner and asked him to also place the file on Amy Wojcicki and Liani Reeve's network drives. Adrian said that he talked to Matt Shelby later that afternoon and told him that he had asked Scot to do this. He said that he thought that Matt had looked at the contents of the file and realized that there were personal emails mixed in with the official emails.

Adrian told us that, at some point around this time, he had a conversation with Mike Rodgers, who told him that some .PST files were created and put on a flash drive. He said that he later learned that these files were a subset of the large MJOJKT.PST file that TSC had originally created and put on Shelby's network drive at his request. Adrian said that he was not directly involved in the creation of the MJOJKT.PST file or any of its subsets.

Adrian said that the .PST files that were created mat have been placed on the [redacted] server that resides at TSC. He said that he thought he recalled Scot Conner telling him that he used the [redacted] server to store these files. He said that it was common for TSC staff to use this server to store .PST files that were created due to a PRR.

Adrian said that the only people at TSC that knew that they had exported the contents of the Governor's emails were Scot Conner, Tracy Osburn, Shawn Wagoner and himself. There were several others at DAS or the Governor's office that would have known this as well.

After the Willamette Week article came out on February 12th which referred to the "Tracy Email", Adrian said they had a morning meeting to discuss it. He said that no one really considered it a big deal and he did not assume that the email was leaked by someone at TSC. He said that he read the article, and it occurred to him that the actual email itself may not have been leaked and that the person who did leak it may not work for TSC due to the fact that several persons names were not spelled correctly (including his own) and the fact that the reporter referred to Tracy Osburn as a 'she'.

When the story broke on February 18th referencing actual person emails from or to John Kitzhaber, Adrian said he assumed that the reported must have gotten ahold of some actual emails. He said that certain people have access to the state email archives at TSC (Terry Kirkpatrick, Scot Conner, Tony Creasey and himself.) He said he didn't think the leak came from TSC though.

Adrian said that he has never opened or accessed the MJOJKT.PST or any of its derivatives nor does he know of anyone at TSC that had. He said he is not aware of any copies made of the file. He said that, if a copy of any of these .PST files remained on the [redacted] server, one could check the server logs or the [redacted] tool to verify this.

Adrian said that he received a request from Matt Shelby on February 17th to remove the MJOJKT.PST file from his, Amy's, Liani's network drives. He said that his staff checked these directories and learned that Amy and Liani had already done this.

Adrian said he has never searched the state email archives for John Kitzhaber's or Cylvia Hayes' emails.

Adrian said that he recalled that several months ago, both the Parks Department and the Housing Department had asked for some emails related to Cylvia Hayes in order to honor PRR's of their own. He said that these requests were honored and that Brian Tipsword was the tech that worked on both requests. He said that, the case of the request from the Housing Department, Brian put the .PST file he created on a thumb drive and that someone from the Housing Department came and picked it up from Brian at TSC. He said that it is possible that an employee from the Parks Department may have gotten the .PST file(s) in the same way, but he was not sure. He said it was possible that some of these .PST files that were created based on these valid PRR's could have contained emails from/to John Kitzhaber. He said that TSC staff did not typically go through the contents of the file to see what it contains. He said that TSC staff may briefly open the file to ensure that it is a valid file and that the results were related to the search terms requested.

Adrian said that he has never had any contact with Nick Budnick (Oregonian) or Nigel Jaquiss (Willamette Week).

Adrian said that all of the staff at the TSC know that nothing is every really deleted from the state email archives; that anything that is removed is backed up and can always be recovered

SUBJECT: Interview of Brian Tipsword

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 3rd, 2015 at about 3:24pm Sergeant Payne and I met with Brian Tipsword on the fifth floor of the State Revenue building in a conference room within the Technical Support Center (TSC). I told Brian that we were conducting a criminal investigation of some email leaks to certain news organizations and that we would like to speak with him about it. I told him that his cooperation with the investigation was purely voluntary and that he could leave at any time. I told him that I would be recording the conversation. The following is a summary of the interview. I later copied the audio recording of the interview onto a DVD-R and logged into evidence.

Brian said he has only worked for the state for about 8 ½ months. Prior to this, he worked for Regence Blue Cross/Blue Shield in the IT department. Brian said that he is currently the lead worker for the DAS TSC Helpdesk. He is supervised by Ben Garvey .

Brian said that he knew about the "Tracy Email" only because he read it. He was not in a position where he was required to take any action, so all he did was read the email.

Brian said that he and the other members of the TSC leadership team met several days later and all talked to Tracy about the email. Brian said that he was under the impression that it was Shelby Campos that had called Tracy from the Governor's office and had made the request to remove the Governor's personal emails from the state email archive.

Brian said that he never shared the email with anyone (either electronically or by printing it out).

Brian said that he has processed many requests from Liani Reeves or Jen Andrew and a few from Shelby Campos for emails between Cylvia Hayes and the Governor's staff. He said that he has had other agencies ask for emails too using Cylvia Hayes' three known private email addresses. He said that he has never gotten any PRR requests related to John Kitzhaber's private emails. Brian said that he has been getting PRR's related to Cylvia Hayes from time to time since he began working at TSC.

Brian said that, with the Governor's office, when he would create a .PST based on a PRR, he would place a copy of the file on the network drive of the requestor. Brian said that another copy of the file remained on one of the two [redacted] servers at TSC. Brian said that there was no clear protocol on where .PST files were supposed to be stored locally after they were transferred to the requester. Brian said that he does not open the .PST file himself after creating if. He said "that is none of my business...that's not what I do."

Brian said that 'Parks' made a PRR for Cylvia Hayes emails and 'Housing' may have also made a PRR. He said that about 2-3 weeks ago a 'Ron' from either 'Parks' or 'Housing' made a PRR and he transferred the .PST files he created onto a thumb drive and gave the thumb drive to the requestor. He said that this was the only time he has done this (given a .PST file to a requestor on external media). He said that he did not remember if this was a request for Cylvia Hayes related emails or not. (this issue was vetted by Sgt. Payne. See his reports for details.)

Sgt. Payne asked Brian about accessing the JKEmails.pst file (which the [redacted] logs showed that he did on 2-6-15 at 12:41 pm after he placed them onto Amy Wojcicki's network drive on 2-6-15 at 12:39 pm. This was the file that Matt Shelby created on 2-6-15 that contained only the emails from John Kitzhaber's "official" gmail account, and did not contain any of the personal email that were leaked to the press.) Brian said that he did not recall why he would have done this, but guessed it was done while he was teaching Amy to attach the file to her Outlook program and open it up to view.

Brian stated that he had no additional knowledge that could assist us with our investigative efforts. He said that he was unaware of the fact that there is a .PST file that resides on TSC's [redacted] server that contains John Kitzhaber's personal emails.

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 3rd, 2015 @ 12:14 pm Sergeant Payne and I met with Scot Conner on the fifth floor of the State Revenue building in a conference room within the Technical Support Center (TSC). I told Scot that we were conducting a criminal investigation of some email leaks to certain news organizations and that we would like to speak with him about it. I told him that his cooperation with the investigation was purely voluntary and that he could leave at any time. I told him that I would be recording the conversation. The following is a summary of the interview. I later copied the audio recording of the interview onto a DVD-R and logged into evidence.

Scot said that he has worked for the state for about 15 years. He started out in mainframe operations as a supervisor, went to TSC as the Helpdesk lead and is now in the infrastructure team and manages the system center of the [redacted] application and has been in that position for about four years.

Scot said that he did not know anything about the "Tracy Email" until it was leaked by the Willamette Week and was not part of the distribution of this email, nor did he have any discussions with anyone at work about this email prior to its release.

Scot said that on February 5th, his supervisor Adrian Turpin asked him if he could export all of the Governor's emails from his state MJOJKT.GOV account from January 1st, 2011 to present out to a file for Matt Shelby. Scot said that he exported the file out and then copied it to Matt Shelby's home folder. After he did this, he re-attached to the file to make sure that he could see the data in it. He then emailed Shelby to let him know that he had put the file in his home directory and then showed Matt how to access it through Outlook.

Scot said that some time later, Matt Shelby called him and asked him to put a copy of the file into Liani Reeves and Amy Wojcicki's home folders. He said he did this and emailed Shelby to tell him that it was done. He said that he didn't hear anything about it for awhile until, several days later, Matt Shelby called him and asked him to delete the file from everyone's home folders. Scot said that he told his manager, and his manager told him not to do anything. He said that he went out and looked and that the files had already been deleted from Liani's and Amy's home folders. He said that they ran a report to determine when the files were deleted and he said that he believes that they were deleted on the 6th of February by the individual users of the home folders.

Scot did not have anything else relevant to add to the investigation.

Remarks:	Gary Kreiger Interview on March 4th

SUBJECT: Interview of Gary Kreiger

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 4th, 2015 at about 12:28 pm Captain Davie and I met with Gary Kreiger on the fifth floor of the State Revenue building in a conference room within the Technical Support Center (TSC). I told Gary that we were conducting a criminal investigation of some email leaks to certain news organizations and that we would like to speak with him about it. I told him that his cooperation with the investigation was purely voluntary and that he could leave at any time. I told him that I would be recording the conversation. During the interview, Gary referred to some detailed typed notes that he had been compiling since the "Tracy Email" began circulating on February 5th. I have attached a copy of these notes to this report for reference. The following is a summary of the interview, the attached notes contain all emails and other documents referenced in the conversation. I copied the audio recording of the interview onto a DVD-R and logged into evidence.

Gary started working for the state in 2000 with DHS in IT. He transferred to the Salem/Keizer School District in 2005 and then to the State Data Center from 2008 to present. Gary told us that he is the current section manager of TSC, but his office was at the State Data Center. He said that he typically worked out of the TSC office twice a week.

Gary said that he became aware of the "Tracy Email" when he received a telephone call from Shawn Wagoner on February 5th at about 7 pm while he was off work and at home. He said Shawn asked him if he had read the email from Tracy Osburn. He said that he got on his email and read it and then responded to it and then forwarded it to Mike Rodgers. He said that he did not call Rodgers, just forwarded him the email. Gary said that the call from the Governor's office seemed a little bizarre to him because the request came after hours and was not in writing. Gary said he did not forward the email to anyone else outside of the email chain nor did he blind-copy anyone on the email.

On February 6th at about 6:00 am, Gary said that he received a call from Mike Rodgers. Mike asked him to go to TSC and find out what was going on. Mike Rodgers told Gary that he had a meeting with Mike Jordan about this issue early that morning. Mike Rodgers told Gary that Michael Jordan wanted a paper copy of the email and Mike Rodgers later told Gary that he printed off a paper copy of the email, went over and met with Mike Jordan, and left the paper copy of the email with him (Jordan). Gary said that he arrived at TSC at about 7:30 am that morning and that, when he got there, Mike Rodgers was already there. Gary thought that was strange beeause Mike had told him that he was going to meet with Jordan, but instead showed up at TSC. When Gary got there, Rodgers was already talking to Terry Kirkpatrick and Tracy Osburn. They all met for a bit and then Rodgers left, saying he was now going to the meeting with Mike Jordan. During their conversation with Kirkpatrick and Osburn, Osburn told them that it was Jan Murdock that that had called him and made the request to remove emails. He said that these were the only people that he had conversation with about this email. Gary said that he never printed the email other than the copy that he was going to give to us today.

Later that morning, after Gary had gone back to his office at the data center, Rodgers arrived and told him that everything was fine.

On February 10th Mike Rodgers told him that he should start keeping notes on what was occurring in case he might need to recall it in the future.

On February 17th Gary said he learned of an email from Matt Shelby requesting the deletion of the .PST file from his "home drive." He said that the file was in three locations (Amy Wojcicki, Lianni Reeves and Matt Shelby's network drives). He said that both Amy and Lianni deleted the file themselves on the 6th of February, but Matt did not.

Around this day, Mike Rodgers also received an email from Matt Shelby asking to remove the forwarding of the Governor's personal email accounts to the state accounts. Gary said that he, John Darville, Adrian Turpin and Matt Shelby met with Jan Murdock and Lianni Reeves at the Governor's office that day. John Darville got on the governor's laptop in order to stop the forwarding of his personal email accounts to the state email system. He said that Jan Murdock had to provide them with all of the user names and passwords of all the Governor's emails accounts, which she had on a piece of paper. John was able to stop the forwarding at this time. Jan also asked if they could delete his personal accounts at this time (directly on the websites). Gary told her that this would not be appropriate to do and so they left.

On February 17th at about 3:29 pm Mike Rodgers called him into a meeting with other ETS managers. He told them that Alex Petit had tasked them with stopping all administrative access to the Governor's state email or archived information. Rodgers told them that he had been informed that someone from ETS had leaked the Governor's emails to the media. Mike told them that others had access to the .PST files and that the leak didn't necessarily come from ETS. During this meeting, Rodgers told the group about the request from the Matt Shelby for the Governor's emails and how he had been involved in the creation and transfer of these files to Matt Shelby and employees at the Governor's office.

On February 17th at about 5:20 pm, Mike Rodgers came into Gary's office and said that he was very stressed because he could not get anything in writing from Michael Jordan or anyone else at DAS West. He said that Mike told him that they were verbally telling him to do things, but would not put anything in writing. Gary said that he and Mike felt like they were being 'set up' to be the fall guys. Gary said that he wasn't too worried about this, but Mike definitely was. Gary said he wondered if Mike Rodgers was just "playing them" because he was never privy to any of the conversations that occurred between Rodgers and Jordan and that that the only information he got was directly from Rodgers. Gary said that sometimes Mike has a tendency to "outwit" people or use them to make it seem like something is going on, when it really isn't. He said that Rodgers also has a tendency to "freak out" and get very reactive to things. He said that he has observed Mike in several work situations tell his staff things that were not true or play people off each-other and gave examples of this. He said that Mike "plays the game to get what he wants." Gary said that Mike is definitely capable of leaking the emails to the press. Gary said that Bryan Neely could also provide insight on Rodgers' character.

Prior to February 18th, most of the TSC staff (all Help Desk and back office staff) had access to the email system archive solution. Also, anyone with admin access could [redacted] On February 18th, TSC staff access was blocked to the email system archive solution. TSC staff no longer handles these requests. They are handled by three people who are in the enterprise email team (Alex Arizala, Jose Mendez and Chris Wilhelm) but Vahan Michaelin also has access to this as well. Gary informed TSC staff of this on the morning of the 18th.

After this, he had a meeting with Mike Rodgers. Rodgers asked him if he knew where John Kitzhaber's personal email account passwords were. Gary said that he asked Rodgers why he needed them and Rodgers told him that Shawn Dawson would be calling for them because he was directed (by Alex Petit) to delete the Governor's personal email accounts (not from the state archives but directly from the web interface), which he believes were the same email accounts that Jan Murdock had asked him to delete. Gary said that he didn't have those passwords and that he would have to contact Jan Murdock to get the passwords to do that. Gary said that he does not know what Shawn Dawson (or John Ritchie who was supposed to accompany him) did and if they honored this request or not.

Gary said that he doesn't have any knowledge of TSC or ETS staff ever deleting anything. He summarized the requests to delete which made him nervous: Matt Shelby's request to remove the MJOJKT.PST files from all locations where they had been placed by TSC staff, the requests from Jan Murdock and later from Alex Petit to shut down and delete Kitzhaber's personal email accounts from the email servers themselves, and the call from Jan Murdoc to Tracy Osburn to "remove" the Governor's personal email accounts from the state email archives. He said that these requests were always verbal, and never in writing making him (and Mike Rodgers) feel like they were being asked to do something illegal.

Gary talked about the Darrin "Rand email" and its leak to the Oregonian. As background, Gary told us that while all of the above was going on, Mike Rodgers had told him that he had contacted the ODOJ to get some direction from them and fill them in on what was occurring (his concerns about the verbal directions he was getting from his management to do things that seemed unethical or illegal) but that the DOJ employee he contacted had directed him back to Mike Jordan or Sarah Jo Chaplain. Gary explained that Rodgers felt that these two were part of the problem. Gary said that Rodgers told him he instead contacted another manager at DAS (Gary did not know who) and asked this person "what happens when you don't trust or think something is going wrong and you can't go to anyone or talk to anyone." The DAS manager apparently told Rodgers that he needed to follow his chain of command. Rodgers reported to Gary that he told this DAS manager that his chain of command was part of the problem and that this person apparently set up a meeting with an HR Director from a different agency to be an independent intermediary. He said that the ODOT HR Manager (Sherry Lauer) interviewed Mike Rodgers about a week prior to Mike being placed on administrative leave. He said that Darrin Rand pulled the ETS managers together for a meeting (Rodgers, Wells, Neely and himself). He gave them a paper copy of the email he was planning on sending to Sherry Lauer and the group looked at it all together and suggested some changes to Rand. Gary said that he thought everyone gave their paper copy of the email back to Rand after the meeting. Rand made the suggested changes and, about ten minutes prior to Rodgers being escorted out of the building and placed on admin leave, Rand sent the email to Sherry Lauer, and then a copy of the same information to the above mentioned group of ETS managers. Gary said that he did not think that Mike Rodgers or Marshall Wells would have had time to access that email before their email privileges were shut down and they were able to. Gary said that Darrin seemed very shocked that his email had been leaked and printed in the Oregonian.

Gary talked about the creation of the MJOJKT.PST file and the additional .PST files that were created and transferred to Matt Shelby via Mike Rodgers that contained John Kitzhaber's personal emails. He did not have any first-hand knowledge of this process, but was aware that it did occur. He said that he never saw or accessed any of these files himself nor was he aware of anyone else who would have accessed these files.

Gary denied any involvement in or knowledge of leaking confidential information of any kind to the media.

I asked Gary if any of his coworkers had been acting unusually during this period of time and he said that Mike Rodgers had been acting "more freaked out than usual." Gary said that he was acting in a way that he was trying to place blame somewhere and draw conclusion regarding the requests that he told everyone he was getting from DAS. He said that Mike seemed very nervous and told Gary that he thought he was being targeted by upper-management. He told the group of ETS managers that he was being told to do something (by management) that he could go to prison if he followed through and did it. Mike said it might come down to who was believed in the end, since he wasn't getting anything in writing. Gary said that he was suspicious of this because the information was only coming through Rodgers and that he seemed to be painting a picture to everyone that they had some people in upper management that could not be trusted. Gary said that he thought that the only person inside of the data center who would have had the capability to share all of the items that were shared to the press was Mike Rodgers. He said that he couldn't speculate outside of ETS.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/04/2015, at about 10:00 AM, Detective Ward and I met at ETS and contacted Vahan Michaelian for follow up. During our investigation our team had discovered several locations on the DAS file server where PST files could be found. These files were labeled using partial names such as "Clhayes, Cylvia, Cylvia_Hayes, and JK."
Our meeting was conducted in Vahan's cubicle. To be able to acquire the PST files over the network, [redacted] and [redacted] were both installed on Vahan's laptop. We used these tools to get access to the PST files over the network, [redacted] us to verify data had not been changed.

During our acquisition, network permissions and remote login created a challenge for our forensic software to work. There were several PST files we had to copy to hard drive of Vahan's laptop during this process. After these files were acquired, we used [redacted] to wipe the file contents with [redacted] then delete them.
This process helped us to discover over 25 PST files that contained emails related to John Kitzhaber and Cylvia Hayes.
Determining who had access to all these PST was limited to the assumption they were never copied from the DAS file server to offline or removable media, which the [redacted] file access manager could not track.
I contacted Scot Conner at the DAS Technical Support Center and provided him with a list of all the PST file names we had discovered so far. Conner is the [redacted] services manager and capable of provided me with any file access results that happened on the DAS file servers.

Conner's results helped confirm when the MJOJKT.PST file was added to Matt Shelby's network home drive, the primary PST file suspected of being leaked. Conner's results also showed a 6.9 gigabyte PST file named "Cylhayes.pst" related to a Public Records Request #279249. This PST extract was created by Terri Kirkpatrick of the DAS TSC group, the same TSC group as Tracy Osburn and Scot Conner.

A spreadsheet named [redacted] was provided to our crime analyst, John Lawson for further analysis. This file can be found uploaded into NICHE.

All evidence acquired was saved to government owned, wiped hard drive. This drive was secured and stored in locker #108 at the Salem Area Command when not in our possession.

EVIDENCE:

Unknown # One (1) disc containing the audio recording of the interview conducted with Tracy Osburn on March 5, 2015. Refer to reports written by Lieutenant Harrington for specific evidence related information.

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 5, 2015, Lieutenant Harrington and I interviewed Tracy Osburn at his attorney's office in Portland. Tracy Osburn's attorney identified himself as David McDonald.

Lieutenant Harrington and I arrived at approximately 9:00 a.m., and after an introduction, Lieutenant Harrington turned on an audio recorder at 9:15 a.m. Tracy Osburn and Attorney McDonald acknowledged they knew the interview was being recorded. The recording was not transcribed. For a verbatim account of the interview, refer to the audio recording, which was later entered into evidence by Lieutenant Harrington. At the time of this report, I did not have access to the evidence exhibit number.

At the beginning of the interview, Tracy Osburn was asked to provide a summary of his work history. Tracy Osburn has worked for the State of Oregon at the Technology Support Center (TSC) for between 7 and 8 years. Two of those years he had been assigned as the direct support technician from TSC that worked with former Governor John Kitzhaber's staff. Due to that assignment, some of the former Governor's staff members would call Tracy Osburn directly when they needed some type of computer or technical assistance.

Tracy Osburn provided that two to three months prior (December 2014 or January 215), he had been assigned to work on John Kitzhaber's laptop because the John Kitzhaber was having a password issue when he was trying to access his emails accounts.

Tracy Osburn was asked to remember what occurred on February 5, 2015, and the days following that involved an email that he had sent regarding a request from John Kitzhaber's staff to remove emails from the state archive system. The following are in substance statements Tracy Osburn provided during the interview.

On February 5, 2015, around 5:30 p.m., Tracy Osburn was still at work because he had been working late on a customer's call when his desk telephone rang. He saw the name "Jan Murdock" displayed in the caller ID box. When he answered the phone, he recognized the caller's voice as belonging to Jan Murdock.

The call was short in duration and Jan Murdock explained that a public record request had been made to the Governor's office regarding John Kitzhaber's email archive account. Jan Murdock said Liani Reeves (John Kitzhaber's General Counsel) had told her that emails from John Kitzhaber's personal email accounts were contained in the Governor's state email archive account. Tracy Osburn stated he was surprised to hear that had occurred and that he and Jan Murdock talked about how that may have happened, but he did not know exactly what had occurred.

As the conversation was ending, Jan Murdock told Tracy Osburn she wanted the personal emails removed. Jan Murdock identified the personal email account as the "hundredth meridian" account. Tracy Osburn said he would do what he could for her. Tracy Osburn was sure Jan Murdock only asked about removing John Kitzhaber's personal emails from the account.

After the phone call, Tracy Osburn placed a call to his team lead, Adrian Turpin. Adrian Turpin did not answer the call, so he typed an email to his managers at TSC. The email group he sent it to was identified as DAS_DL_ETS_TAM_TSC_Management, Adrian Turpin, and he also sent it to Shawn Wagoner, because Shawn Wagoner used to supervise TSC and he had knowledge about the system. The email was sent at 5:41 p.m., and shortly after, Tracy Osburn left work. Tracy Osburn thought he was the only employee still at work in the TSC when the call came in from Jan Murdock.

For reference, the email that Tracy Osburn wrote on February 5, 2015, at 5:41 p.m., and which was disseminated through the state email system and released to numerous news agencies will be referred to as the "Tracy Email" in this report.

Tracy Osburn did not talk to any TSC employees after he left work, until the next morning when he arrived at TSC. He could not remember exactly who he had spoken with about the call, but he did remember that Adrian Turpin called him and Adrian Turpin told him he was looking at telephone call detail records. He told Adrian Turpin that it had been Jan Murdock that called him and made the request.

While in the interview, Tracy Osburn took a moment and looked in the call detail records on his work cell phone. Tracy Osburn located the telephone call that he received from Adrian Turpin. The call log showed the incoming call occurred on February 6, 2015, at 7:32 a.m., and it was 30 seconds in length.

Tracy Osburn explained that he was not involved in any discussions on how to handle the removal of email request and he did not know who the "Tracy Email" had been sent to after he originally sent it because he had been taken out of the email address chain once he sent it to the TSC managers. The only time he ever printed the "Tracy Email" out was the night prior (March 4, 2015) so he would have it to give to his attorney when they met before our interview started.

When asked, Tracy Osburn said the only person he has had detailed conversations with about the situation is his wife.

When asked, Tracy Osburn said he did not send any emails that specifically had Jan Murdock's name in them.

Tracy Osburn did not think there was anything malicious about the request to remove the personal emails until after he saw the Willamette Week article on February 12, 2015, the article that detailed the "Tracy Email" and his conversation with Jan Murdock.

Tracy Osburn did not notice that any particular co-worker in TSC appeared upset about the request to remove the emails.

Tracy Osburn provided that during the past four weeks he had heard rumors and conversations regarding the incident around the office. Tracy Osburn heard that the public records request that Jan Murdock referred to during their telephone call come from the Oregonian and he knew that the state Public Information Officer, Matt Shelby, was involved with that the public records request.

Tracy Osburn said he was not involved with the creation, distribution, or storage of any pst files related to the original Oregonian public records request or the police investigation. After the fact, he heard the pst file was copied to two locations, Liani Reeves' home drive and another location he did not know. He thought the pst's were placed there so Liani Reeves and the other person could see what emails were in the pst file.

Tracy Osburn was asked if he knew about a server in the TSC office where pst files were stored. Tracy Osburn said he was not directly involved in the process of creating pst's for public records requests, but he did know that the records are copied to a server, a pst file is created, then the pst file is copied out to the person that requested it and the creator normally deleted the pst file from the computer. Tracy Osburn said TSC does not have an 'archive' folder where they store the pst files that are created by the support staff, however, there is a system to archive the helpdesk tickets that are associated to each pst file created. The helpdesk ticket is used to document the list of search parameters that are utilized to create the pst file.

Tracy Osburn was asked if he had ever seen a pst file titled, "MJOJKT" and he replied, "No."

Tracy Osburn was asked if it was a practice for TSC employees to open and view the pst files that they created prior to providing or sending it to the person that requested its creation and he explained the following.

It is not normal for a TSC employee to open and view a pst file.

It is not the job of a TSC employee to get into areas where they do not belong.

They are a busy unit and they do not have time.

When a pst file is created and there is a problem with it, the person that requested it would open it and if it was not correct, they would re-contact the TSC and a different set of search parameters would be provided, a new search conducted and a new pst file created.

For a period of time in 2014, TSC experienced an indexing issue with the email system. The state was migrating data between an old archive system and a new archive system and when searches were being executed, not all emails that met the search criteria were coming through. So, during that time period, some TSC employees would open and view pst files to ensure they contained some type of data or a specific email that had been requested. Tracy Osburn referred to it as a spot check on the system to see if appropriate things were coming through.

Tracy Osburn was asked if he had knowledge of any of his co-workers searching the archives for former John Kitzhaber's or Cylvia Hayes' emails and he stated he did not remember any previous email requests. He thought Cylvia Hayes only had a state calendar set up.

Tracy Osburn was asked if anyone had ever told him they had read emails from or to John Kitzhaber or Cylvia Hayes and Tracy Osburn replied, "No."

Tracy Osburn was asked if he knew if any of his co-workers had ever leaked confidential information or had been disciplined for leaking confidential information and he replied no to both questions.

Tracy Osburn was asked specifically if he had any form of contact with either Nick Budnick from the Oregonian or Nigel Jaquiss from the Willamette Week and he answered no.

When Tracy Osburn was asked, he stated he had no knowledge of any of his co-workers talking to members of the press about this incident.

Tracy Osburn was asked if he had any theories or ideas about who may have leaked the private emails of John Kitzhaber to the press and he stated no and he did not see why anyone would do something like that.

Tracy Osburn said after the Willamette Week article was posted on February 18, 2015, he received a telephone call from Michael Jordan. Michael Jordan told him something similar to, "we are behind you, we don't know what happened." Michael Jordan explained about the DAS policy that provided funding to an employee for an attorney when an employee is involved in a work related legal issue.

As part of the investigation, I had received a list of TSC employees and their work schedules between February 5, 2015, and February 19, 2015. I noted that Tracy Osburn had taken 3 hours of leave on February 10, 2015, and a full day off on February 18, 2015.

When asked, Tracy Osburn stated he thought that on February 10, 2015, he had not been feeling well and he left work early. He took all of February 18, 2015 off as a personal leave day to get errands done. He had a dentist appointment and he went to the DMV. He lives in McMinnville and it is hard to get things done if he doesn't take time off. Tracy Osburn stated he did not meet Nick Budnick or Nigel Jaquiss during his time off.

Tracy Osburn was asked if he knew Darin Rand or anything about the email that Darin Rand had written that was released to the Oregonian and he said he knew nothing about that incident.

Towards the end of the interview, Tracy Osburn provided additional information about his previous involvement with the Governor's office regarding email accounts and actions he had taken in the past.

Tracy Osburn and Attorney McDonald felt Jan Murdock may have decided to contact him directly on February 5, 2015, because Tracy Osburn may have been the TSC employee that originally set up the system to forward John Kitzhaber's emails to the archive account. This could have occurred in 2011.

Tracy Osburn explained that former Governor Ted Kulongoski also chose to use a gmail email account and after Governor Kulongoski left office, the Secretary of State's office found out that his emails were not being archived in the state archive accounts. The Secretary of State wanted TSC to create a way to capture the professional emails from John Kitzhaber's account into the state archive system.

Tracy Osburn said a rule was set up in John Kitzhaber's outlook account. Jan Murdock helped Tracy Osburn access John Kitzhaber's gmail account so he could set up the rule. When Tracy Osburn went to assist, Jan Murdock had a list of John Kitzhaber's email accounts and passwords.

Tracy Osburn speculated on how John Kitzhaber's private emails had been forwarded to the state archive. Tracy Osburn thought that if the first email account that had been set up either by John Kitzhaber or by his staff, was the Governor.Kitzhaber@gmail.com account, then that would be categorized as the PRIMARY email account. Then other email accounts that had been set up after would synchronize to the PRIMARY account and thus, all three were then linked and whatever rules set up in outlook would apply to the linked accounts.

Tracy Osburn stated he did not set up John Kitzhaber's gmail account.

Tracy Osburn stated in the past that he told former Deputy General Counsel Steven Powers, that John Kitzhaber should have been using and needed to use the state email account for his emails. But John Kitzhaber refused to use the state services provided. John Kitzhaber chose to use his personal computers and outside email systems. Tracy Osburn remembered there was a short period of time when John Kitzhaber's personal emails may not have been forwarding into the state archives because John Kitzhaber had switched to a new laptop while still in office. That laptop was eventually worked on by TSC staff and Tracy Osburn believes it was connected in the same way to the state archives.

At approximately 10:17 p.m., the interview was concluded and the recording was turned off. Lieutenant Harrington and I thanked Tracy Osburn and Attorney McDonald and left the office.

It should be noted that Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward conducted various technical searches of the email archive system, the network drives of numerous state employees and many examinations related to the pst files identified during the investigation as having been created using search parameters that involved John Kitzhaber and/or Cylvia Hayes. No information was gathered during the investigation that discredited or contradicted the statements provided by Tracy Osburn.

Refer to supplemental reports completed by Lieutenant Harrington, Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward for additional information that may be related to Tracy Osburn.

Remarks:	Matt Shelby Interview on March 6th

SUBJECT: Second interview of Matt Shelby

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

Captain Davie, Sgt. Payne and I met with Matt Shelby again at DAS West on March 6th, 2015 in order to ask him some follow-up questions. At this time, we had learned of a large file that resided on Matt Shelby's home directory named Cylvia_HayesSearchTerms.PST. This file contained all of the personal and attorney/client privilege emails that had been referenced to that date by Nigel Jaquis in his articles in the Willamette Week. We also had learned that a file of the same name had been created by Terry Kirkpatrick (TSC) in response to a valid public records request (PRR), and placed on Matt Shelby's home directory on January 20th, 2015, but that the file that was created was much smaller than the one that resided on Shelby's home drive. We also knew that Shelby had tried to email the smaller version of this file to someone on January 21st, but it did not go out because the file size was too large. The attempt to send this file was contemporaneous to other email exchanges between Shelby and Jaquis and so it appeared as though Shelby had tried to send this file to him. At this time, an analysis had only been done of the larger Cylvia_HayesSearchTerms.PST file, not the smaller one. We later learned that the smaller file did not contain any of the leaked personal emails and so the details of conversation with Shelby have now become less important to the investigation (see Payne's report for details). I have provided only a brief summary of the conversation below because of this. For more details, see the audio recording of the interview.

The above mentioned investigators and Matt Shelby sat at a table in the conference room on the fifth floor of DAS West and recorded the conversation and I told Matt we would be doing so.

I asked Matt for more details about the (PRR) that had been made by Nigel Jaquis during the last week in January 2015 and any other PRR's where emails from or two Cylvia Hayes or the Governor may have been released. He told me that about a week before Nick Budnick's request on 2-2-15, Nigel Jaquis had made an email request to him for all emails between Mike Jordan and Cylvia Hayes. Matt said that he forwarded the email to the TSC staff general inbox. He said he believed TSC staff looked at Mike Jordan's mailbox and ran a search for the words Cylvia Hayes, which created a number of emails. That .PST file was placed on Matt's home network drive. Shelby told us of one prior PRR from an Oregonian reporter for Cylvia Hayes related emails. Shelby said that, in both cases, the requests were very narrow in scope and that there were only a very small number of emails in the .PST files that were created. He said that he always vetted these (opened the .PSTs and read every single email) and then released them to the reporter that made the request. He said that, after vetting the file, he "zipped" (shrunk into a smaller archive file) the file and then emailed the .ZIP file to the reporter making the request. He told us that this is what he did in the PRR that Nigel had made related to the Hayes/Jordan emails; he "zipped" the file, then sent it to Nigel using his state email. He said that he never transferred files to Nigel in any other way, other than through his state email. Shelby allowed us to look at his computer and search for relevant files and emails related to this investigation (see Sgt. Payne's report for more details).

Detective Ward and Sgt. Payne were later able to determine that the files created related to all of these valid PRR's did not contain any of the personal emails or attorney/client privilege information that were reference and published starting on 2-18-15 by Nigel Jaquis. This would tend to indicate that the release of the personal emails to the press did not occur accidentally, as part of a valid public records request.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/10/2015, at about 1:25 PM, I met with Vahan Michaelian at ETS for further follow up. Interviews conducted with Matt Shelby revealed a folder in his state Outlook account called "ArchiveManger." This folder name is consistent with an extracted PST file created by the DELL Archive Manager at ETS. This folder name is created by default during an extract and all email found from that search is stored there.

During an interview with Matt Shelby, where both Cpt. Davie and Lt. Harrington were present, it was determined this "ArchiveManager" folder in Shelby's Outlook account contained emails from John Kitzhaber, Cylvia Hayes and possibly attorney client communications. A detailed account of this interview can be found in Lt. Harrington's report.

As part of our team's task of investigating the source of the leak and if it came from ETS, was also securing access to any suspect PST files still present on the DAS file server.

While I was present, I directed Vahan to remotely login to Matt Shelby's Outlook account and remove this folder. Vahan created screen captures of Shelby's Outlook account folders, before and after our access.

The PST file "Shelby_mailbox_screenshots_before_and_after.pdf" has been uploaded in to NICHE.

Remarks:	Tony Creasey Interview on March 10th

SUBJECT: Interview of Tony Creasey

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 10th, 2015 at about 2:17 pm I met with Tony Creasey on the fifth floor of the State Revenue building in a conference room within the Technical Support Center (TSC). I told Tony that we were conducting a criminal investigation of some email leaks to certain news organizations and that we would like to speak with him about it. I told him that his cooperation with the investigation was purely voluntary and that he could leave at any time. I told him that I would be recording the conversation. The following is a summary of the interview. I copied the audio recording of the interview onto a DVD-R and logged into evidence.

Tony Creasey said that he worked for the state for about eleven years. He said that he started in the print plant, and moved to TSC in 2005. Tony said when he started with TSC, he worked at the Help Desk, but now works in the back office / infrastructure position.

Tony said that he did not know about the details surrounding the "Tracy Email" until the day after the article came out in the Willamette Week (2-13-15). He said that he has never seen the "Tracy Email", and was not on the distribution list.

Tony said that he is rarely involved in using the Archive Manager software to create .PST files based on PRR's and hasn't done this routinely since he was promoted to the back office. He said that he is not aware of any .PST files created within the last six months for emails involving John Kitzhaber or Cylvia Hayes other than the one that that was created by Scot Conner on February 5th. He said that he only knew about this after the Willamette Week article on February 18th when Scot Conner told him that he had been asked to create a .PST file that he later learned contained the Governor's personal emails. He said that he was not aware of any .PST files being transferred to anyone via any external media in the last six months.

Tony denied any knowledge of who leaked emails or information to the press. He was unable to provide any additional useful information related to the investigation.

Remarks:	Darin Rand Interview on March 11th

SUBJECT: First Interview of Darin Rand

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 11th, 2015 at about 11:05 am, Captain Davie and I met with Darrin Rand at ETS. We interviewed in his office while seated at his desk. I informed Darin that we were conducting a criminal investigation into the leak of emails to members of the press and that his cooperation was voluntary. I told him that I would be recording the conversation and did so. I later copied the audio recording onto a DVD-R and logged it into evidence. The audio recorded interview was later copied to a DVD-R and logged into evidence. The following is a summary of the interview.

Darin Rand said that, on February 6th, Mike Rodgers made him aware of the request from the Governor's Office to delete emails. He said that this was a unique situation for all of the ETS managers and so they (Michael Rodgers, Brian Neely, Gary Kreiger, Marshall Wells and himself) all worked together to make sure that they did the right thing. From the 6th-20th the managers would meet frequently and talk about what was going on and what they should or should not be doing. He said that he made notes during this period of time and sent notes to himself via email.

Rand said that we came into work on the morning of the 20th with the intent that he was going to write an email just to Bryan Neely explaining everything that transpired, but at some point during the day, he decided to send it to Sherri Lauer. Rand said that she came into ETS on Weds the 18th and to meet with Mike Rodgers, saying that she was conducting a personnel investigation. Rand said that Rodgers seemed worried about this because he didn't know that anyone was coming in to talk to him. Rodgers asked him to stay in the room with him during the interview, but after Sherri said that she was there at the request of her boss, Clyde Syke (who had received that call from a manager in DAS), Mike felt more at ease and decided to talk to her alone. Rand said that he got the impression that she was acting as an impartial third party in all this, so decided to send his email to her. Rand said that his main concern was that ETS management was not getting clear direction from DAS management (specifically Michael Jordan and Sarah Jo Chaplain) as to what they should or should not be doing until the 18th, when Alex Petit got involved.

Darin said that on February 20th at about 3 pm, he was in Bryan Neely's office with Mike Rodgers, Gary Kreiger, Bryan Neely, and Marshall Wells. He said that he printed out a draft of the email and showed it to everyone and asked for their input. He said that he had some theories in the original draft, typed in italics, that he ended up taking out before he sent the email to Sherri. He said that he gave a printed draft copy of the email to everyone in the room (listed above). He said that, as far as he knows, everyone gave him draft copies back and he put them in the shredder. He said that he printed off one copy of the final version and gave it to Bryan Neely, but later Bryan said that he shredded it. He said that he sent it to Sherri Lauer and then sent it again to the group of managers that had been in the room discussing it. He said that it was not ten to fifteen minutes later when Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells were escorted out of the building. Rand said that he sent the email to his personal Gmail account [redacted] at this time. The next day, he got request from Marshall Wells (via Facebook Instant Messaging) for a copy of the email, which he sent him via his personal Gmail account. Rand also sent a copy of the email from his personal email account to Julie Bozzi's personal email account [redacted] who he said is his old boss, because he was looking for some guidance related to the whole situation. He said that he sent it to her the Wednesday before it was leaked in the Oregonian (but I later received a copy of this email and learned that it was actually sent on Tuesday, February 24th at 12:34 pm. Nick Budnick posted his article detailing this email on OregonLive.com on February 26th, 2015 at 2:53 pm). Julie Bozzi now works for Oregon Health Authority, but was the prior manager of ETS. She left ETS in December if 2014, but has kept in contact with Darin and some of the other managers. Rand said that he talked to Bozzi on the phone while he was in the drive-thru at a Wendy's on February 24th. He said that he thinks that he called her on this date, but that she might have called him. They discussed his email and Julie asked him for a copy of the email, which he sent to her the next day.

Rand said that he is positive that Gary Kreiger and Marshall Wells did not leak the emails to the press based on their character and the fact that Marshall was out of town most of the time that this was going on. Darrin said that he suspected that, if anyone leaked the email, it was Mike Rodgers. He said that Mike potentially had something to gain from the release of the emails. He said that he was involved in it from day one. He said that Mike had access to the .PST files and transported them to DAS and access to the other materials that were leaked.

Rand had a general knowledge of the transfer of the thumb drives containing the governor's emails by Mike Rodgers to DAS West. He took email notes on his knowledge of what occurred (see attached).

Darin said that he has never seen the "Tracy Email", only heard of it. He said that Mike Rodgers told him about it and that Mike had also told him that he had hand-delivered a paper copy of the email to Michael Jordan at DAS West. He said that he has never been in possession of any of .PST's with Kitzhaber's emails or read any of Kitzhaber's emails. He said that the only information he has on any of these things came from Michael Rodgers and that Rodgers told him that the Governor's office was asking them to delete emails. Rand said that he had another discussion with Rogers on the 9th of February where Rogers told him that he had just met with Michael Jordan and what he was being asked to do had gone from being unethical to illegal and he was scheduling an appointment with the AG's office.

Darin Rand said that he has known Mike since 2007 and that Mike is a friend of his. Darin said that he has never seen Rodgers like this before. He described Mike as being "incredibly anxious" during this entire period of time. Rand said that, on February 12th which was the day that the story broke in the Willamette Week citing the "Tracy Email", they were having their regular manager's meeting. He said that there were probably 30 to 35 people in the meeting that day. He said that, one at a time, the top managers left and ended up in Bryan Neely's office. Darin said that Mike broke down crying in the room and said "what if they blame me for this leak?" Darrin said that he has never seen Mike act like this before.

Darin Rand told us that the only person that he is aware of that works for ETS that may have some "political leanings" is John Stehno, although Rand did not think John would have had access to anything so didn't suspect he was involved.

Darin said that it was either Mike Rodgers to Gary Kreiger that relayed to him that an OSP investigator had made the comment that the investigation was "purely political" as stated in the "Rand Email".

Captain Davie asked if Darrin Rand had communicated with Marshall Wells or Mike Rodgers since they'd been placed on administrative leave. Darrin said that he had communicated with each a couple times through Facebook, text or phone call. Davie asked if Rand had talked to either since his email had been published in the Oregonian. He said that he talked to both Rodgers and Wells and asked them if they had leaked his email to the Oregonian and they both denied doing so.

Darin Rand denied leaking his email (the "Rand Email") to the Oregonian and said that he did not know who did it.

Darin Rand described a general distrust of DAS and specifically DAS HR by the managers at ETS. He said that he would not go to DAS HR if he had a problem.

Rand provided us with copies of all emails and notes referenced in this report and copies are attached.

I called Darin Rand on 3-17-15 and asked him some additional questions about Julie Bozzi. Darin told us that Julie had called him on Monday, 3-16-15 at about 11:45 am and told him that she had just gotten a voice mail message from a woman that worked for the State Police wanting to set up an interview (Captain Davie left this message on this date and time). Julie asked about the interview and how it went. Rand told us that he told Julie that he had let the State Police investigators know that he had emailed her a copy of the "Rand Email".

Remarks:	Marshall Well Interview on March 13th

SUBJECT: Interview of Marshall Wells

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 13th, 2015 at about 2:04 pm Captain Terri Davie and I met with Marshall Well in a 1st floor conference room at DAS West. I informed Marshall that we were conducting a criminal investigation into the leak of emails to members of the press and that his cooperation was voluntary. I told him that I would be recording the conversation and did so. I later copied the audio recording onto a DVD-R and logged it into evidence. The audio recorded interview was later copied to a DVD-R and logged into evidence. The following is a summary of the interview.

Marshall said that he has worked for the State of Oregon for fifteen years. For the last eight years, he has worked at the data center (ETS). Prior to this, he worked for the Department of Transportation as their information security officer. He said that he currently works as the engineering and security manager for ETS and is also assigned as a security officer for DAS. For the last year, Marshall has led the 'Sustainability Program", which is a $47 million project to replace the state's aging infrastructure. Marshall said that his office has moved back to the data center and he has been there since January. Marshall said that he reports to, and is supervised by, Bryan Neely. He said that, day to day, it is primarily Michael Rodgers that gave him direction. Prior to Julie Bozzi being moved from ETS, it was primarily her that gave him direction.

Marshall said that he was out of the state and on vacation from February 11th to February 19th. He said that, prior to leaving for vacation, he was made aware of the request from the Governor's office to delete the Governor's private emails from the state email archives. He said that, prior to this, no one at ETS knew that the Governors' personal email accounts were being forwarded to, and captured, by the state email server. He said that on February 6th, Mike Rodgers called him into his office and told him about the request from the Governor's Office and the "Tracy Email". Marshall said that Mike Rodgers was looking for advice from him and told him that he felt that deleting the emails from the state email archives could be considered tampering with evidence. Marshall said that Mike Rodgers was "greatly concerned about" the request from the Governor's office. Marshall said that Mike Rodgers was concerned about the request and was also frustrated about the fact that he wasn't getting any direction from DAS management (Michael Jordan and Sarah Jo Chaplain) when he brought up the issue. Rodgers told Marshall that Matt Shelby was continuing to push him to delete the emails. Marshall told him that he thought the request was unusual, but that deleting the emails from the archives wouldn't matter, because copies would still exist (at ETS and also the Montana Data Center). Marshall said that he told Mike Rodgers that even if he deleted it in the current archive, it could be retrieved. Marshall said that Rodgers didn't know how the system backed up the email archives this the first time they talked about it, but their conversations on the matter continued over several days.

Marshall said that, during this February 6th conversation with Rodgers, Rodgers asked him to stand by the printer in the hallway, while he printed out the "Tracy Email". He brought the email into Mikes' office and read it in there. Mike told him that he was intending to take to Michael Jordan that day and show to him. Marshall said that he thought that it was curious that Mike had printed the email and was going to hand deliver it to Michael Jordan instead of just forwarding the email to him. He said that he later learned (from Mike Rodgers and Julie Bozzi), that this is the way that Michael Jordan liked to do things. Marshall said that it was towards the end of the day when this conversation occurred, and that Rodgers left (presumably for Michael Jordan's office). Marshall said that he did not see Mike return. Marshall said that he was also aware of the fact that Rodgers had been asked by Matt Shelby to bring him a thumb drive with the governor's emails on them. Marshall was under the impression (from discussions with Rodgers), that the purpose of this was so that they could review the emails to determine which ones were personal emails so that they could delete these emails. Marshall said that he guessed that the Governor's office staff thought that they were actually deleting emails (from the state email archive) when they deleted them from the .PST file that contained them. Marshall said that he thought that Rodgers had taken one trip and given one thumb-drive (not two) to Matt Shelby. Marshall said that he was never included in the distribution chain of the original email and was never forwarded an electronic copy.

On Monday morning (February 9th) Mike Rodgers again met with Marshall. He asked Marshall several technical questions at this time. He asked Marshall if ETS techs would be able to tell if someone had given themselves access to a mailbox on the state email system. He also asked Marshal if ETS techs could tell if someone had accessed the state email archives, and if so, what they had looked for (It is important to note that no leaked emails related to this investigation had been published by any news organization at this point). I asked Marshall why Rodgers was asking about this, and Marshall didn't know, but he was asking about the technical aspects of the emails system. Marshall said that he told Rodgers that he didn't know the answers to his questions, but would check with Vahan and get back to him.

Marshall said that he learned of the leak of the "Tracy Email" on February 13th (while he was in Arizona) because Mike Rodgers sent him the link to the Willamette Week article via text message. He said that he got a call from Mike Rodgers on the 15th, and that Mike seemed very stressed. Mike told him about the Federal subpoena, which he said that he read online. Marshall said that Mike wanted him to come back early from vacation so that they could talk about what they should do about it.

Marshall Wells allowed Captain Davie to look at his cell phone and take photographs of the text messages between him and Mike Rodgers.

I asked Marshall about the "Rand Email" and what he knew about it. He said that on Friday, February 20th at about 3pm, he and some of the other ETS managers were meeting in Bryan Neely's office. In that meeting he learned that Bryan and Darin Rand had been talking to State DOJ and were being told [redacted] (Marshall provided a large amount of information regarding this topic, including discussion with ODOJ attorneys and his actions which led up to him being placed on administrative leave. The information is not relevant to this investigation and so I will not summarize it here. For details see the audio recorded interview.) While the managers were meeting in Bryan's office, Darrin said that he had written up an email with his concerns. He said that Darrin Rand gave everyone a paper copy of the email, but he gave his back. He said that he was escorted out of the building and placed on administrative leave shortly after this meeting. Marshall said that he was escorted out of the building before Rodgers was and said that he waited for him in the parking lot.

Marshall said that he thought someone could have leaked the "Rand Email" to either protect themselves or held him or Mike Rodgers.

Later, during the interview, Marshall admitted that he had "an earlier, electronic copy of the 'Rand Email," but he said "but I haven't read it." Marshall said that Darin sent him a copy of the "Rand email" to his personal email address because he asked Darin to send it to him. He said that he didn't forward, print or otherwise distribute the email to anyone else. Marshall aloud Captain Davie to look at his phone and take a picture of the email and I noted that it had been received by him on February 21st.

Marshall told us that Nick Budnick, the Oregonian reporter that leaked the Rand Email, had somehow found his phone number and had called him several times. He said that Nick called him on the 21st, 22nd, 23rd and 25th of February and March 5th. Marshall said that Nick called him after he had published the article about the "Rand Email", asking if he had any comment on it and about being placed on admin leave. Nick also called him the day before he published his February 25th article on Michael Jordan and asked him if had any comments on what Michael Jordan had said to him or other ETS managers. Marshall said that he felt like Nick was "coaching him" to say "no comment" on the Michael Jordan issue, almost as if he wanted to report in his article that he had tried to contact the ETS employees that were placed on leave, and they did not comment. Marshall said that Nick also called him after he had published an article on February 25th titled "Claim: State data center managers 'in trouble' for talking to Kitzhaber-Hayes investigators". Marshall showed Captain Davie his phone and showed her the call log between him and Nick Budnick which included 14 phone calls to and from. Marshal said that Nick Budnick called him using a cell with the # (503) 961-5025 to Marshall Wells persona cell [redacted] The first time Nick called, he called from a pay phone. Marshall said that each time he received a call from Nick, he called him back and said that he had no comment and referred him to Michael Jordan.

Marshall asked us if we wanted him to speculate. I told him he could and he said "who is going to hear this?' and pointed to the audio recorder. I stopped the recorder at about 4:00 pm.

Marshall told us (off recording) that he suspected that Julie Bozzi released the Rand email to the Oregonian. At this time Marshall told us about a get together that he and some other current and past ETS employees had had in a bar on the night that he was placed on admin leave. Two minutes into the conversation, he told us that it was ok if we recorded it and we went back on recording. He said, after leaving work that day, he and Mike Rodgers went to a bar (at the time, Marshall thought it was called 'The Tap House', but later we learned that the group was actually at 'The Saw' in Salem). He said that several other people started showing up as the night went on including Natalie Rodgers (Mike's ex-wife), Wally Rogers, and Julie Bozzi.

Marshall said that he drank too much alcohol that night and had to be carried to the car. He said that he remembered a conversation about the "Rand Email" while he was there and said that he got the impression that Julie had somehow gotten a copy of it. He said that a lot of people still talk to her, even though she is not the administrator.

Marshall Wells said that his personal email accounts are [redacted] and [redacted]

Mike Rodgers told Marshall Wells that Nick Budnick had also called him at some point.

Marshall recalled that at one time, Jan Murdoc had told him that she had a list of all of the Governor's email accounts and passwords.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/13/2015, the same day Det. Ward, Crime Analyst John Lawson and I seized Michael Rodgers's state laptop from his office, we also conducted a cross reference search of "leaked" emails mentioned in nine articles written by Nigel Jaquiss. By now there were nine total articles written by Nigel, all providing quoted samples of "leaked" emails from unidentified person(s).

Up until now, all articles from Willamette Week, about leaked emails had mentioned older emails dated before 2/5/2015. This date is significant because that was the day the initial MJOJKT.PST was added to Matt Shelby's home directory by Scot Conner, per Matt Shelby for a public records request.

But on 2/6/2015, at 1:23 PM an email was sent to "jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com", which was an email created AFTER the creation of MJOJKT.PST. I also had the DAM access logs which ruled out anyone other than Vahan Michaelian conducting searches that would discover this email message.

	Subject	From	Recipient	Sent
1	Attorney-Client Communication	McDermott, Jim <jmcdermott@balljanik.com>	John A. Kitzhaber (jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com) <jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com>	2/6/201 13:23

Throughout our investigation we were never able to recover the original thumb drives created on 2/5/2015, by Vahan Michaelian on request of Michael Rodgers. But on 3/12/2015, I met with Vahan Michaelian at ETS to recreate the contents of TD1 and TD2. The accuracy was easy to reproduce since I had secured the DAM access logs earlier in the investigation. These logs allowed Vahan and I to reproduce each step he had taken on 2/5/2015, by following the log timeline.

The DAM log can be found in NICHE, saved as "20150312_ETS_DellArchiveManager_search_log.xls"
Once the contents of TD1 and TD2 were recreated, they were added to our [redacted] evidence project and searched using quoted extracts and names of individuals mentioned in Willamette Week articles.

The results of this search were very significant for our investigation. No other PST we had reviewed contained the 2/6/2015, 1:23 PM email to jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com, which was mentioned in a 3/10/2015 (blog 32928) Willamette Week article. This meant that only the people who had come in contact with TD2 could have leaked its contents, or had knowledge of the person they gave TD2 to.

This narrowed our persons of interest to the following;

Vahan Michaelian
Michael Rodgers
Matt Shelby
Grace Roth

A visual chart has been created by crime analyst John Lawson and uploaded to NICHE, associating each of the nine Willamette Week articles written and which thumb drive they would have been found on. This file is named "Thumbdrive Chart.pdf."

Having worked with Vahan throughout this entire investigation, and though he had the means and opportunity, having access to the DAM, I found no motive based on statements and cooperation from the very beginning of this investigation. He is a typical worker at ETS, focused on his job and completing tasks as asked.

For the means, motive and opportunity of Michael Rodgers, and Matt Shelby see Cpt. Terri Davie's and Lt. Jon Harrington's reports.

To date, Grace Roth has not been interviewed.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/13/2015, at about 2:50 PM, Det. James Ward, Crime Analyst John Lawson and I arrived at ETS to seize Michael Rodgers state laptop. Darrin Rand was the supervisor on the floor and provided us with access into Rodgers office.
Photographs were taken before and after seizing Rodgers laptop, which are stored with the PST file media and computer forensic analysis files.

I cursory search of Rodgers office was conducted, looking for any devices that could be used to store data, such as a PST file. Only Michael Rodgers state laptop was removed.

I contacted Darrin Rand after we had finished and him look over Rodger's office prior to him locking the door. Mr. Rand made no comments about the condition of Mr. Rodger's office. We followed Mr. Rand back to his office where explained what we had removed and provided him with a copy of an OSP Property Receipt Form 65. Mr. Rand signed at the bottom of this form.

Bryan Neely Interview on March 16th

Report:

SUBJECT: First Interview of Bryan Neely

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 16th, 2015 at about 9:35 am Captain Terri Davie and I met with Bryan Neely in his office at the State Data Center (ETS). I informed Bryan that we were conducting a criminal investigation into the leak of emails to members of the press and that his cooperation was voluntary. I told him that I would be recording the conversation and did so. I later copied the audio recording onto a DVD-R and logged it into evidence. The audio recorded interview was later copied to a DVD-R and logged into evidence. The following is a summary of the interview.

Bryan said that he has worked for the state since 1990. He worked for Adult and Family Services (later DHS) in IT. He said that he started for ETS since its beginning and worked on the project (CNIK) which created the Data Center as it is today. He was the operations manager from 2006 to 2013, and is now the engineering manager. He said that he is responsible for the implementation of new solutions within the data center. Bryan said that he reports to the administrator of the data center (Mike Rodgers).

Bryan said that he did not know about the "Tracy Email" until February 12th. He said that he was in a manager's meeting, and someone came in and said something to Mike Rodgers. He said that Mike looked worried. Bryan was sitting across the room from Mike and mouthed "what's wrong" to him. Mike motioned for him to follow him out of the meeting. Outside of the meeting, Mike told him all about the request that TSC had received from the Governor's office to delete emails and about the email that Tracy Osburn had written. Mike said that the email had just been leaked in an article in the Willamette Week and that he was worried that DAS leadership would think that he was the one that leaked the email. I asked Bryan if he knew why Mike was concerned about this being blamed for this, and Bryan said that he had no idea. Bryan said that he later read the article and didn't understand why Mike was worried at all about it. He said that it looked like everyone at ETS had done the right thing, so he didn't see what the big deal was. He said "all we did was say 'no' to a request to delete emails that were within the state email system, which seemed appropriate." He said no one else at ETS seemed worried or nervous about the leak of the "Tracy Email".

Bryan said that the group of his peers, the other ETS managers (Mike Rodgers, Gary Kreiger, Marshall Wells, Darin Rand and sometimes Shawn Wagoner and Adrian Turpin) had several discussions in the following weeks about the requests from the Governor's office and how to deal with them. Bryan said he wasn't directly involved in any of the tasks relate to the Governor's emails, but was assisting by providing insight and guidance to the rest of the group.

Bryan said that he did not have first-hand knowledge of the details of the Governor's request to delete emails and the request from Matt Shelby to put the Governor's private emails on thumb-drives and transfer them to DAS West. He said that, what he did know about all this, he learned from Mike Rodgers.

On February 17th, John Ritchie and Shawn Dawson received instruction from Alex Petit to "lock down" the state email archives. Bryan was made aware of the fact, at that time, that John Kitzhaber's personal emails had been leaked to the press at this time. Several managers (Mike Rodgers, Gary Kreiger, Adrian Turpin, Shawn Dawson, John Ritchie and himself) had a meeting in the afternoon on the 17th in which they discussed and implemented a plan to lock down the email system and to restrict access to the archives to a few select people in order to minimize the chance of other sensitive information leaving the building.

Bryan said that all of the ETS managers were under a lot of stress by the 17th of February. He said that the stress was due to the fact that everyone felt like they were being placed in an awkward position by their management because they could never get anything but verbal orders when it came to the actions that were being requested of them related to the Governor's emails. He said it made everyone very suspicious. He said that everyone was trying to protect themselves by documenting what was occurring.

Bryan discussed the "Rand Email" and the meeting that occurred on the 20th. He said that he and the other managers (Darin Rank, Mike Rodgers, Gary Kreiger, Marshall Wells and himself) were all in a meeting in his office. Bryan said that he and Darin collaborated on the drafting of the email and that he helped edit it. He said that the intent of the email was to document orders that they had been given verbally. He said that they felt pretty vulnerable as a management group. Bryan said that Darin brought a paper copy of his original draft of his email into the meeting and everyone read it and weighed in on it. Bryan said that he later shredded his email, but he does not know what happened to the rest of them. Bryan said that the meeting broke up and then Darin went back into his office to send the email. He said it wasn't very long before he saw the HR folks walk in and escort Mike and Marshall out of the building.

I asked Bryan if he had had any conversation with Marshall Wells or Mike Rodgers since they were placed on administrative leave. He said that he had a very brief conversation with Marshall that same day in the parking lot before he left. He said that he looked out and Marshall appeared lost and was looking in the window. Bryan said that he went out to talk to Marshall and Marshall told him that they probably shouldn't be talking, but Bryan told him that he didn't care. While they were talking, Mike Rodgers came out of the building. Just as Mike was exiting, Bryan said that he got a text that Darren (K9) was looking for him so he went back inside to meet with him.

Bryan said that he had exchanged a couple of texts and phone calls with Mike Rogers that same evening, but has had no conversations with him since then. He later said that he may have texted him that weekend too(on Sunday he thought), just to check in with him to see how he was doing. He said that Mike was upset when they talked.

Bryan said that the release of the "Rand Email" seemed weird, and different from the release of the other emails. He said that he suspected that there may be different 'actors' involved, but didn't elaborate why he felt this way.

Bryan said that, when he texted Mike Rodgers the evening that he was placed on admin leave, Mike had informed him that he was out drinking with Marshall Wells and Julie Bozzi.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/16/2015, at about 9:15 AM, I arrived at the Salem Area Command (SMO) to meet with Marshall Wells from ETS. This meeting had been prearranged with the understanding Marshall would consent to the acquisition and search of his personal and work cell phones.

Marshall arrived at SMO soon after I did. We met in the conference room and he provided me with two cell phones. I provided him with an OSP Consent to Search form which he read and signed after stating he understand what actions I was going to perform on his cell phones. I told him it would take about 1 – 2 hours to complete. I suggested he might get breakfast or coffee somewhere but Marshalls stated he had brought his e-book reader and would stay. He was concerned that we would damage or delete data from his Windows phone, which was his personal phone. I explained that nothing would be removed from his cell phones.

I asked Marshall for the passcodes to his cell phones, but rather than provide me with them he asked if he could just reset the codes to [redacted] agreed and then put both phones in airplane mode.

I asked if anyone had been calling him and he stated that Michael Rodgers had, but that since 03/13/2015 his number now comes up as "private." Marshall told me he asked Rodgers about this and Rogers told him somehow he had blocked his caller ID.

I provided an Apple iPhone and Windows phone to Detective James Ward, the computer forensics examiner for the Oregon State Police.

At about 11:15 AM, after the acquisition and search was complete I handed back both cell phones to Marshall and thanked him for coming in.

CONSENT TO SEARCH

I, Marshall Wells, hereby authorize Sgt. Stephen Payne, who has identified himself as a law enforcement official, and any other person(s), including but not limited to any Certified Forensic Computer Examiner he may designate to assist him, to remove, take possession of, duplicate ("forensically image") and conduct a complete search of the following computer systems, electronic data storage devices, computer data storage diskettes, CD-ROM's, DVD's, cellular phones or any other item capable of storing, retrieving, and/or accessing data or necessary to assist in the accessing of data pertinent to their investigation. This property belongs to me or is currently under my lawful control. I understand that a complete search may include a comprehensive examination and analysis of all data stored by or within the device including the recovery of deleted files or data fragments, and the bypassing or cracking of passwords or encryption. I understand that this consent is ongoing until the property is analyzed. I also understand that the forensic image or copy of my property will remain under the control of law enforcement.

(List all property taken for examination, including external storage equipment.):

Make	Model	Serial/ID #	Description
Apple	5S	[redacted]	Gray
Nokia	909/1020	[redacted]	White

State property - [redacted]

MM (initials) I understand that this electronic equipment may be removed and taken to the Oregon State Police Computer Forensics Laboratory, or another suitable location, to fully conduct a search. I also understand that I can revoke this consent at any time by calling the Oregon State Police Computer Crimes Unit (503-602-2159) or the officer's direct contact number: _____.

MM (initials) Further, I explicitly consent that this cellular, wireless, or network capable device may be made or allowed to connect to any network (cellular, WiFi, etc) and that any new data received while under the control of law enforcement may be examined, analyzed and copied on an ongoing basis until I revoke this consent or the device is returned to me at the completion of this investigation.

I give this consent to search freely and voluntarily without fear, threat, coercion, or promises of any kind. This consent to search is given by me this 16th day of March, 2015.

Remarks:	Julie Bozzi Interview on March 17th

SUBJECT: First Interview of Julie Bozzi

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 17th, 2015 at 3:01 pm Captain Davic and I met with Julie Bozzi at the PUC Building in Salem. We interviewed her in a conference room on the second floor. We explained to Julie that we were conducting a criminal investigation into the leak of John Kitzhaber's personal emails to the media and that her cooperation was purely voluntary. We recorded the interview and I later copied the audio recording onto a DVD-R and logged it into evidence. The following is a summary of our interview with Julie Bozzi.

Julie said that she started working for the state in 1997 working at ODOT as a consultant. In 2000, she transferred to OHA (then under DHS) as their project management office manager. After five years, she was promoted to the applications manager, which was an executive position. While she was there, she was asked to oversee the SCENIC project, which eventually became the State Data Center (ETS). She became the deputy administrator of ETS in 2007 and the administrator in 2010. She said that she is still technically in that role. She said that she is currently on rotation to OHA. In August of 2014, she was transferred to Cover Oregon. She said that she volunteered for this assignment. Since December 8th, 2014, she was asked to manage the Cover Oregon transition to what is now called the Medicaid System Transfer Project. She said that Michael Jordan essentially said that she could not come back to ETS. That he needed her to work this project. She said that, at the end of calendar year 2015, her position at DAS was going to be terminated, so she was encouraged to seek a permanent position at OHA. She said that, any position at OHA would be below her current position in salary and rank. She said that this put her in a precarious situation.

While she was the administrator at ETS, her managers were Bryan Neely, Darin Rand, Deanna Dyer, Al Grapoli, Mike Rodgers and Wally Rodgers. She said that Michael Jordan was technically her boss, but that she reported to one of his deputies, Sarah Jo Chaplain. She later said that Sarah Jo was not competent and did not understand the complexities of the technology. She said that she would not get good direction from her and, if she asked for advice, she would often get a bunch of extra work thrown at her that felt "nonsensical." She said that she had frustration because of this and sometimes felt like it was a 'black hole'. She said that Mike Rodgers shared this same sense for frustration with Sarah Jo and that the two often talked about this after Mike took over the administrator postion.

Julie said that she didn't learn about what was happening with Kitzhaber and Hayes until just a few days before John Kitzhaber resigned. She was made aware of what was occurring during a conversation she had with a colleague at OHA. She said that she wasn't really following the controversy to that point, but then started reading about it in the paper as it progressed from there. About a week later, she and Bryan Neely had a discussion in which Bryan told her that there was a leak of emails to the press. She said that Bryan told her about the "Tracy Email" leak at this point. She said that she had already seen something in the new related to this, but Bryan filled in some additional details. She said, later in the day (at about 4:30 pm), she received a call from Mike Rodgers. She said that this was atypical for Mike to call her out of the blue. She said that Mike told her that he and some other ETS managers were at "The Saw" drinking and that he and Marshall had just been "escorted out of the building." Julie said that she was very surprised by this news and told him that she would be right over. She said that she got to "The Saw" at about 5:30 pm. When she got there, Mike Rodgers, Marshall Wells, Natalie Rodgers and Darin Rand were there. She said that it almost felt like a celebration, just friends hanging out and drinking. She said that she'd been there for about an hour when Wally Rogers showed up. Marshall and Mike told her that, within the last 24 hours, they had had a conversation with Alex Petit, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie in which Mike and Marshall were asked to delete some more records off of a file server. They told her that they refused to do this because they thought they might destroy the "chain of evidence". They reported to her that this was the reason that they had been placed on administrative leave. Julie said that she did not get any input from her managers on this topic (she never heard the other side of the story, just what Mike and Marshall had to say about it.)

Julie said that, after this evening, she has had hardly any contact with Marshall Wells. She said that she tried to reach out to him twice. She said that she has talked to Mike a few times after the night at the bar. She said that Mike has been acting very distraught in her phone conversations with him since.

Julie said that she has also communicated with Darin Rand from time to time in the last month or so. She said that Darin called her and told her that he and the other managers at ETS were distraught and felt cornered. She said that Darin had several "conspiracy theories" that he talked to her about. She said that he had told her that he had written an email documenting things, and Julie asked him to send it to her so she could "see what he was talking about." She said that he sent it to her, and she read through it. She said that Darin was looking for advice from her and who he should talk to.

Julie said that it was her impression, from talking to Darrin and Mike on the phone and her discussions with Mike, Marshall and Darrin at the bar, that the managers at ETS were not feeling supported by Michael Jordan and his regime. She said that they felt like they were being "set up" to be the next to go. She said that they felt like "normal paths" weren't working for them.

I asked Julie if she worked with Nick Bunick when she was on Cover Oregon. She initially denied this. I asked her if she had had any communication with Nick, and she said that Nick had "called her a couple of times essentially asking her for information on things." She said that she hadn't had any communication with him though. She said that Nick has asked her for information on what was going on at ETS and also if she had copies of the Governor's emails, but she told him that she did not want to comment. I asked Julie if she had her phones so we could confirm the information about the calls from Bunick, and she said that she left both her personal cell and work cell at home today. She said that she does not know how Nick got her cell phone number. Julie said that she has not exchanged any emails with Nick or met with him face-to-face. Julie said she did not know Nigel Jaquis at all nor had she had any contact with him.

For a long time, Julie Bozzi denied any additional contact with Nick Budnick or to sharing any information or emails with him. When I began to talk to her about ways in which we could exclude her as a suspect in our investigation like her consenting to a search of her phone, email and taking a polygraph examination, she eventually said "the reason why this is difficult for me is that I do have a former issue that I do have a lawyer involved with." She went on to explain that "hypothetically", there may have been some additional phone calls and communications between her and Nick Budnick on this other issue. She said that she wanted to confirm with her attorney that it was ok to talk to us about it further.

Julie said that her personal email address is [redacted] Julie's cell is [redacted]

Remarks:	Search of M. Rodgers laptop at SMO

DISTRIBUTION:

TBD

MENTIONED SUSPECTS:

TBD

MENTIONED OFFICERS:

Previously mentioned

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/17/2015, Det. Ward and I conducted a computer forensic search of the state laptop seized from Michael Rodgers office.

The scope of our search was to determine if any of the PST files stored to thumb drives (TD1 and TD2) Vahan Michaelian had created on 02/06/2015, at approximately 11:01 AM and 3:50 PM had been saved to Rodgers laptop.

The results of this search was negative.

A second type of search was conducted to determine what, if any USB devices had been inserted into Rodgers laptop. This search revealed four Registry entries of possible evidentiary value.

On 02/06/2015, at 11:35 AM and 4:03 PM, two Kingston brand, DataTraveler USB thumb drives had been inserted into Rodgers state laptop. The Registry keys from USBSTORE showed "Install" and "Mount" activity for both of these Kingston thumb drives. This is significant because of the of date and time proximity when Vahan Michaelian had created two thumb drives on Michael Rodgers request that same day.

I conducted a recorded interview with Vahan on 03/20/2015 about his recollection of the 2/6/2015 events and he recalled Rodgers asking him to leave a morning meeting and extract emails from the DELL Archive Manager (DAM). Vahan told me Rodgers handed him two new thumb drives, still in their retail package. Vahan told me he couldn't remember what brand they were. Vahan told me after he searched the DAM with the initial criteria his was given from Rodgers, the data extracted fit on one thumb drive. Vahan told me he left his cubicle, walked to Rodgers office and hand TD1 directly to Rodgers. Vahan immediately left Rodgers office without any verbal communications.

I recall from an initial interview conducted on 2/19/2015, at ETS in Michael Rodgers office, where Cpt. Tom Worthy and Cpt. Terri Davie were present, Rodgers walked us through the creation of TD1 and TD2. Rodgers had a desk draw in his office that he opened in front of us and showed us unopened Kingston brand USB thumb drives. Rodgers recalled taking two thumb drives from this draw and giving them to Vahan on 2/6/2015.

Rodgers Registry activity shows an unrecognized Kingston USB drive inserted at 11:35 AM, approximately 34 minutes after Vahan delivered TD1 to him.

Vahan told me, that later the same day Rodgers came to Vahan's cubicle and stated to try a different search terms, that not enough emails were extracted the first time. Vahan told me he used TD2 to create a second extract of emails from the DAM. This activity was finished at approximately 3:50 PM. Vahan told me he then left his cubicle and walked to Rodgers office again, hand delivering TD2 Rodgers. Vahan left without any verbal communications with Rodgers. Vahan told me he did recall when Rodgers had left ETS, or if anyone was in his office when he delivered TD1 and TD2 to Rodgers that day.

Rodgers Registry activity shows another, unrecognized Kingston USB drive inserted at 4:03 PM that day, approximately 13 minutes from the time TD2 was given to him by Vahan.

Another USBSTORE Registry entry worth noting is a Registry entry from Rodgers laptop showing a previously inserted USB drive on 2/7/2015, at 7:02 PM. This was on a Saturday evening, the day after TD1 and TD2 were created and a day after two new Kingston brand thumb drives were inserted into his laptop. To date this USB activity has not been investigated further.

Further details of this computer forensic search can be found within the [redacted] case files on the SLP-E3, secured at the Salem Area Command Evidence locker.

"Wally Rogers Email" An email sent by Wally Rogers after his official interview.

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 18, 2015, Lieutenant Harrington and I interviewed Wally Rogers in a room at the Lottery Building located next door to his office building, the Enterprise Technology Services (ETS) building.

At approximately 3:00 p.m., Wally Rogers arrived for his interview. Lieutenant Harrington and I escorted him to a room and then introduced ourselves. Wally Rogers asked what the investigation was about and if all of the investigations being conducted by the various agencies were separate. We explained to Wally Rogers about the different investigations that were occurring and that the Oregon State Police investigation was separate. We also explained that even though he was sent over to the interview by his employer, his participation in the interview was completely voluntary.

The following information was provided by Wally Rogers and the statements are in substance statements.

At 3:03 p.m., Lieutenant Harrington turned on an audio recorder. Wally Rogers acknowledged he knew the interview was being recorded. The recording was not transcribed. For a verbatim account of the interview, refer to the audio recording, which was later entered into evidence by Lieutenant Harrington. At the time of this report, I did not have access to the evidence exhibit number.

At the beginning of the interview, Wally Rogers was asked to provide a summary of his work history. Wally Rogers said in the 1980's he worked for the state as a student aide and then was hired as an economist assistant. In 1988, he moved to private industry and in 1999, he return to Oregon and began working for the Department of Revenue. In 2013, ETS and DAS reorganized and he became a "Service Delivery Manager" at ETS.

Wally Rogers said he worked with Bryan Nealy, Darin Rand, Marshall Wells and Gary Kreiger at ETS and at the time of the incident and they were all supervised by Acting Administrator Mike Rodgers.

Wally Rogers said he was not involved in the email that Tracy Osburn sent and he had nothing to do with the release of Governor Kitzhaber's personal emails. For reference, the email that Tracy Osburn wrote on February 5, 2015, at 5:41 p.m., and which was disseminated through the state email system and released to numerous news agencies will be referred to as the "Tracy Email" in this report.

Wally Rogers mentioned that he had an employee that worked for him, Shawn Wagoner, and he found out that Shawn Wagoner was involved in the "Tracy Email" when he read Shawn's name in the Willamette Week article on February 12, 2015. He had heard around the office that there were concerns about deleting files, but he was not involved in those incidents and really did not know what was going on.

Wally Rogers acknowledged that he had read news articles about John Kitzhaber's personnel emails being released to the media, but he had not been involved. He said he was not involved in the creation, distribution, or storage of any pst files.

When asked, Wally Rogers said he had read the Oregonian article by Nick Budnick that detailed an email that Darin Rand had written. He only read the article and was never sent a copy of the actual email and he had not seen the email. For reference, the email that Darin Rand wrote on February 20, 2015, at 3:19 p.m., and which was disseminated through the state email system and released to numerous news agencies will be referred to as the "Rand Email" in the this report.

Wally Rogers was asked what he knew about the situation at ETS involving his co-workers and supervisor, Mike Rodgers.

Wally Rogers stated in substance that on February 19, 2015, Mike Rodgers asked the managers to stay late. Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells shared information with the managers. They said "downtown" will not send them instructions in email form on what they wanted ETS to do, specifically Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells.

Mike Rodgers went on to say Michael Jordan does not want anyone at ETS talking to investigators without DOJ present. Michael Jordan and Sara Jo Chaplin were using comments similar to "Protect the State" and "The Good of the State." Mike Rodgers even forwarded the managers an email from Sara Jo Chaplin instructing them to not talk without DOJ present.

Wally Rogers said Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells were frustrated that they were not getting clear directions from Michael Jordan.

Wally Rogers said he trust Marshall Wells and did not think he would share personal emails with the media.

On February 20, 2015, Wally Rogers was at ETS, but he did not know what was going on. He saw Mike Rodgers start to walk out of the office carrying a lot of coats. He knew that in the past Mike Rodgers had donated coats to charity, so he thought that was what Mike Rodgers was doing.

Wally Rogers said he cares about Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells and he believes what ever happened, they both were trying to do the right thing.

When asked, Wally Rogers said he did not know how John Kitzhaber's personal emails were leaked.

I told Wally Rogers that the State Police had been looking at text messages and I wanted to know what the significance was of a text message that he sent to Mike Rodgers. It was specifically mentioning him and Marshall Wells. Wally Rogers said that on March 5, 2015, he could not get ahold of Marshall Wells, so he sent a text to Mike Rodgers asking him to tell Marshall Wells that "we" appreciate him at ETS.

When asked, Wally Rogers said it was just coincidence that the text message telling Marshall Wells that ETS cares about him was the same day that Michael Jordan resigned his position with the state.

Wally Rogers was asked what he knew about Julie Bozzi and he explained that he did not know her really well because he only started working for ETS in 2013 and Julie Bozzi left to go to a job rotation at Cover Oregon in 2014.

When asked, Wally Rogers said he did not have a lot of recent interaction with Julie Bozzi.

When asked, Wally Rogers said the last time Julie Bozzi communicated with him was on one of the Saturdays after Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells were put on administrative leave. Julie Bozzi asked him if he had heard how Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells were doing and if people at ETS were okay without them being there.

When asked, Wally Rogers said Julie Bozzi did not call him very often. He estimated she called him about once every three months.

When asked, Wally Rogers said he has never had contact with either Nick Budnick or Nigel Jaquiss.

When asked, Wally Rogers said none of his co-workers have told him they have had contact with either Nick Budnick or Nigel Jaquiss.

During the interview, Wally Rogers appeared to be omitting the information that Lieutenant Harrington and I already knew about him going to a local bar on February 20, 2015, and drinking with Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells after they were put on administrative leave.

When asked specifically about going to the bar on February 20, 2015, Wally Rogers said he did go to the bar, but he did not know why he didn't tell us about going.

Wally Rogers stated that on February 20, 2015, at about 6:30 p.m., he finished work and he asked himself, "Where would Mike go?" He knew that Mike's daughter worked at a local bar called, "The Saw," so he drove by and stopped. When he walked in he saw, Mike Rodgers, Marshall Wells, Julie Bozzi, Darin Rand and Natalie Rodgers. Natalie Rodgers is Mike Rodgers' ex-wife. Wally Rogers said Marshall Wells was already very intoxicated, he was sick and barely could lift his head to talk. About five minutes after arriving, Darin Rand got up and left. Darin Rand appeared as if he was "urgent to go" and get out of the bar.

When asked, Wally Rogers said the main topic was the Mike Rodgers was mad about what had happened and especially mad at Michael Jordan. Wally Rogers said there were not any discussions about what they "as a group" should do. Everyone was having small conversations. He and Julie Bozzi talked about the data center and how it would run.

When asked, Wally Rogers said everyone seemed very surprised to see him walk into the bar. No one had been expecting him and it was not normal for him to go out with them for drinks. But he felt it was important to make sure Mike Rodgers was okay.

After a while, Mike Rodgers became quiet and he noticed Marshall Wells was getting sick, so he helped Marshall Wells outside so he could throw up. Shortly after, Marshall Wells left with his ride.

Wally Rogers could not remember the exact order everyone left, but he knew that Darin Rand left first and Marshall Wells left second.

At approximately 4:01 p.m., the interview was concluded and the recording was turned off. Lieutenant Harrington and I thanked Wally Rogers and all of us left the office.

Later that evening, I received two emails from Wally Rogers. The emails concerned what Wally Rogers thought was reason the Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells were placed on administrative leave and that he thought there was a bigger issue happening that needed to be brought out in the State Police investigation.

It should be noted that Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward conducted various technical searches of the email archive system, the network drives of numerous state employees and many examinations related to the pst files identified during the investigation as having been created using search parameters that involved John Kitzhaber and/or Cylvia Hayes. No information was gathered during the investigation that discredited or contradicted the statements provided by Wally Rogers.

Refer to supplemental reports completed by Lieutenant Harrington, Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward for additional information that may be related to Wally Rogers.

SUBJECT: Second Interview of Bryan Neely

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 18th, 2015 at about 1:59 pm Captain Terri Davie and I interview Bryan Neely again in a conference room at the Oregon State Lottery Headquarters. The interview was audio recorded in its entirety. The following is a summary of the recorded interview. I later copied the audio recording onto a DVD-R and logged it into evidence.

Bryan said that, since our first interview with him, he has talked to Julie Bozzi a few times. He said that he talked to her last night and said that he also talked to her the day that we interviewed him (on Monday). On Monday, she called him several times in the morning (a check of his phone confirmed the calls at 11:27 am and 11:28 am) and also in the afternoon (a check of his cell phone confirmed the call at about 4:17 pm, the duration was 13 minutes). During this conversation Julie said that she had been contacted by the State Police to set up an interview. Bryan said that Julie asked him what the interview was like. Bryan said that they talked, "in general terms" about the interview, but didn't go over specific questions that we had asked.

Bryan said that he called Julie the previous evening (March 17th) and confirmed by looking at his phone that he talked to her at 7:40 pm for 24 minutes. He said that he called so see how her interview with OSP went. He said that he and Julie again talked, "in general" about the interview. She told him that we were asking her specifically about Darrin's email that she had a copy of. She told him that she wasn't going to give us "access to the file" that she had the email in before she talked to her attorney. Bryan said that she didn't specify what she meant by this. Julie also told Bryan that we had questioned her about contacting him right after his interview.

Bryan told us that he has had some communication with Mike Rodgers, since he was placed on administrative leave, that he thought was unusual. [redacted] He said that he has been open about this fact with his friends and coworkers. He said that he got a text from Mike

Rodgers last night at about 9 pm. Mike's text to Bryan said that he was having trouble [redacted] Mike texted that he would understand if Bryan didn't respond. Bryan did not respond to the text. Bryan said that the timing of the text felt strange to him since it had been so long since he'd communicated with Mike. Captain Davie viewed and took a photograph of this text message.

He said that it was not uncommon at all to have frequent communications with Julie Bozzi and has known her for a long time. He said he considers her a friend.

SUBJECT: Second Interview of Darin Rand

EXHIBITS:

JMH-E1 - DVD-R with audio recorded interview

ACTION TAKEN:

Captain Davie and I interview Darrin Rand again on March 18th, 2015 at about 4:22 pm in a conference room at ETS. This interview was audio recorded and I informed Rand that the conversation was being recorded. The purpose of this second interview was to ask him about the gathering of ETS employees at "The Saw" which Marshall Well and Julie Bozzi had told us about during our interviews with them. They had informed us that Darin was also at the gathering (which was on the same evening that Rodgers and Wells had been placed on administrative leave and which Rand did not tell us about during his our original interview with him. He informed us that he had only communicated with Mike and Marshall via text, Facebook or phone.)

Rand informed us that about 30 minutes after Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells were escorted out of the building, he received a text from Rogers who informed him that they were drinking at "The Saw". Rand said that he went there and Mike Rodgers, Natalie Rodgers and Marshall Wells were there. Julie Bozzi came in a little bit later. He said that there was a lot of "venting" and "decompressing" going on, but was not specific as to what the group was talking about. He said that the subject of his email came up. He said that he left around 6-6:30 pm and that Wally Rodgers showed up right as he was leaving.

Rand said that he didn't remember why he sent his email to Julie Bozzi from his personal email to her personal email. He later said that he thinks that he sent her the email on his phone after he talked to her, while he was at Wendy's. Rand told us that he has had a couple of phone conversations with Julie Bozzi after their conversation on the 24th of February. Rand told us that he did not receive any phone calls from Nick Budnick after he'd met with the group at "The Saw" like Marshall Wells had and has not communicated with him. Rand said he he had not specific information regarding Julie Bozzi leaking his email to Nick Budnick at the Oregonian and he said that he is not sure that Julie would trust him enough to tell him if she did it..

ADDITIONAL PERSONS MENTIONED:

Kevin Stone – DOB: 8-16-60; 3423 Belvedere St. West Salem 97304 – Works for Salem School District as an aid in Special Education - email address: [redacted] – Julie Bozzi's husband

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 19th, 2015 at about 1:15 pm, Captain Davie and I walked over to the PUC building to see if we could locate Julie Bozzi. Our intent was to ask her if she had had an opportunity to consult with her attorney yet about the matter. As we walked into the reception area on the second floor, Julie walked out of a side office area and greeted us. We asked her if we could speak with us briefly and she led us to the same conference room that she had spoken to us in before. Prior to this interview, we had learned from Sergeant Payne that he had obtained logs from Mike Rodgers work laptop computer that were consistent with two new thumb drives being inserted right after he had gotten the thumb drives that contained the .PST files of John Kitzhaber's personal emails from Vahan Michaelin (see his report on this topic for details). I had a copy of this log and, at one point, showed it to Julie during this interview. We had also learned, by this point in the investigation, that one of the emails of John Kitzhaber's that was referenced by Nigel Jaquis in a Willamette Week article, had not been on the large MJOJKT.PST file that TSC staff had created and places onto Matt Shelby, Liani Reeves and Amy Wojckicki's network drives. That this referenced email only existed on a .PST file on the second of the two thumb-drives created by Vahan. This strongly suggested that the leak of emails came from distribution of the combined data from the thumb drives and not the distribution of the MJOJKT.PST. Mike Rodgers only had direct, easily accessible copies of the .PST files on the thumb drives, not the MJOJKT.PST. Based on this, the information that Payne had provided related to his work laptop, and the totality of the other information that we had learned from our other investigative efforts to this point, I suspected that Mike Rodgers was the individual who had provided copies of John Kitzhaber's personal emails to the Willamette Week.

We sat down with Julie at a conference table and I asked her if she had had an opportunity to talk to her attorney yet. She said that she had talked to him and that he had advised her to go ahead and cooperate with the investigation. She told us that she was the one that shared the "Rand Email" with Nick Budnick of the Oregonian. She said that she could get us proof of this, but that it would come from her husband, Kevin Stone's, email account. I asked her if we could record the rest of the interview and she said that we could.. The following is a summary of her recorded statement.

Julie said that she made a .PDF copy of the email that Darrin Rand sent her. She said that her husband logged onto his email account and sent the .PDF file with some verbiage that she wrote to explain who some of the mentioned players were, to Nick Budnick of the Oregonian.

Julie said, like she'd told us before, that Darin indicated to her that they were looking for advice and didn't know who to turn to and who to give this information to. He said that they felt cornered and lost all hope that there was anyone they could trust. She told them that she wouldn't trust some of the people in State government that they had thought to go to and asked for her opinion about. She said "I had had my own personal experiences and really felt like sending stuff to the media was the only safe way to expose some situations." Julie said that no one else (aside from her husband and her attorney) knew that she was planning on releasing the email to Nick prior to her releasing it or now knew that she had done so. Julie said that she was the one who had given Marshall Wells' and Mike Rodger's phone numbers to Nick Budnick. She said that she saved Rand's email for her own case because it was "perfect evidence of the kind of crap that he (Michael Jordan) had done" to her.

Julie said that she would forward the email that she and her husband sent to Nick Budnick to my state email account which she did (the email is attached to this report).

Julie said that she was not involved at all in the release of the personal email to the Willamette Week. She said that she tried to get copies of those emails, but could never get anyone to give them to her or even admit that they had them. She said that she speculated that if anyone had those emails, it would have been Mike Rodgers. She said that, in the past, Michael had printed out copies of sensitive documents and shared them with people at ETS. She said he had a pattern of doing this. She also said that the only time she saw the "Tracy Email" was when it was on the TV news. She said that they put the email on the screen, but blurred it a bit, so it could not be read. She said that she could easily make out the name at the top of the email chain as being Mike Rodgers, as if he had been the one that printed it. She suspected that this was a copy of the printed version that he told her he'd taken to Michael Jordan. Julie said that she called Mike Rodgers and told him that she'd seen his email on the news. She said that he assumed that she had meant that she had seen the Willamette Week article that quoted the email. She said that she corrected him and said "No, I saw the actual email on the news." She said that he became worried and exclaimed "You saw the email!?!" She said that she was surprised by his response and reaction and all of this caused her to start speculating that Mike was the one that had released .PST files with Kitzhaber's personal emails. Because of this belief, she told Mike that if he had anything related to the Governor, that she would be interested in getting a copy of it. She said that Mike did not admit to having anything on the phone to her on this occasion.

Julie went into some detail related to what she had been working with Nick Budnick and her attorney on prior to the release of the "Rand Email" to Budnick. It had to do with some projects that she worked on involving Cover Oregon and is outside of the scope of this investigation. For details, see the audio recording of the interview.

After our interview with Julie Bozzi, I asked if she would attempt a recorded pre-text phone call with Mike Rodgers, which he agreed to. She made this call at about 2:30 pm (on March 19th, 2015). I later listened to the recorded call. Of note, the following statements were made (refer to the audio recording for additional details):

Julie told Mike that the State Police showed her logs that proved that he made copies the .PST files containing the governor's emails on his laptop. Mike responded by saying "OK."

Julie told Mike that the State Police had evidence that he talked to Nigel at the Willamette Week and that they had a pretty good case against him. Mike responded by saying "That's interesting." He then said "I don't know what anyone could have done with my equipment, so who knows." He explained that his laptop was at work and that it was his work laptop (even though Julie had not been specific with him as to which laptop we had information that he copied the .PST file with).

Julie asked if he copied the files and he said "I, I, I have no comment on any of that because I know they're trying to pin that on me but it's not true."

Julie told Mike that she had told that State Police investigators that she had shared Darin Rand's email with Nick Budnick to try and protect him and Marshall.

Julie asked Mike if he had ever gotten a new phone and he said that there was nothing in his phone texts or phone log that he is concerned about.

Mike said that ever since that State Police talked to Marshall Wells, Marshall will no longer talk to him.

Julie asked Mike if there was anything she could do for him. He said "well, is there anything that you have for Nick or anything that would be of interest to them?" She said that she didn't. He said "Even anything just to stir the pot?" She said that she only had 'old stuff'. She asked Mike if there was anyone at ETS that she might be able to get something from. Mike told her that he thought that everyone at ETS was in survival mode and didn't think they would help her.

Mike told Julie that the police would likely know that they were currently talking and then asked her "are they going to be trying to listen to calls?" Julie said "well we could be talking for any reason." Mike said that he almost went over to Julie's house the previous evening to talk to her face-to-face.

They spoke about potential charges that Mike could get if "the State Police were able to pin this on him." Julie said that it seemed like it would be light. She said that if the State Police were to be able to pin a misdemeanor on him, what was that going to do to him. He said "well right now I feel like....I'm unemployable."

Mike said "I have a question for you. So you told them that you released the 'Darrin Email"? Julie responded that she did. Mike asked her if she had any fear of retribution for doing it. Julie said that Darrin was the one that sent it out of the state network, not her. Mike then asked if Darrin was going to be ok.

"Darrin Kazlauskas Email" regarding Mike Rodgers.	An email about a personnel investigation

ACTION TAKEN:

On March 20, 2015, I contacted the DAS Human Resources Director Darrin Kazlauskas to ask him to arrange for Mike Rodgers to report for an interview with the State Police. I asked Darrin Kazlauskas to not tell Mike Rodgers the meeting was with the State Police.

I received a call a short time later from Darrin Kazlauskas, informing me that Mike Rodgers had been contacted and would be reporting to DAS-West as requested and that Mike Rodgers had mentioned he would have an attorney present.

At approximately 11:30 a.m., Lieutenant Jon Harrington and I arrived at DAS-West and contacted Darrin Kazlauskas. Darrin Kazlauskas had arranged a conference room so a private interview could be held.

At approximately 12:00 p.m., Mike Rodgers arrived alone. He recognized me from a previous interview he and I had on February 19, 2015. I told Mike Rodgers that I had asked HR to call him to order him to the office for an interview, but since he had arrived, it was his choice to be part of the interview or not. It was completely voluntary on his part and if he did not want to participate, he did not have to.

Lieutenant Harrington explained to Mike Rodgers that we needed to understand why he shared the personal emails of John Kitzhaber with the media, we already understood how it was accomplished, but we need him to explain the why. When Lieutenant Harrington said that, Mike Rodgers never denied or acknowledged that he was the person that released John Kitzhaber's personal emails. Mike Rodgers did not appear upset when Lieutenant Harrington made the statements and he did not appear shocked that Lieutenant Harrington had insinuated that he had committed a crime.

Mike Rodgers stated he wanted to call his attorney and explain that it was the State Police and not DAS that has requested the meeting.

Mike Rodgers placed the call to his attorney, Steve Brischetto. The call was on speaker phone and we introduced ourselves to Attorney Brischetto and explained the purpose for the interview. Attorney Brishetto stated he was concerned and felt Mike Rodgers should have a criminal defense lawyer representing him in an interview and not him, because he was an employment lawyer. Attorney Brischetto stated he thought that the State Police investigation had been stopped and he was surprised it was still moving forward.

A short time later, the telephone call was disconnected. Lieutenant Harrington and I thanked Mike Rodgers for his time and as we were leaving, Mike Rodgers asked us if he could ask a few questions. We told him that we wanted to be very careful on what was said since his attorney was not present. We talked for a few minutes about what Mike Rodgers had been doing while on administrative leave, what his co-workers had said and asked about him and how Marshall Wells was doing. We also talked about up-coming vacations that Lieutenant Harrington and I were planning on taking.

Towards the end of our quick chat, I explained to Mike Rodgers that Lieutenant Harrington and I would be happy to conduct an interview at any time that he and his attorney are available. I asked him if he would be willing to re-contact his attorney to see if he had a recommendation of a criminal defense lawyer he could call se we could have an interview scheduled quickly. Mike Rodgers agreed to call Attorney Brishetto and ask about a criminal defense attorney. Lieutenant Harrington and I stepped out of the room and down the hall. Once Mike Rodgers had finished his call, he came out to tell us that it would take some time to arrange for an attorney. The person that Attorney Brishetto had in mind to represent Mike Rodgers was already representing a state employee on a similar issue and it could be considered a conflict.

Lieutenant Harrington and I thanked Mike Rodgers for his time and asked him to call us just as soon as he could for an interview.

On March 16, 2015, Darrin Kazlauskas had sent me an email answering follow-up questions I had about Mike Rodgers and a personnel investigation that DAS Human Resources had assigned to a HR Director from ODOT to conduct.

During the weeks since Mike Rodgers' first interview, I had gathered information that Mike Rodgers had been interviewed by someone named Sherry Lauer and that Enterprise Technology Services (ETS) manager Darin Rand had sent Sherry Lauer an email. The email that Darin Rand wrote contained a timeline of the actions of several employees that work at ETS, including Mike Rodgers. For reference, the email that Darin Rand wrote on February 20, 2015, at 3:19 p.m., and which was disseminated through the state email system and released to numerous news agencies has been referred to as the "Rand Email" in other reports.

Darrin Kazlauskas had assisted me by finding out the exact date that Mike Rodgers had made comments to HR supervisor Sherry Carter about Michael Jordan having asked him to delete emails from the Governor's personal email account. According to Sherry Carter, this conversation took place on February 10, 2015.

Because of that conversation, Darrin Kazlauskas, initiated an investigation on February 11, 2015, by asking ODOT Deputy Director of Services, Clyde Saiki to assign someone to conduct an investigation into the allegations that Mike Rodgers had made about Michael Jordan. Clyde Saiki assigned manager Sherry Lauer to the investigation.

Sherry Lauer contacted Mike Rodgers on February 18, 2015, to conduct an interview with Mike Rodgers concerning the open personnel investigation.

It should be noted that when Mike Rodgers was interviewed by me on February 19, 2015, he never mentioned the investigation or the specific allegations that Sherry Lauer was investigating.

Refer to the attached email labeled, "Darrin Kazlauskas Email" for clarification on the above personnel investigation.

Refer to supplemental reports completed by Lieutenant Harrington, Sergeant Payne and Detective Ward for additional information that may be related to Mike Rodgers and the technical searches conducted.

ACTION TAKEN:

On 03/20/2015, at about 8:35 AM, Vahan Michaelian and I met at ETS for a recorded interview.

In summary, Vahan told me Michael Rodgers had pulled him out of a meeting on 2/6/2015 about 10:00 – 11:00 AM that day to search for some emails. Vahan told me Rodgers gave him two brand new thumb drives, still in their packaging, to store the information on. Vahan told me the first search used only one of the thumb drives (TD1), which he hand delivered to Rodgers in his office. I asked if anyone else saw him deliver TD1 and he said no. I asked if he remembered what the make and model was of TD1 and he couldn't remember, but thought it was possibly red with a metal flip cover. I asked Vahan if he saw what Rodgers did with TD1 when he handed it to him and he said he told him what was on it then left his office. I asked Vahan if Rodgers could have extracted these emails and Vahan said no, Rodgers did not have permissions to access any accounts other than his own, using the DELL Archive Manager (DAM).

Vahan told me that after lunch Rodgers came back to his cubicle and stated there weren't enough emails extracted on the first TD1. Vahan told me they tried alternatives search terms and discovered more emails using a "jk." prefix. This second search was stored to TD2, also new and in its original packaging. I asked if when he delivered TD2 to Rodgers if anyone else was in the room. Vahan didn't think so but maybe Marshall Wells could have been, but wasn't sure.

I asked Vahan if it would be difficult to take data out of ETS, such as the data we were reviewing in this investigation and Vahan stated it would be very easy. That there was not security around blocking USB drives. I asked Vahan if he could think of anyone who might have leaked emails and he stated he didn't think anyone at ETS would.

Gov. John Kitzhaber's Office Sought To Destroy Thousands of His Emails

Records show state bureaucrats refused to carry out the request

Gov. John Kitzhaber - WW Staff

Gov. John Kitzhaber's office last week requested state officials destroy thousands of records in the governor's personal email accounts, according to records obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL.

The request came as investigations into allegations of influence-peddling involving Kitzhaber and first lady Cylvia Hayes were intensifying.

Records show the request to destroy Kitzhaber's emails came from Jan Murdock, Kitzhaber's executive assistant. She wanted all emails from Kitzhaber's personal email accounts removed from state servers.

The request from Murdock was described in a Feb. 5 email. "Governor's office wants anything that is in the email account [Kitzhaber's account] removed from archive," wrote Tracy Osburn, a field technician in the DAS Technology Support Center, wrote in the email obtained by WW and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101 KXL.

Personal emails of public officials can be subject to the state's open records laws if they are used to discuss public business. Earlier documents previously released by the governor's office show Kitzhaber used both his personal and state email accounts to communicate with his aides and discuss state business.

The request from Kitzhaber's office to destroy emails came one day before the Oregon Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation into the allegations against him and Hayes.

At the time Kitzhaber's office requested emails be destroyed, the governor and Hayes faced a pending Oregon Government Ethics Commission investigation. WW had earlier reported that the FBI had opened an investigation.

The request for destruction of records came while Kitzhaber was promising to be open and honest with Oregonians about the allegations against him and Hayes.

The records indicate that state employees refused to carry out the request from Kitzhaber's assistant to destroy emails.

Oregon law makes it a crime to improperly destroy or tamper with public records or evidence. Evidence includes "part of official proceeding which is then pending or to the knowledge of such person is about to be instituted."

One observer says the timing of the request raises concern.

"At a very minimum, it shows consciousness of guilt," says Tung Yin, who teaches criminal law at Lewis & Clark Law School. "Why else would you suddenly start destroying documents?"

In a Feb. 5 email, Osburn, the DAS field technician, said Kitzhaber's personal emails had been routed to his state account. At 5:41 pm that day, she passed the request to destroy emails up the chain of command.

The prospect of deleting thousands of emails clearly made Osburn's supervisor, Arian Turpin, uncomfortable.

"Guys, hold on processing this request until we receive approval from a higher authority," Turpin wrote in a Feb. 5, 2015 email at 6:52 pm. "Given the unusual nature of the request, I'm reluctant to have my team move forward without the active awareness and consideration of the possibilities and a direct approval from higher levels of the action."

Turpin then kicked the request up another level to his supervisor, Shawn Wagoner. After consulting with colleagues, Wagoner also refused to delete the governor's emails.

"Take no action at this time," Wagoner wrote. Wagoner then passed the issue up the chain of command to yet another DAS manager, Gary Krieger.

Krieger told his supervisor, Michael Rogers, that he would not destroy the emails.

"I am not willing to make the call to delete information out of the email archive," Krieger wrote on Feb. 5 at 7:24 pm. "As I stated we will need to discuss."

UPDATED:

Kitzhaber spokeswoman Amy Wojcicki said the request to delete emails was routine.

"There was no blanket order to delete all records and the emails are in the process of being sorted to determine which records are public records that are required to be kept," Wojcicki said in an email. "The Oregon Public Records Act requires retention of public records. It was recently brought to our attention that there are a number of the governor's personal emails residing on the state server. Some of the emails do not relate to any activity, transaction or function of state business and are not public records required to be retained."

DAS spokesman Matt Shelby confirms that no emails were deleted, and the final decision on the matter was made by DAS Director Michael Jordan.

"We have a responsibility to maintain records per the secretary of state's retention schedule," Shelby said. "Removal of records would require a record-by-record review to determine what, if anything, was removable."

Hit the Delete Button

The governor's office's explanation for a request to delete emails doesn't hold water.

SEEKING ACCESS: News media fill the lobby of the governor's office in the Oregon state Capitol on Feb. 13, the day Kitzhaber announced his resignation. - IMAGE: James Rexroad

Did Gov. John Kitzhaber's office seek to destroy his personal emails stored on state computers?

That's what WW first reported Feb. 12, based on records obtained by the newspaper and 101.9 KINK/FM News 101.1 KXL radio.

That same day, state officials offered reassurances that no one was trying to destroy anything.

It's a crucial question, given that the effort to remove emails came as investigators and the news media sought information about influence-peddling and conflict-of-interest allegations that had enveloped the governor's office.

State officials claimed that Kitzhaber's personal emails were inadvertently stored on state servers. They also claimed they had only recently discovered the mistake. And, they asserted, his staff was simply trying to separate Kitzhaber's personal messages from those relating to state business.

"There was no blanket order to delete all records, and the emails are in the process of being sorted to determine which records are public records that are required to be kept," says Kitzhaber spokeswoman Amy Wojcicki.

Records show none of those official explanations is true.

Kitzhaber elected to have his personal emails stored along with his government account more than three years ago. That allowed him to manage emails from various accounts—public and private—all at once.

In August 2011, Kitzhaber's office requested that Oregon Department of Administrative Services begin archiving his personal emails on state servers, according to sources familiar with the situation.

Records show that from that point forward, Kitzhaber routinely used his personal email accounts for public business through this month. Those emails, even if they were sent from or received by his personal email accounts, would be public records if stored on public servers.

In fact, Kitzhaber was concerned about the amount of crossover between his accounts.

"I want to make sure we are all using the official governor email whenever possible," Kitzhaber wrote in an email to his chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, on June 24, 2014. "I am getting a lot of traffic on my personal email that should be official public record."

Nobody seemed worried about Kitzhaber's personal emails until two weeks ago. On Feb. 2, WW and The Oregonian filed new records requests for Kitzhaber's emails.

Soon after, Kitzhaber general counsel Liani Reeves mentioned to other members of the governor's staff that Kitzhaber's personal emails had been inadvertently stored on a state server, according to people present. Some staffers warned Reeves at the time that those emails might be subject to Oregon's public records law.

A few days later, on Feb. 5, Jan Murdock, Kitzhaber's executive assistant, contacted the Department of Administrative Services with a request to remove emails.

A DAS staffer described Murdock's request in a Feb. 5 email. "Governor's office wants anything that is in [Kitzhaber's] email account removed from archive," wrote Tracy Osburn, a DAS support technician.

"Removing" emails would have meant deleting them—that's how DAS administrators saw it. Several state employees—apparently believing the request was inappropriate—refused to carry it out.

Murdock asked that the emails be deleted one day before the Oregon Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation into the allegations against Kitzhaber and Hayes, and long after the Oregon Government Ethics Commission had mounted an investigation.

Under Oregon law, it's a crime to improperly destroy or tamper with public records or material that might become evidence in a criminal investigation.

A day after WW reported the effort to destroy the emails, the U.S. Department of Justice swept in with a wide-ranging subpoena, including for emails that Kitzhaber's office sought to delete.

Federal officials won't say whether WW's story about the request to destroy emails triggered the subpoenas. But one state employee whose records the feds subpoenaed was Tracy Osburn —the DAS technician who had first reported receiving the order to destroy the emails.

What He Left Behind

Emails ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber's office sought to destroy reveal tensions over power, money and former First Lady Cylvia Hayes.

Ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber resigned last week amid allegations his fiancee, former first lady of Oregon Cylvia Hayes, improperly used her access to him to influence state policy while benefiting financially.

From 2011 to 2013, Hayes collected more than $220,000 from private consulting contracts she landed while working as an adviser to Kitzhaber. Her dealings have sparked state and federal criminal investigations ("First Lady Inc.", WW, Oct. 8, 2014).

But before Kitzhaber's resignation and the investigations, Hayes had even grander plans for herself—in terms of influence and money—for the governor's final term in office.

Newly obtained emails reveal Hayes told Kitzhaber in late 2013 that she wanted to further leverage her access to his office into "lucrative work," including an official state position, paid speaking appearances and book contracts.

The first lady proposed her expansive plans to Kitzhaber, even as the governor's staff searched for ways to narrow Hayes' official role and make sure she wasn't violating state ethics laws.

Hayes' big plans and the staff's concerns are contained in emails that are among thousands of communications Kitzhaber's office sought on Feb. 5 to have destroyed. (See here for an analysis of this action.) Neither Kitzhaber nor Hayes agreed to be interviewed for this story.

The emails obtained by WW provide an extraordinary window into Kitzhaber's administration and the complexities Hayes' ambitions presented.

The emails show that Kitzhaber's staff was especially alarmed by Hayes' role in the governor's office after she signed at least $85,000 worth of private consulting contracts with three nonprofit advocacy groups in 2013.

The contracts prompted Kitzhaber's then-chief of staff Curtis Robinhold in July and August of that year to get Hayes to sign conflict-of-interest forms that required her to abide by state ethics laws.

Those guidelines would have forced Hayes to change some of the ways she conducted her private business, including prohibiting her from using the title "first lady" when doing private work, and from holding client meetings at Mahonia Hall, the governor's mansion.

Hayes pushed back. As WW has previously reported, Hayes wouldn't go along with those guidelines until they were rewritten to allow her to continue operating as she had been.

The newly obtained emails show that, with Kitzhaber preparing for a 2014 re-election campaign, Robinhold suggested some ways to eliminate Hayes' conflicts of interests without depriving her of income.

In a Sept. 26, 2013, memo to Hayes and Kitzhaber, Robinhold outlined six options that would allow Hayes to continue working on issues she cared about while eliminating outside contracts and the potential conflicts of interest they presented.

The possibilities included finding her a job at a university, such as Portland State, letting her work for a state agency, hiring her to work for the Kitzhaber re-election campaign or having the state hire Hayes as a consultant.

Robinhold said in his email the goal was a position for Hayes that "maintains clear lines of authority in the Governor's Office and avoids confusion about Cylvia's supervisory and staff management responsibilities."

The ideal situation, Robinhold wrote, "avoids giving Cylvia responsibility for broad, overarching policy issues that cross over multiple policy advisors and state agencies" and "minimizes confusion around who Cylvia is speaking for."

It's not clear how Kitzhaber responded to the memo. Robinhold declined to be interviewed by WW.

Robinhold's memo and other emails make it clear that Kitzhaber's staff wanted Hayes out of the governor's office.

That's not what Hayes wanted.

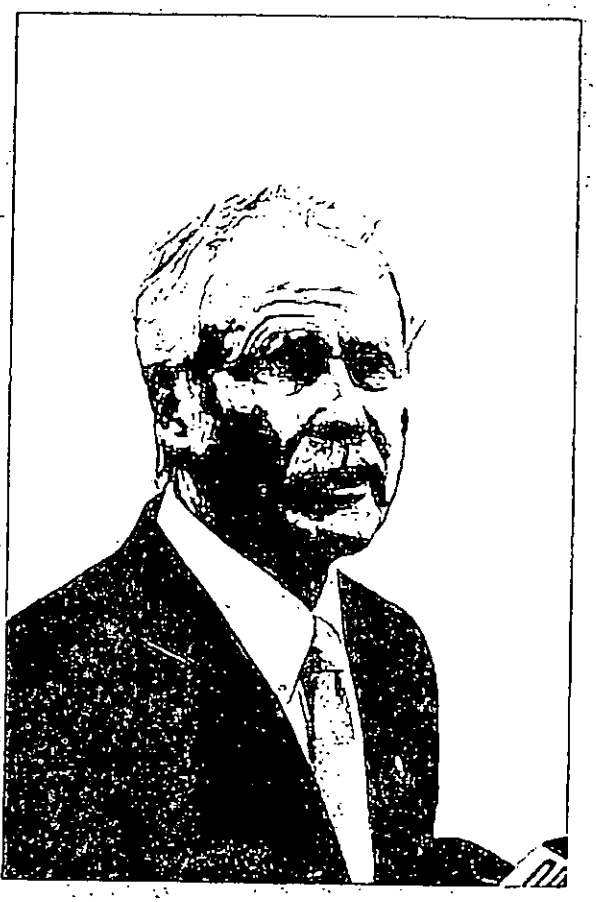
The first lady was busy preparing her own proposal—one that embedded her more deeply in the governor's office and put her in a position to make more money.

On Nov. 29, 2013, she sent a memo to Kitzhaber titled "Cylvia Game Plan: Dec. 2013-Dec. 2018."

Hayes summarized her goal at the top: "Intended Outcome: Build my policy and professional credibility and desirability so that I land lucrative work making big positive impacts at end of term."

On the top of Hayes' list: getting more publicity for her work. Or, as she put it in the memo to Kitzhaber: "Claim the work that is mine."

That work included her role as "originator and one of the key authors of the Ten Year Energy Plan." She wanted to be recognized for the environmental and economic consulting work she had done for her private clients, which dovetailed with her state policy interests.



FORMER GOV. JOHN KITZHABER

IMAGE: James Rexroad

The first lady wanted Kitzhaber to lend the weight of his office to her accomplishments: "Have John develop specific message about my substantive roles."

Hayes' work plan was at times contradictory. She said she wanted to end her existing consulting contracts and "go to full-time volunteer status." In the next line, however, Hayes wrote that she intended to "explore opportunities for income from non-policy, non-Oregon,

non-time-consuming work."

After the campaign, Hayes expected Kitzhaber to formally name her to a staff position that she could leverage financially.

Here's how she put it:

"Jan. 2015: Get appointed to official policy positions. Feb. 2015–June 2017: Work the policy areas hard. Develop paid speaking and outside Oregon income opportunities. Speak a lot. Get published a lot. Set foundation for book/s – me, John, John and me (outline, generate interest, sample chapters).

"June 2017–Jan. 2018: Transition Phase: Line up next big work and significant income. Write book (maybe get grant to do it). Move out of Mahonia."

The emails the governor's office sought to destroy also show the relationship between Kitzhaber's personal finances and Hayes' income.

The first lady's agreement to let her outside contracts lapse in early 2014 had financial consequences for the governor.

"Hey dear, well, I just paid bills with my own money for the last time in our current plan," Hayes wrote Kitzhaber on March 14, 2014. "Attached is my best estimated monthly and annual expenses."

Those expenses came to about $62,000 a year—and they would now be the governor's responsibility. Emails show Kitzhaber began making direct monthly deposits into Hayes' bank account so she could pay her bills.

There's been debate about exactly how Kitzhaber's and Hayes' finances intermingled. That's an important question because the answer sheds light on whether the governor benefited from Hayes' consulting work.

For four years, Kitzhaber stated on state financial disclosure forms that Hayes was a member of his household, which would suggest their finances were linked. But at a Jan. 30, 2015, press conference, the governor suddenly said he wasn't sure that was the case.

Kitzhaber's decision to begin monthly deposits into Hayes' account when her contract work lapsed, however, shows money she had been earning from consulting was money the governor didn't have to spend. Therefore, it appears that Kitzhaber benefited from her contracts.

Kitzhaber's shifting position on whether Hayes was a member of his household was part of a legal strategy devised by lawyers hired to defend the governor and the first lady against complaints filed with the Oregon Government Ethics Commission.

Kitzhaber and Hayes wanted to establish that neither was dependent on the other for money—a strategy intended to knock down the assertion that Kitzhaber benefited from Hayes' contracts.

The strategy is spelled out in an email exchange between the governor and Steve Janik, a Portland lawyer representing Kitzhaber and Hayes before the ethics commission.

"As I understand it," Kitzhaber wrote to Janik on Dec. 22, 2014, "we will make the case that: (1) Cylvia is not a public official, and (2) that she is not a member of my household — and, therefore that the OGEC has no jurisdiction in the matter and that the complaints should be dismissed."

Janik agreed. "We will argue," the attorney wrote back that same day, "that because Cylvia is not a member of your household, her activities pursuing private income cannot be attributed to you."

But the email exchange reveals something else: Despite the defense they were mounting, the governor and first lady had no interest in a long fight with the ethics commission.

"We will convey that we are willing to take this all the way and have a strong case for prevailing," Kitzhaber wrote to Janik on Dec. 22. "But the end game is not actually to have the complaints dismissed but rather to negotiate a stipulated settlement agreement in which we might acknowledge some minor mistakes we may have made and have the matter resolved at the March [2015] meeting. Do I have that right?"

Janik's answer: "Your summary of the strategy is correct."

Also in this week's paper:

"Hit the Delete Button": Kitzhaber's office's explanation for why it requested deletion of emails doesn't hold water.

"Relying On An Old Man's Money": After Hayes got nearly $40,000 from an octogenarian, Kitzhaber bailed her out.

"Ringing the Truth": Could Kitzhaber and Hayes benefit from spousal privilege if they married?

"Carbon Copy": A climate-change bill will test Gov. Kate Brown's independence.

Kitzhaber's Secret Weapon

Newly obtained emails show ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber put his top political consultant in charge of Cover Oregon.

GOVERNMENT TAKEOVER: "I do not think the governor's office has the staff capacity on the Cover Oregon piece," Kitzhaber re-election campaign adviser Patricia McCaig wrote the governor on Feb. 8, 2014. She then proposed taking control of the Cover Oregon problem herself. - IMAGE: Vivian Johnson

A year ago, it looked as if then-Gov John Kitzhaber's biggest headache was Cover Oregon, the $305 million health care website that was pitched as a national model but became a national laughingstock.

Kitzhaber, a Democrat facing re-election, had built a reputation as a health care reformer. But his failure to make Cover Oregon work threatened his legacy.

In public, Kitzhaber assured Oregonians he was working diligently with state officials to find a solution for the website's woeful performance.

In private, however, Kitzhaber handed oversight of the Cover Oregon mess to a secretive campaign consultant who liked to call herself the Princess of Darkness.

By her own admission, Patricia McCaig knew virtually nothing about health care reform or the reasons Cover Oregon had crashed. Her primary mission was not to save a beleaguered state program but to get Kitzhaber re-elected.

Emails that Kitzhaber's office tried to delete from state computers show McCaig was effectively in charge of all decision making for Cover Oregon beginning in February 2014.

Records show McCaig oversaw the decision to shut down Cover Oregon rather than work with the state's contractor, Oracle Corp., to fix it. McCaig—rather than the governor or state lawyers—drove the decision to sue Oracle. And McCaig routinely directed senior government employees and staff in the governor's office.

The records also show McCaig and other advisers based many of their moves on polling and how voters' perceptions of Cover Oregon might affect Kitzhaber's hopes for re-election.

Kitzhaber didn't respond to questions for this story.

McCaig declined to be interviewed, but in an emailed statement to WW, she said Kitzhaber turned to her because of her experience as a governor's chief of staff and an elected official. (She worked for former Gov. Barbara Roberts and served on the Metro Council for one term in the 1990s.)

She says she did nothing wrong.

"The governor was forced to respond to the 'debacle' of Oracle's failure to deliver a working website for Cover Oregon by using the best tools and people at his disposal," she says. "Oracle's contention that politics drove the failure of Cover Oregon could not be further from the truth."

But observers say Kitzhaber placing the state's response to Cover Oregon in the hands of his chief political adviser is problematic.

"If they made decisions based on Kitzhaber's personal political interests rather than what was best for taxpayers, that's not right," says David Friedman, an associate professor at the Willamette University College of Law. "It just looks bad."

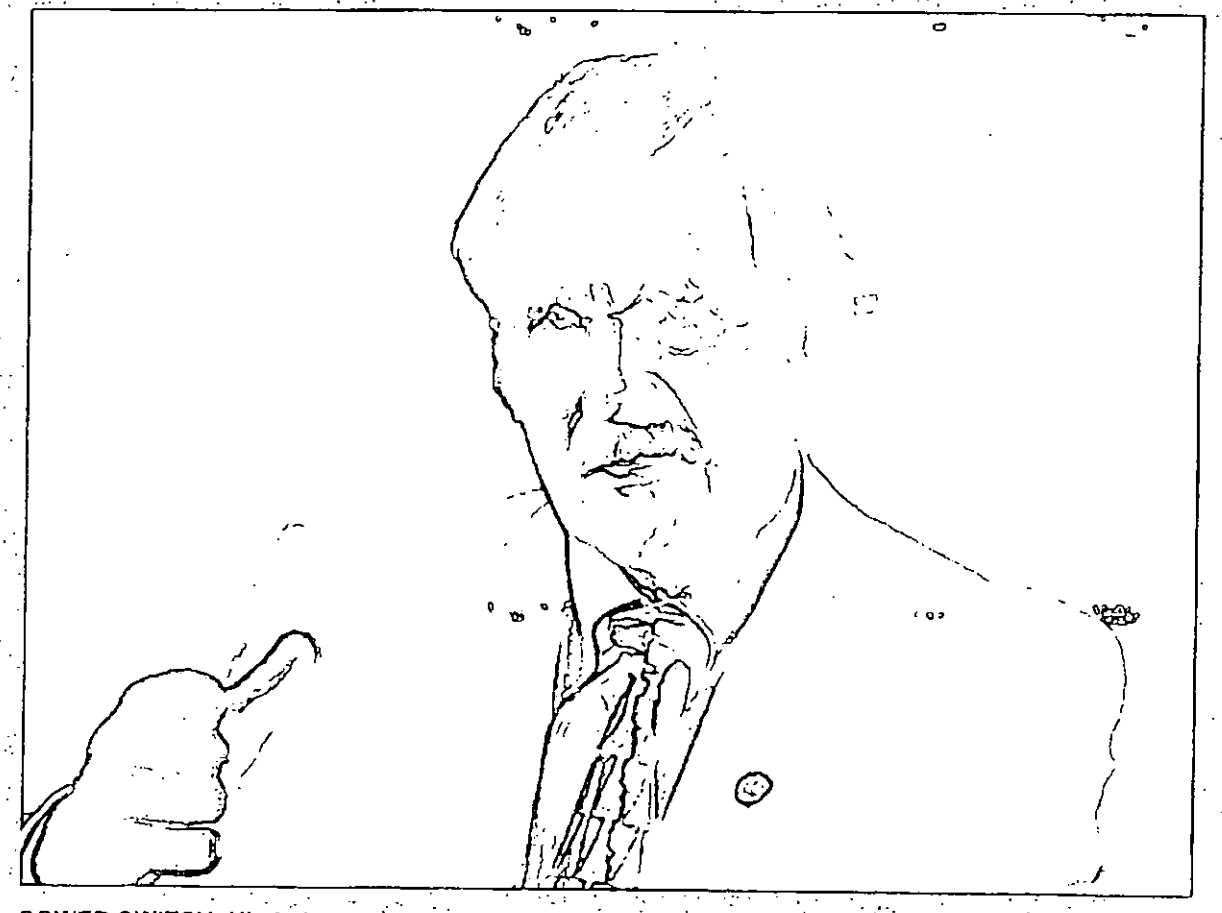
WW first reported in November that Kitzhaber relied on campaign consultants to help direct his response to Cover Oregon ("Blurred Lines," WW, Nov. 12, 2014). The newly obtained emails provide a far more detailed account of that effort.

State ethics and elections laws require a separation between political activity and official decisions. Congress, which paid for the Cover Oregon project, now wants to know where taxpayer dollars went and whether Kitzhaber put his re-election interests ahead of the public interest.

The emails between Kitzhaber and McCaig about Cover Oregon are among those Kitzhaber sought to have removed from state servers Feb. 5, claiming they contained personal communications. But Kitzhaber's personal email accounts also relate to public business and are subject to disclosure under Oregon's public records law. Federal investigators have requested the emails as part of a criminal subpoena.

On Feb. 13, investigators for the U.S. House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform wrote to Kitzhaber demanding all documents relating to his campaign staff's involvement with Cover Oregon, adding that decisions "may have been based on politics, not policy and campaign advisors working on your re-election campaign may have coordinated the state's response to the Cover Oregon roll-out."

Kitzhaber resigned Feb. 18 amid state and federal criminal investigations into allegations of influence peddling involving himself and former first lady Cylvia Hayes. The intensified congressional scrutiny could only add to his legal woes.



POWER SWITCH: Kitzhaber told McCaig he was pleased she was taking control of the Cover Oregon issue. "How did I get so lucky to be on your team?" he wrote her on Feb. 8, 2014.

IMAGE: WW Staff

McCaig has played a unique role in Kitzhaber's career.

She ran his successful 2010 election campaign. Soon after he took office, Kitzhaber made her his top adviser on the Columbia River Crossing, the proposed $3 billion highway project connecting Portland and Vancouver, Wash. McCaig then worked for the CRC's top contractor, David Evans & Associates ("The Woman Behind the Bridge," WW, Feb. 27, 2013). McCaig eventually collected $553,000 for her work on the CRC, which was never built.

Cover Oregon was another big Kitzhaber initiative. The website was supposed to allow Oregonians to purchase health insurance online.

But the project missed its "go-live" deadline Oct. 1, 2013 and never worked properly. By early 2014, Kitzhaber was taking a political beating over the failure from The Oregonian, which reported in detail his failure to oversee the project.

In early February 2014, McCaig emailed Kitzhaber, offering to take over damage control for Cover Oregon.

"I'd also like to request any publicly available information on the independent review—it's charge timeline, etc," McCaig wrote to Kitzhaber Feb. 6, 2014. "Let me know if you'd rather I let it all alone."

"No not at all," Kitzhaber responded that same day. "I like it when you don't leave things alone (like my last campaign for example)."

McCaig told Kitzhaber his current approach was failing. She proposed that his chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, blend his official duties with a campaign-led effort on Cover Oregon.

"We need more accountability and follow-thru from the campaign and some specific, intensive management of the Cover Oregon issues. I do not think the governor's office has the staff capacity on the Cover Oregon piece," McCaig wrote Feb. 8. "How about? Mike chairs a joint campaign and key staff meeting weekly starting ASAP. I staff him (quietly, privately)."

On Feb. 8, McCaig told Kitzhaber that Tim Raphael, a lobbyist and former Kitzhaber spokesman, would direct the governor's staff on how to handle communications about Cover Oregon. Kitzhaber's campaign would put Raphael on its payroll.

"To do that [Raphael] would identify what Mike [Bonetto] and [Kitzhaber's state spokeswoman] Nkenge [Harmon Johnson] need to be managing from the gov's office, bridging the information gap with the campaign, and most importantly identifying and teeing up the critical and emerging Cover Oregon issues for the combined team so we can develop a plan and be more prepared both at the state level and the campaign," McCaig wrote.

"You have know idea how much better this makes me feel," Kitzhaber wrote her back the same day. "You truly are a Princess. How did I get so lucky to be on your team?"

"Because you are you and you are governor of the great state of Oregon," McCaig responded. "And I believe."

McCaig told Kitzhaber she was being careful not to create a record of her actions—"being mindful of not putting too much on paper," she wrote in a Feb. 16, 2014, email.

She also acknowledged, in preparing a Cover Oregon battle plan, that she knew almost nothing about the issue. "I have no pride of authorship, and barely know enough about the topic to write the goals," she wrote in the same email.

By March 2014, emails show, McCaig was in full control of Cover Oregon. She routinely advocated keeping key details concealed from the public. For example, when the state was preparing responses to the U.S. Government Accountability Office, the investigative arm of Congress, McCaig argued against sharing information with Oregon Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum.

"Why is the AG reviewing?" McCaig wrote in a March 20 email to Kitzhaber and Bonetto. "Sending it to the AG could produce questions and allow speculation there is criminal behavior. It escalates the concern, gives the press another place to keep/promote a negative narrative, and expands external reviews." (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker.)

Kitzhaber continually expressed his appreciation for McCaig's help.

"HAPPY BIRTHDAY PRINCESS!!!" he wrote her March 30, 2014. "Your Faithful Friend and Fan. I am glad you are in my Life."

In April, Cover Oregon's board of directors was supposed to decide whether it should abandon the state's Oracle-built system and switch over to the federal government's health insurance exchange.

But records show McCaig had already made the call. In an email dated April 9, 2014, McCaig presented Kitzhaber with a memo titled "MANAGING/STAGING THE DECISION." She laid out an eight-step process that would provide the illusion of deliberation. "Regardless, the Cover Oregon Board would hear and accept the federal exchange recommendation," McCaig wrote.

The emails also show McCaig orchestrated the state's legal strategy against Oracle. Polling showed voters blamed the governor for Cover Oregon's failure. McCaig wanted Kitzhaber to demand money back from Oracle.

"We need to start the discussion from a different place," McCaig wrote to Kitzhaber on April 7, 2014. "Mike [Bonetto] and I talked offline about Oracle—we're leaning, regardless of which option, of announcing we're going 'after' them."

McCaig added in a May 19, 2014, email to Kitzhaber: "We need to show the taxpayers that we are going after the money. It doesn't really matter if it is $200 million or $40 million, or how many people enrolled, until we make it clear that we're going after the money."

On May 27, 2014, McCaig drafted a letter for Kitzhaber to send to Rosenblum: "Dear Attorney General Rosenblum I am writing today to ask you to immediately initiate legal action to recover payments and other damages from Oracle."

The next day, in an email, McCaig told Bonetto and the governor's general counsel, Liani Reeves, to coordinate with Rosenblum's office.

Then, success: Politico, an influential Washington, D.C., news website, highlighted the looming lawsuit. "Headlines coming in are all good! Politico is great," McCaig wrote to Kitzhaber on May 29. "We've got another first.... First in the country to sue Oracle!"

KGW TV reported that day a poll showing Kitzhaber leading his Republican opponent for governor, state Rep. Dennis Richardson, by 15 percentage points.

"If true this may require an extra round of whiskey," Kitzhaber wrote McCaig on May 29, 2014.

"If true, two extra rounds," she replied.

By mid-June, McCaig told Kitzhaber their Cover Oregon media strategy was working.

"Quite a week," she wrote to him on June 13, "it wasn't all about Cover Oregon. (FYI—no cameras at [Cover Oregon] board meeting and only 2 reporters, that's great progress)."

Records show dozens of emails between Kitzhaber and McCaig on Cover Oregon. During this time, McCaig wasn't billing Kitzhaber's campaign. That enabled Kitzhaber not to disclose her work on his campaign finance reports, as required by law.

McCaig says her work was properly documented. "All of my state-related work is a public record, and my campaign work has been appropriately reported," she says.

In August 2014, WW reported that McCaig was effectively running Kitzhaber's re-election campaign and that Kitzhaber was not reporting her contributions. On Sept. 12, Kitzhaber emailed McCaig from the Pendleton Round-Up. He joked about that lack of transparency.

"No cheering crowds (but, then again, only one hiss), more horse shit that you can possibly imagine, highly efficient [fundraising] call time," Kitzhaber wrote. "I can pay you now... really."

Claim: State data center managers 'in trouble' for talking to Kitzhaber-Hayes investigators

on February 26, 2015 at 2:53 PM, updated February 26, 2015 at 7:08 PM

State data center managers recently placed on leave over unauthorized efforts to preserve evidence found themselves "in trouble" for contacting federal prosecutors scrutinizing former Gov. John Kitzhaber and his fiancée, Cylvia Hayes, a state email obtained by The Oregonian/Oregonlive reveals.

The Feb. 20 email by Darin Rand, a mid-level manager at the data center, provides a blow-by blow view from inside the facility used to warehouse emails that has become central to the reported leak of Kitzhaber's private emails.

It shows a rift between managers over how best to respond to a high-pressure legal and political situation.

The data center is now the focus of an Oregon State Police criminal investigation of the leak. The investigation was requested by state Chief Operating Officer Michael Jordan. He oversees the data center as director of the state Department of Administrative Services. The leak occurred after a Kitzhaber staffer attempted to get state employees to delete thousands of emails.

Rand sent his email shortly before Jordan placed the data center's top two managers, Michael Rodgers and Marshall Wells, on administrative leave. Jordan linked their leave to an effort to secure computers and phones of governor's office employees who had worked for Kitzhaber.

DAS officials said Wells' move could have damaged evidence. Jordan said his intent was to preserve that potential evidence.

Rand indicates Wells was already in hot water for talking to federal prosecutors at the U.S. Attorney's Office, which is taking part in the Kitzhaber investigation. Rand wrote that he was told he was in trouble for talking to the Oregon Department of Justice about the federal request for state documents.

Asked about the email, Jordan said Wells' contact with the federal prosecutors is part of the personnel investigation.

"There are questions about many of the statements that have been made," said agency spokesman Matt Shelby. "That's one of the things that our (personnel) investigation is looking at."

Rand's email, sent to a human resources manager with the state Department of Administrative Services, also undermines an early claim by the Kitzhaber administration that his personal emails were forwarded to and stored by DAS inadvertently.

Rand writes that when Kitzhaber was returned to office in 2011, the governor's personal emails were forwarded to the state "at the direction of the governor or the governor's staff."

Janet Hoffman, Kitzhaber's criminal defense attorney, has maintained that the emails were retained by mistake. Because of that and because some were attorney-client communications, she has insisted that they should not be reviewed by state officials.

Rand said he suspected the emails were not leaked by data center employees but by either Jordan or a Kitzhaber staffer given a set of the emails. Filled with skepticism and suspicions, Rand's email also explains why data center staffers went to the governor's office Feb. 19 and Feb. 20 to switch out and take control of certain computers and cell phones.

Shelby said the move grew out of a disagreement over how to secure evidence. Jordan and Chief Information Officer Alex Pettit thought it best to leave computers in place.

Rand wrote that on Feb. 20, Jordan and Pettit went to the governor's office to stop a tech staffer from taking possession of the remaining phones and computers.

Jordan denied that, saying that instead he directed the staffer to finish what he was doing.

"Everything we are doing has to do with the integrity of those records that are in our custody," he said.

Similarly, Rand wrote that Rodgers and the rest of data center staff refused to comply with an instruction by Shelby on Feb. 18 to delete copies of the Kitzhaber emails. Shelby said the originals were maintained, and he intended to limit the risk that other emails would be leaked.

Rand's email said he and colleagues were suspicious of Jordan because of what they saw as a lack of firm action to rebuff the effort out of Kitzhaber's office to get the emails deleted.

A Kitzhaber spokeswoman said the intent was not to destroy public records, but to secure them and the evaluate which were personal and not subject to disclosure.

Rodgers and data center staff, however, felt the move could have resulted in the improper destruction of records. Kitzhaber and his staff would effectively have called the shots on which emails were considered personal, allowing them to be destroyed.

Jordan said he supported ignoring the deletion request when he heard about it the next day.

Rand's email also said an OSP detective looking for the email leaker told him the investigation was "purely political."

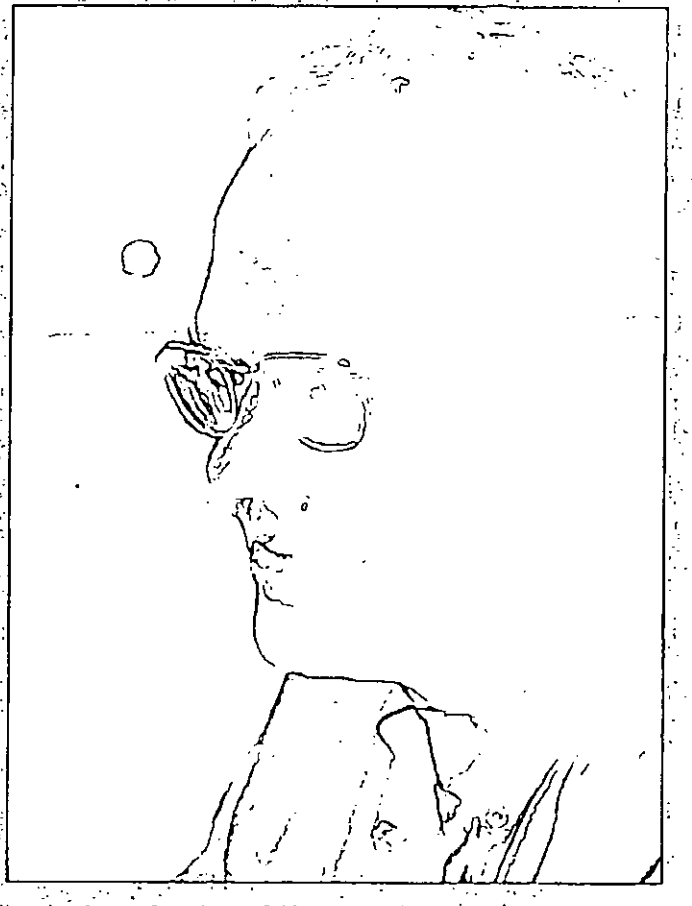
Another Kind Of Green

Emails show how former Gov. John Kitzhaber's environmental principles and his friendship with a campaign contributor collided.



ANIMAL MAN: Scott Campbell made a fortune from the Banfield Pet Hospital. His latest venture is Hannah the Pet Society, which provides pets, food and veterinary care for a monthly fee. - IMAGE: John Lofflin

Scott Campbell operates on a Bunyanesque scale. He bought and expanded Banfield Pet Hospital, creating a chain of 750 veterinarian clinics, before selling the company in 2007. The Southeast Portland resident then turned his energy to his ranch near John Day—all 140,000 acres of it.

Campbell has had grand plans for Silvies Valley Ranch. For more than a decade, he's been building artificial beaver dams and other water diversions to restore natural habitat and boost hay production. He's imported South African Boer goats, a hardy breed that mows down invasive plants and barbecues up nicely.

The high-desert ranch has a 6,000-foot runway, making it the best place in Grant County (pop. 7,283) to land a private plane. Campbell is building a resort—his plans call for 575 units—and developing a 36-hole, eco-friendly golf course.

But records show, in his desire to bring economic development to what he calls "Frontier Oregon," Campbell has skirted state environmental regulations.

His water diversion projects blocked passage of endangered redband trout, and at least one building project's septic systems fell afoul of Oregon Department of Environmental Quality rules.

Campbell's aggressive approach to regulations proved no barrier to a warm friendship with then-Gov. John Kitzhaber, a politician whose environmental views were a pillar of his 35-year political career. That career ended with his Feb. 18 resignation amid growing allegations of influence peddling and conflicts of interest involving him and former first lady Cylvia Hayes.

Kitzhaber's emails provide a glimpse of his friendship with Campbell, a big campaign contributor. The emails—from the accounts that Kitzhaber's office sought to delete from state servers Feb. 5—show how the governor tried to balance running the state while also running for re-election. Kitzhaber did not respond to questions for this story.

Last year, Campbell proposed hosting a "Frontier Oregon Summit" at his ranch to promote economic development in Eastern Oregon. The event fell in the middle of Kitzhaber's campaign for his fourth and final term. When Campbell emailed him about his idea, Kitzhaber responded with enthusiasm.

"Your invite list is excellent," Kitzhaber wrote to Campbell on June 8, 2014. "If you want me to co-sign a letter to the list I would be glad to do so."

Kitzhaber's environmental staff was far less enthusiastic about the prospect of the governor headlining an event that would bring dozens of business and political leaders to Silvies Valley Ranch.

"Governor: I am going to be very direct," Richard Whitman, Kitzhaber's natural resources adviser, wrote June 20, 2014. "There are some serious problems with how Silvies Ranch has carried out its work."

Last year, Kitzhaber, a Democrat, generated an unusual level of support from business and timber interests that historically support Republicans.

His appearance at Campbell's Frontier Oregon Summit would highlight his commitment to one of his top priorities, creating jobs in rural Oregon.

With his ambitious plans for Silvies Valley Ranch, Campbell gave Kitzhaber the opportunity for a perfect campaign event.

Campbell had already established himself as one of Kitzhaber's top individual contributors, giving him $20,000 for his 2010 campaign for governor. Campbell's name wasn't on the checks. Instead, he used two of his companies to direct the cash.

When the 2011 Oregon Legislature opened, Campbell sought a controversial bill that benefited just one party: his Silvies Valley Ranch.

In most cases, ranch land is zoned so it's limited largely to agricultural use. But state Rep. Brian Clem (D-Salem) pushed House Bill 3465 to allow Campbell to develop his massive resort despite land-use rules that would have stopped him.

Opponents saw the bill as an end-run around Oregon's land-use laws. "This was a one-off deal that benefits one party," says Stephen Kafoury, a lobbyist for the American Planning Association.

Kitzhaber expressed concerns about measures that provide special deals—and then signed the bill into law anyway.

Campbell gave Kitzhaber another $21,000 in 2012, this time writing checks in his own name, and followed in May 2014 with $25,500 more. As he did in 2010, Campbell channeled the 2014 donations through his companies.

Campbell says he made no attempt to disguise his donations but simply wrote checks from company accounts rather than his personal checkbook. "Anyone can find out who owns any company in Oregon," he says.

In June 2014, Campbell sent an email to Kitzhaber's personal account about his plan for a Frontier Oregon Summit.

Campbell wanted the summit to advocate less government red tape, especially for rural businesses.

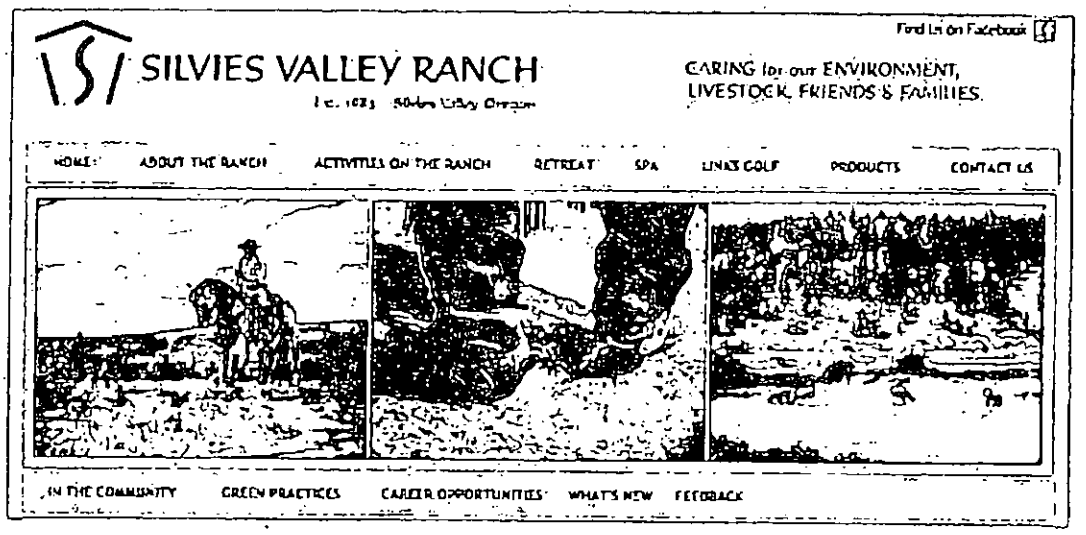
"State agencies must adopt a culture of helping to make things happen, instead of allowing things to happen only if they can't be stopped by a regulation," Campbell wrote in a June 8, 2014, memo to Kitzhaber under the heading "Expected Outcomes from the Summit."

"Laws must be enacted to allow ecological enhancement to happen quickly and without costly, unnecessary permitting requirements."

Emails show Kitzhaber asked Campbell to add a name to the list of speakers: first lady Cylvia Hayes. "Cylvia has been working on the poverty issue for the past three years and might have something valuable to contribute," Kitzhaber wrote June 8, 2014.

Campbell revised his agenda but ignored Kitzhaber's request. Hayes wasn't happy.

"I'd like to actually make some comments during our day one wrap up session rather than just being introduced," she wrote to Kitzhaber on June 19, 2014. "I'd like to introduce the concept of economic reinvention and give a couple brief examples of rural communities that are doing it."



SPECIAL TREATMENT: Campbell wouldn't be able to operate his ranch as a resort if then-Gov. John Kitzhaber had not signed a 2011 bill intended solely to give Silvies Valley Ranch an exemption under land-use rules. Kitzhaber professed his dislike for such bills, and then signed it anyway to help Campbell, a campaign contributor.

Kitzhaber circulated Campbell's agenda. Whitman, Kitzhaber's natural resources adviser, voiced objections. Whitman had been in close touch with state regulatory agencies, and became concerned at what he learned about Silvies Valley Ranch.

The message from Whitman was particularly candid compared to other emails Kitzhaber received from his staff.

"[Silvies Valley Ranch has] carried out their work without obtaining, or even applying or attempting to obtain, federal or state permits," Whitman wrote to Kitzhaber on June 20, 2014. "I am told that on the order of 1,000 (yes, that's right, one thousand) small dams/water retention structures have been constructed without state removal-fill permits. State and federal agencies report that the work is blocking fish passage (redband), as well as killing riparian vegetation."

Kitzhaber wanted the state's concerns about Campbell's ranch resolved before the summit. "He wasn't comfortable attending if the regulatory matter wasn't resolved," Whitman says in an email to WW.

The Department of State Lands got Campbell to agree to a nine-page consent decree, which detailed the unpermitted in-water work he'd been doing at Silvies Valley Ranch for more than a decade.

Campbell tells WW he hadn't known he needed permits to do the work. He agreed by January 2016 to file a plan to fix any damage to waterways. Instead of facing civil penalties, Campbell agreed to make a payment of $10,000 to the Common School Fund.

A Department of State Lands spokeswoman declined to comment on the agreement.

Even as he and the state were finalizing the consent agreement, Campbell copied Kitzhaber on emails that illustrated his frustration with regulators, such as the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality. "Seriously, getting rid of two or three mid level egomaniacs there would increase economic growth in eastern Oregon by ten percent all by itself when folks realized you could actually get something approved," Campbell wrote on July 19, 2014.

Campbell's Frontier Summit proceeded as planned on June 22 and 23, 2014. Eighty invitees—including eight lawmakers, the heads of the Oregon Business Council and Oregon Business Association, and the first couple—dined on barbecued goat, roasted vegetables and whiskey. A rare thunderstorm ripped the desert sky, but Campbell had ordered a tent more than large enough to accommodate his guests.

Kitzhaber and Hayes flew in from the Hillsboro Airport on Campbell's private plane to kick off the event.

"She spoke a lot longer than John did," says one attendee who asked not to be identified. "He didn't say much at all."

Emails show Kitzhaber had to leave the two-day gathering early for a fundraiser in Los Angeles hosted by Dean Devlin, producer of the television series Leverage, which filmed in Portland from 2008 to 2012.

Kitzhaber's emails don't show much follow-up after the Frontier Summit, except for two messages: He asked a fundraising consultant how much money Campbell had given his re-election campaign so he could hit up another summit attendee, New Seasons Market co-founder Chuck Eggert, for the same amount. Eggert gave $2,500.

Campbell sent Kitzhaber a few messages of support later in 2014, especially as questions about Hayes' consulting work grew.

NIGEL JAQUISS

Patricia McCaig Bills Former Gov. John Kitzhaber's Campaign for January Work

Emails show adviser helped Kitzhaber prep for disastrous Jan. 30 press conference

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber - Steven Lane

Patricia McCaig, a political consultant for former Gov. John Kitzhaber, filed an $8,500 invoice for payment from Kitzhaber's campaign fund yesterday.

Emails between McCaig and Kitzhaber during his last month in office show some of the work for which McCaig is now seeking payment. Those emails are among the thousands that Kitzhaber sought on Feb. 5 to have deleted from state servers.

In particular, McCaig helped prepare Kitzhaber for what turned out to be his final press conference on Jan. 30 before announcing he would resign Feb. 18. McCaig, Kitzhaber's most trusted political adviser, scripted a press conference aimed at helping Kitzhaber by focusing attention on his removing first lady Cylvia Hayes from any role in his administration.

But Kitzhaber's unwillingness to answer questions about the influence peddling allegations enveloping his office instead made the event a debacle.

A week earlier in preparation for press questions, Kitzhaber emailed McCaig a history of his involvement with the Genuine Progress Indicator, an alternative measure of economic output that Demos, a New York advocacy group, paid Hayes to promote in 2013.

In the emails, McCaig and Kitzhaber joked about Kitzhaber's preparation for the press conference and his need to develop answers that reporters would almost certainly ask about GPI. The subject line in Kitzhaber's email to McCaig when he emailed the GPI information was "pre-whiskey reading."

On Jan. 26 at 7:32 pm, Kitzhaber wrote to McCaig, "It is a good thing us pirates like our Grog ... of which I have (had) much."

"Thank goodness for Grog," McCaig wrote back eight minutes later. "Go to bed. Ok, wait until 8:00 and THEN GO TO BED."

Over the next couple of days, McCaig sent Kitzhaber two scripts for the Jan. 30 press conference in Portland. She walked him through likely questions about GPI, Hayes' contracts and whether Hayes had paid taxes on $118,000 in consulting fees she'd received in 2011 and 2012.

McCaig copied Kitzhaber's then chief of staff, Mike Bonetto, his legislative director Dmitri Palmateer and his press secretary, Amy Wojcicki, on the emails.

The second draft of the press conference script was remarkably detailed, including guidance for Kitzhaber's body language—McCaig inserted directions for a "deep breath" before Kitzhaber was supposed to say that Hayes would have no further role in his administration.

"I have made a decision and Cylvia agrees that she will have no role in my administration going forward," was the line that McCaig scripted for Kitzhaber to say.

McCaig also suggested the appropriate "tone" for Kitzhaber to take: "Direct, forthright, recognizing the need for answers, feisty when appropriate."

At the press conference, Kitzhaber did provide reporters with a lengthy description of his historical interest in the GPI. However, he chose not to answer any substantive questions and left the podium, after 20 minutes, even less time than McCaig had recommended in her script.

The press conference, and the widespread perception that Kitzhaber was evasive, proved to be a major turning point on the path to his Feb. 18 resignation.

Not everybody saw it that way, however.

On Jan. 31, Jim McDermott, a lawyer with the Ball Janik firm who represents Kitzhaber and Hayes in front of the Oregon Government Ethics Commission, emailed Kitzhaber about legal strategy regarding the Ethics Commission investigation. The day before, Kitzhaber had repeatedly deferred reporters' questions to the Ethics Commission. Later, evidence surfaced that Kitzhaber and his lawyers were simultaneously attempting to thwart an Ethics Commission investigation, arguing it had no jurisdiction over Hayes.

McDermott mentioned the press conference at the end of his email.

"For what it's worth," McDermott wrote, "we [he and his partner Steve Janik] thought you handled some tough press questions very adroitly."

Kitzhaber's campaign account, from which McCaig's is requesting payment of $8,500, currently holds just over $64,000.

Emails Show Ex-Gov. John Kitzhaber Made Only One Paid Speech While In Office

Kitzhaber had asked ethics commission's permission to earn extra money.

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

In December 2012, then-Gov. John Kitzhaber took the extraordinary step of asking the Oregon Government Ethics Commission if could have permission to make paid speeches.

It was a surprising request for a public servant who'd prided himself on high ethical standards. Taking money for speeches could give at least the appearance that Kitzhaber was trading on his position as governor.

In January 2013, the ethics commission approved his request to make private speeches but placed strict conditions on that approval. Kitzhaber could not get paid to speak in Oregon, he could not use his title or any public resources including staff time, computers or supplies to prepare his speeches and he had to book his speeches through an agency, rather than directly.

Now, emails that Kitzhaber's office sought to delete from state servers on Feb. 5 reveal what Kitzhaber did with that blessing.

The emails show last year Kitzhaber agreed to be paid $20,000 to the World Health Care Congress at a conference in Maryland. (Emails show Kitzhaber's booking agent took 25 percent of the fee as commission.) The event sponsors also provided first-class airfare, a hotel room and meals with expenses capped at $4,500.

The emails are among the thousands that Kitzhaber's assistant, Jan Murdock, asked state officials to remove from state servers. The emails were subject to records requests by WW and The Oregonian. Kitzhaber has claimed the emails, from personal accounts, were private. WW's reporting has show Kitzhaber was using his personal email to do state business, making them public records.

After he finished his first two terms as governor in 2003, Kitzhaber supported himself in part by making speeches around the country about healthcare reform. The former emergency room doctor had built a national reputation while a lawmaker and governor as one the architects of the Oregon Health Plan, which aimed to spend public healthcare dollars more efficiently.

When Kitzhaber returned to the governor's office in 2010, he was short of money. His salary was less than $100,000. That's not peanuts but he was twice-divorced, had a mortgage on his primary residence and as The Oregonian has pointed out, had alimony and child-support payments to make and would soon begin paying for his son's college education.

The emails show another group tried to hire Kitzhaber. In July 2013, Bill Leigh, the agent whose speakers' bureau represented Kitzhaber, wrote to the governor with an opportunity.

"Mid-Atlantic Permanente is interested. Can you speak for them, as they are a Kaiser subsidiary—one which does not work in Oregon," Leigh wrote to Kitzhaber on July 2, 2013. "If so, would they be prohibited from using [the title of] Governor in their publicity?"

Kitzhaber ran that request by Liani Reeves, his general counsel.

"Liani says groups that invite you to speak . . . should not be marketing you as 'Governor,'" Kitzhaber's assistant, Murdock, told him via email on July 3, 2013.

That speech never happened.

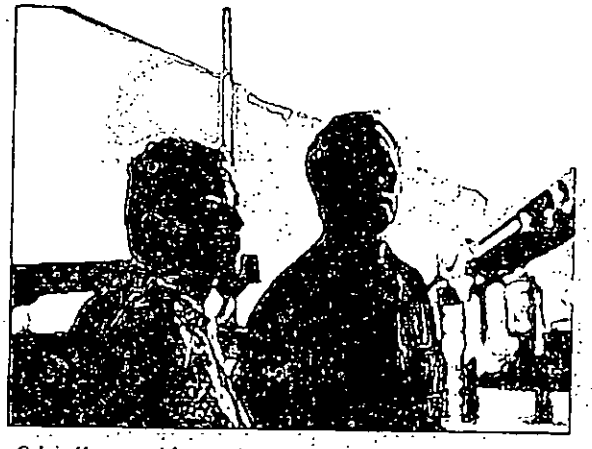
Emails Show How Kitzhaber and Hayes Sought to Block Release of Her Emails

Lawyer on Hayes' emails: "Not 'smoking guns' but they are clearly not helpful."



Cylvia Hayes and former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber is seeking to block federal criminal investigators from getting access to personal emails he stored on state computers. The Oregonian broke that news last week, noting Kitzhaber has succeeded in delaying by nearly a week the state's response to a federal criminal subpoena deadline of March 10.

Kitzhaber's desire to keep his emails private is part of a pattern. Former first lady Cylvia Hayes went to state court last month to block release of her emails, after Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum ordered them released to The Oregonian.

The emails Kitzhaber wants to keep out of investigators hands detail reasons why Hayes wants to keep her emails secret.

Kitzhaber's emails, obtained by WW last month, show Kitzhaber and Hayes' lawyers wanted to maintain the pretense Hayes was not really a public official, and to blunt legal jeopardy and negative press that could result from the release of her emails.

The Kitzhaber emails—which Kitzhaber's staff sought to delete from state servers on Feb. 5—also show the attorneys believe that, while Hayes' emails do not contain a smoking gun, they would not help her case, especially in the light of a pending criminal investigation.

The emails show that as early as Nov. 2, 2014, two days before his re-election, Kitzhaber had already lawyered up.

He and Hayes were concerned about allegations, first reported by WW in October, of conflicts of interest and influence peddling relating to $85,000 in private consulting contracts Hayes landed while serving as first lady and an adviser to Kitzhaber. That story prompted complaints to the Oregon Government Ethics Commission that the first couple had violated ethics rules.

Kitzhaber hired Steve Janik, a founder of the Ball Janik law firm, and the firm's chairman, Jim McDermott, to represent him and Hayes before the ethics commission.

In late November, Janik was working on a strategy to keep Hayes' emails private.

"Ms. Hayes, as a result of her personal relationship with Governor Kitzhaber, did not perform 'governmental functions' or 'services on behalf of the government.' She was never a part of state government," Janik wrote to Kitzhaber and Hayes on Nov. 25, 2014.

It would be a tough legal argument to win. As WW first reported in December, Hayes planned to claim that state ethics laws didn't apply to her, and therefore the ethics commission had no jurisdiction.

But that was a stretch: She had frequently represented the state and the governor and she been reimbursed by the state after traveling for official meetings at taxpayer expense. Kitzhaber's general counsel, Liani Reeves, had declared Hayes to meet the definition of public official.

In early January, Kitzhaber and Hayes maintained they had done nothing wrong but were urging their attorney to look to settle quickly with the ethics commission.

They and their attorneys discussed whether releasing Hayes' emails to the ethics commission and the press was advisable. Doing so could undercut the argument she was a public official..

"Cylvia: You might want to think about whether releasing your personal emails makes sense. It does not from a legal defense point of view. I think it is a close call from a pr/political point of view," Janik wrote to Hayes and Kitzhaber on Jan. 13, 2015. "I would not do it, but it is up to you and John."

McDermott took a similar position.

"I also worry that releasing Cylvia's personal emails will add significantly to the volume of previously-released and to-be-released public records, thereby overloading the OGEC, therefore making it difficult to negotiate a stipulated final order before March 13," McDermott wrote to Hayes and Kitzhaber on Jan. 13.

The specter of a criminal investigation was also present. WW had a week earlier reported the

FBI had opened an investigation into Hayes.

That broadened Kitzhaber and Hayes' concerns about the legal risks the couple faced.

"Last week I discussed with Cylvia that we should not produce her personal emails in response to a public records request, for several reasons including the fact that her personal emails are not public records, even if they discuss state matters," Janik wrote on Jan. 20, 2014.

"We do not believe that you should produce them to the OGEC or to the press. We have no way of knowing if there is any criminal investigation going on. However, in order to protect you we need to assume that an investigation is or will occur. If there is such an investigation, those emails will be closely scrutinized and can be misinterpreted. That is not a good idea. We have also found a couple of emails that are not helpful. They are not 'smoking guns' but they are clearly not helpful."

On Jan. 29, The Oregonian filed a petition with AG Rosenblum and the Oregon Department of Justice, seeking the agency to compel Hayes to produce her emails. (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker.) On Feb. 12, DOJ found that contrary to her attorney's argument, she had acted in a public capacity and therefore her emails are public records and should be released to The Oregonian. Hayes then went to Marion County Court to fight that ruling.

Hayes' appeal is pending. The ethics commission proceeding has been halted in lieu of a federal criminal investigation—the same one Kitzhaber's lawyer is now seeking to delay.

Emails Show Kitzhaber Sought To Hand-Pick Special Prosecutor

Former governor's attorney suggested friendly ex-judges.

Gov. John Kitzhaber

The first week of February marked an acceleration in the spiraling troubles that led former Gov. John Kitzhaber to resign.

A disastrous press conference led to the state's biggest daily calling for his resignation, and unanswered ethical and legal questions about first lady Cylvia Hayes only grew bigger. If Kitzhaber were to survive, he needed to change the political narrative—and fast.

Kitzhaber had earlier rejected calls for an independent prosecutor. But emails obtained by WW show that Kitzhaber, Hayes and the lawyers representing them before the Oregon Government Ethics Commission knew they would have to alter that stance.

The emails show that, rather than seek a truly independent investigation, Kitzhaber sought to pick the person leading the investigation.

Kitzhaber's troubles started on Oct. 8, 2014, with WW's report on possible conflicts of interest involving Hayes' work in the governor's office. As early as mid-October, Kitzhaber had rejected using his authority to ask Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate allegations that Hayes had used the governor's office to obtain $85,000 in private consulting contracts while also serving as an adviser to Kitzhaber. (Disclosure: Rosenblum is married to WW Publisher and co-owner Richard Meeker).

In late January, Hayes disclosed to EO Media/Pamplin Media Group a previously unreported payment to her of $118,000 from a Washington, D.C. group. That brought her total take from private consulting contracts to more than $220,000.

In response to that news, Kitzhaber on Jan. 30 held a disastrous press conference, during which he failed to dispel or even address the allegations of influence peddling swirling around his office. He also failed to answer the most pressing factual question on reporters' minds—had Hayes filed an accurate tax return for 2012?

At the press conference, reporters again asked Kitzhaber whether he'd ask Rosenblum to appoint a special prosecutor. Kitzhaber again rejected the idea, saying the ethics commission proceeding was sufficient.

WW and The Oregonian on Feb. 2 filed a new round of public records requests. On Feb. 4, The Oregonian editorial board called for Kitzhaber's resignation. On that same day, WW reported that Rosenblum was failing to fulfill her legal duties as AG, which required her to open an investigation into allegations of public corruption.

That's when Kitzhaber's strategy regarding an independent investigation shifted.

Jim McDermott, one of Kitzhaber's attorneys, came up with names of eminent legal figures for Kitzhaber to suggest to Rosenblum to head an independent investigation—people who might be friendly to Kitzhaber.

On Feb. 6, McDermott sent an email to the governor's personal account suggesting the names.

> John:
> Following up on our meeting, here are the names of three retired Oregon Supreme Court Justices that I mention, along with their years of service:
> Paul DeMuniz (2001-2013)
> Mick Gillette (1986-2010)
> Sue Leeson (1998-2003)
> Bill Riggs is another retired justice, but I would not recommend that you suggest him
> Of the three, I lean toward Gillette. He's currently defending two long-time Stoel Rives partners, on appeal, who were found to have committed serious legal ethical conflict of interest violations by the trial panel. So Gillette has recent (and sympathetic) experience with clients seeking to navigate ethical issues.

On that same day, Kitzhaber asked for a face-to-face meeting with Rosenblum.

Emails show that Rosenblum rejected that overture. At 4:57 pm on Feb. 6, Rosenblum's top lieutenant, Fred Boss, wrote an email to Kitzhaber's general counsel, Liani Reeves.

"I thought it would be useful to confirm in writing our discussion of earlier today," Boss wrote to Reeves. "You had indicated that the governor wishes to speak to the Attorney General, and asked whether she was available. Given the nature of the allegations currently surrounding Governor Kitzhaber and Cylvia Hayes, the Attorney General believes it would be inappropriate for the two of them to speak without others present. And under no circumstances will the Attorney General discuss with Governor Kitzhaber allegations about Ms. Hayes or the Governor. Although regrettable, I am sure you understand why we feel that this decision is necessary."

Reeves responded later that night.

"Thank you for your email," she wrote to Boss at 9:10 pm on Feb. 6. "The Governor completely understands the Attorney General's position and only wanted to tell her that he supports an independent review."

Kitzhaber's gesture was too little, too late.

On Feb. 9, Kitzhaber sent the Rosenblum a letter seeking a "factual review" of the allegations against him and Hayes—far less than a full investigation.

But after months of sitting on her hands, Rosenblum announced that same morning that she had in fact already opened an investigation into the allegations against Kitzhaber and Hayes.

Feb. 13 was the day Kitzhaber announced his resignation and the day the U.S. Department of Justice served subpoenas on Kitzhaber, Hayes and 11 state agencies.

The ethics commission and Oregon DOJ halted their investigations, and Kitzhaber lost all hope of influencing the process.

Emails Show Kitzhaber Was Ambivalent About Seeking Re-Election For a Fourth Term as Governor

"Pretty much burned out right now," Kitzhaber wrote in late 2013, not long before announcing he would run again.

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber's four-decade political career ended abruptly last month, just 37 days after he was sworn in for a record-setting fourth term.

But before seeking re-election, Kitzhaber came close to deciding against running for re-election, according to his emails that his office later sought to have deleted from state servers.

On July 12, 2013, Kitzhaber wrote to Nick Hanauer, a Seattle venture capitalist, seeking his thoughts on a paper Kitzhaber had written about economic development in Oregon. He also needed some advice.

"I am in the process of trying to decide whether to run again next year and wondered if you would be willing to give me some insight on an issue that is central to my decision," Kitzhaber wrote. "I am 66 and don't want to spend the next four years simply 'running the state if you will."

In October 2013, Kitzhaber called the Legislature into special session. That session may have been the highpoint of his third term, but it took a big toll on him.

Kitzhaber's goal during that short session was to increase the cuts to the Public Employees Retirement System lawmakers had made in the regular 2013 session. Through some adroit negotiations, Kitzhaber convinced legislators to expand those cuts from $800 million to about $5 billion. The special session highlighted Kitzhaber's independence: he forced the public employee unions who had funded his 2010 campaign to swallow bitter medicine for the benefit of local and state government services.

It also left Kitzhaber wondering if he wanted to go on being governor.

"Pretty much burned out right now," Kitzhaber wrote to his then-chief of staff, Curtis Robinhold on Oct. 10, 2013, eight days after the session ended. "It is a remarkable and contradictory mosaic of a multi-level and incredibly deep fatigue; the yearning for a less demanding and complicated life where I spend as much time rafting rivers as I do trying to save them."

Other emails show him and Robinhold communicating about a staff retreat planned for later that month.

"I would like to talk with you about how we discussed the uncertainty about your running again," Robinhold wrote to Kitzhaber on Oct. 10, 2013. "My proposal is that I open with the assertion that the day and a half will be spent on the assumption that you run again, because if you are not running again most of what we do in the next day and a half will not be too important."

An issue of contention for Robinhold and other senior staff members was the role that first lady Cylvia Hayes might play in a fourth Kitzhaber term. As WW has reported previously, the staff wanted her less involved in the office, while Hayes and Kitzhaber wanted the opposite.

Robinhold alluded to the conflict in his email about the staff gathering. "I would also like to talk with you about the situation with Cylvia, although I think that the retreat is not a good place to have that conversation," he wrote to Kitzhaber. "However, I think it would help me with the group if I knew what you and Cylvia were thinking."

Even after the Oct. 26 retreat, Kitzhaber still had not decided what he would do. "Cylvia and I may try to get away for a few days the weekend of November 1 to make a final decision about another term," Kitzhaber wrote in an email to his assistant, Jan Murdock, on Oct. 21, 2013.

Ultimately, of course, he and Hayes decided he would seek a fourth term.

Kitzhaber and Hayes selected Earl Boyles Elementary in the David Douglas School District in East Portland for the Dec. 3, 2013 kickoff of his final campaign. They chose the school in part because of its success in educating low-income students. Hayes was supposed to introduce Kitzhaber after saying a few words about her own work.

"Earl Boyles also represents an important foundation for the poverty-reduction and anti-hunger work I have been doing and will continue as Oregon's First Lady," read the talking points prepared for Hayes, according to a Dec. 1, 2013 email from campaign consultant Mark Wiener to Kitzhaber and Hayes. "The best way for children to break the cycle of poverty is to receive a supportive education, beginning as early as possible."

Hayes' introduction of Kitzhaber would set the tone for the higher profile they both expected her to have in his final term as governor.

But Hayes arrived late at the school and missed her opportunity to speak.

Emails Show That Unlike Gov. John Kitzhaber, Cylvia Hayes Had No Doubts About Holding On To Power

She called Kitzhaber's tenure as governor "our administration."

First Lady Cylvia Hayes - IMAGE: oregon.gov

Last week, WW published emails showing that former Gov. John Kitzhaber had been ambivalent about seeking re-election, and that he worried that he lacked the energy and desire to continue.

The emails show that, while Kitzhaber wavered, then-first lady Cylvia Hayes did not—she wanted him to run again and to give her an even larger role in his administration.

The emails are among those Kitzhaber's office sought to have deleted from state servers Feb. 5, eight days before he announced he would resign amid allegations of influence peddling and conflicts of interest against both Hayes and Kitzhaber.

Records show that Kitzhaber worked to balance Hayes' demands for a greater political role against his staff's concerns about her influence in the governor's office.

"My only priority is for you to be happy," Kitzhaber wrote to Hayes in a May 14, 2013, email; "for you to feel fulfilled in the mission-driven work to which you have dedicated your life; for you to be as effective as you can possibly be; and to help support in any way I can moving your career to the next level and for you to be known and sought after as a national and international speaker, consultant and messenger."

"I know you remain very frustrated about your role in the administration," Kitzhaber continued. "But I never, ever want you to feel like my 'side kick.' And if I have somehow done something to make you feel that way—again I am sorry. My intention is just the opposite as I said before: to support your work and your career. I obviously have no way of really knowing how difficult the 'First Lady' role is but I recognize that it is very challenging."

On July 27, 2013, Hayes sent Kitzhaber an email about her plans to expand the reach of one of her top priorities, the adoption of the "genuine progress indicator," or GPI, as an alternative measure of economic output.

Hayes had been hired earlier in the year to promote the GPI by Demos, a New York-based advocacy group. In April 2013, she and Kitzhaber had traveled to Bhutan to meet with a Demos representative and other GPI supporters. Hayes' $25,000 contract with Demos was part of the more than $220,000 in private consulting contracts she obtained while serving as first lady and an adviser to Kitzhaber.

The July email Hayes sent to Kitzhaber makes clear Kitzhaber was aware of her desire to mix her role as first lady with her job as a paid consultant to Demos.

That email detailed Hayes' hope to get other states and institutions to adopt the GPI: The plan reveals significant conflicts between her role in the governor's office and her work as a private consultant.

Here's an excerpt from that plan:

Work Components:

1) Directly assisting targeted states:

- Drilling down with Washington state: maybe the next step is to work with Wendy from [Washington Gov. Jay] Inslee's office to spearhead a high-level briefing for Inslee and key staff.
- Engage with the Colorado folks to help shape where that effort is heading in terms of government engagement and stakeholder alignment—maybe heading toward a concrete strategic planning meeting.
- Oregon GPI
  - Assist with development of structure of GPI "ownership" and management
  - Identify and communicate with targeted constituents and partners
  - Assist with development of "Launch Plan"

Next Steps:

- Develop list of OR targeted constituents/ partners
- Set up Seattle meetings in August
- Follow up contact with Nike sustainability leaders (maybe they could provide modest funding for the Oregon GPI through PSU; also, it looks like we may be doing a federal event probably in January or February, and as part of this it would be great to have a dialogue between the private and public dimensions of sustainability measurement.

- Follow up with Ecotrust in the GPI work (maybe they can help us development a state-level environmental account)

On Dec. 2, 2013, Kitzhaber announced he was running for re-election. The three senior staff members who'd resisted Hayes' gaining more power—chief of staff Curtis Robinhold, economic adviser Scott Nelson and communications director Tim Raphael—all left the governor's office before 2014.

Hayes soon asked for regular time on Kitzhaber's work calendar.

"John and I would like to have you begin scheduling a weekly meeting for the two of us. One hour ideally in person but can be by phone," Hayes wrote to Kitzhaber's assistant, Jan Murdock, on May 14, 2014. "This will be to discuss our collective work and any currently pressing issues for our Administration."

A week later, on May 21, 2014, she sent Kitzhaber an email with an attachment titled "My Work Plan: May—Dec. 2014."

That plan included speaking engagements in New Orleans, Boise, Chicago, Boston and Russia.

She also outlined greater policy responsibilities, including inserting herself into the selection process for a new director of the agency closest to her business interests—the Oregon Department of Energy.

Here's an excerpt from that three-page work plan:

Energy and Climate:

- Part of planning, fundraising and implementation of build up to carbon pricing campaign in Oregon (numerous calls, meetings, strategic thinking, stakeholder development)
- Assist with hiring ODOE Director
- Providing vision, leadership and strategic thinking on coal, natural gas, oil trains and ODOE strategic planning

ODOE did hire a new director—Michael Kaplan, a Kitzhaber staffer who'd worked with Hayes in the governor's office.

But one part of her plan, her journey to Russia, fell victim to international tensions.

Hayes frequently referred to herself as a CEO--her title at her consulting company, 3E Strategies, where she was the only employee. Still, she took that title seriously when it came to warnings from the White House about relations with Russia.

"With great disappointment I have decided not to do the Russia trip," Hayes wrote to Kitzhaber and his political adviser, Patricia McCaig, on May 30, 2014. "I just think it is too problematic at this time. President Obama recently asked U.S. CEO's not to attend an economic summit in Russia scheduled for later this year. I feel I need to honor that request."

"Moreover, there is no question that news of my visit to Russia will be taken out of context and used to try to create a scandal," Hayes continued. "None of the positive aspects of the work I would be doing in Russia will get mentioned — it will be all about trying to turn this into a scandal.... This was about working with small business people who are trying to do good by the environment in a very special part of our world. Argggghhh."

Historical Call Detail Explanation Form

Network Element	Mobile Directory #	Dialed Digit	Cell Direction	Seizure Date Time	Seizure Duration	Calling Party Number
This is the switching equipment that transacted the call. A switch is named by the basic geographic area it covers. Switches route calls for hundreds of cell sites.	The billed subscriber's Mobile Directory Number (MDN)	This is the number dialed to initiate the call. For inbound calls this number will be the same as the Mobile Directory Number column and for outbound calls this is the number your target dialed.	This is the type of call, e.g. inbound, outbound, or voicemail. Inbound calls display the following numbers: 0 & 6. Calls to voicemail or mobile forwarded calls display the letter "F." Outbound calls display the following numbers: 1 & 3 Mobile to Mobile calls display the number 2. Any other letter or number is a routing or unknown call type and does not detail actual transactional data for a completed call. Subscriber information is not available for routing numbers.	This is the exact date and time of the start of each call	This is the duration of the call in seconds	This is the calling party that initiated the call. If the call is outbound this column will be the same as the Mobile Directory Number. If the call is inbound, this is the number that dialed your target.

When the #s in the Mobile Directory Number column, Dialed Digit column and the Calling Party Number column are all different, then you are looking at a routing #. The Routing # will appear in the Dialed Digit column. (All three numbers are different)

If you see your target # in the Mobile Directory Number column, the Dialed Digit column and the Calling Party Number column, then you are looking at your target checking his/her voicemail. (All three numbers are the same)

Action Taken:

After Captain Davie and I attempted the second interview with Mike Rodgers (see her report for details), I was contacted by attorney Michael Levine by phone on March 30th, 2015. We spoke about our investigation and I informed him that I knew that Mike Rodgers had been responsible for leaking .PST files containing the John Kitzhaber's personal emails to Nigel Jaquis of the Willamette Week. I informed him that we wished to a statement from him as to what his reasons were for doing this. I told him that I would be forwarding the case to the Marion County DA's office at the conclusion of the investigation for review, but that I would not be charging Mr. Rodgers with a crime.

Michael Levine asked me what charges his client had the potential of facing. I told him that some of this depended on his statement, but that I felt that the two that I felt were most relevant were Official Misconduct I and Official Misconduct II. Mr. Levine asked for some information on these statutes and I we exchanged a few emails related to it. I contacted Mr. Levine again on April 7th, 2015. He said that he had talked to his client and said that he would be willing to cooperate with the investigation in exchange for immunity from prosecution. He said that, related to his clients reasons for doing what he did, he had it on good authority, from a very credible source, that his client would say the following:

He no longer has any of the ex-Governor's personal emails or .PST files of the former Governor's emails.

He was acting in, what he felt to be the best interest of the public.

He was ordered to destroy emails by the Governor's office. He thought that if he carried out this order, he would be obstructing justice.

He went to his own supervisors, and they were no help and did not support him.

He felt his only recourse was to release the emails to the public via the media.

He received no personal gain from the release of the emails. He received no compensation in any form.

The release of the emails was actually to his detriment and own personal risk (ie, job, potential prosecution, etc.)

Mr. Levine sent me an email summarizing the about points related to our phone conversation. All emails are attached to this report.

This has typically been the result of a misdirected send and in my experience is a case of stored PII related to a non-secure delivery (unencrypted) email system. I require and receive approval in writing from the responsible manager before taking this action.

In this particular case, we do not know the nature of or how many of these emails are in the archive. Given the unusual nature of the request, I'm reluctant to have my team move forward without the active awareness and consideration of the possibilities and a direct approval from higher levels of the action. Note too that the Archive message deletion process requires a higher level of rights than the TSC has and so would escalate to appropriate ETS staff.

The solution proposed by Tracy below is technically doable, but I would think the same considerations apply.

I am OoO tomorrow but will be available by cell.

Subject: Governor's email account

The PST that was created today had email that was from the Governor's AT&T personal email account.
Governor's office wants anything that is in the email account from [redacted] (or something close to that) removed from Archive.

I am trying to think of how this could happen. It could not be the forward that is set up in Gmail for any incoming email to be sent to the state email address.
It would have to be the rule set up in Outlook to CC any email sent from his account to the state email address. And it was sending email from the other accounts as well. The Governor had 3 email accounts set up within one instance of Outlook. I am wondering if the rule applied to all three accounts.

I would have to look into the Archive or PST to see how many emails are in there from his personal email account.
Now I do not know if we were even getting the sent email from the correct email account.

I am suggesting we set up a PC within the GOV's office and set up outlook to sync email from the Gmail account. It will not affect anything.
This was a PST will be created locally and we can import that into the state email account.

Under Oregon Public Records Law, I am requesting a listing or email log of, since Jan. 1 2011, all emails sent or received by the governor's state-use gmail account, meaning governor.kitzhaber@gmail.com or governorkitzhaber@gmail.com in the event he uses that as well.

I request that this listing or log include sender and recipient, cc's, subject header, date and time, as well as whether the email has an attachment — much like an email inbox or sent folder.

If it is easier, we are happy to take full copies of all these emails instead. Another, much easier route wold be for someone at the state to take photos of the email inbox pages, sent folder pages and other such folders to provide the requested information. Finally, we are happy to come and look at the archived email inbox (and sent box) in person to select individual emails we are interested in reviewing in full.

I am addressing this request to DAS because according to the Governor's office, it cannot access non-state email accounts such as those used by Cylvia Hayes and does not consider itself the custodian of those.

In contrast, the Governor's office says DAS and the State Data Center has been charged with retaining and maintaining copies of all emails sent or received by the Governor's state-use gmail account, according to the Governor's office (see below).

I am copying Liani Reeves so she is aware of this request. Based on past requests we've made to DAS and OSP, we expect she will weigh in if she chooses to attempt to redact something. However, these are public records by the Governor's office's own admission.

If DAS contends that despite the above explanation and the Governor's position described below, that DAS does not have access to these emails maintained by DAS in the SDC, then please provide your reasoning to allow an appeal. In that event, Liani, please consider this records request to be addressed to your office as well as to DAS.

Please be aware that concealment or destruction of emails described in this request violates ORS 162.305.

Subject: Re: questions about Governor's use of personal email account for state business

Why does the Governor use a personal email account and not a state account?
A generic state email account would generate more email traffic than the Governor could realistically manage for actual communications. Instead, he set up a gmail account that he can use for official state business. It was set up with the intent that it was a public accouut, and as such, all emails are automatically saved and maintained by the Department of Administrative Services at the data center.

How does the Governor respond to experts who say the use of personal emails to do the public's business reduces government transparency?
Emails in that account that relate to public business are public records and treated the same as if they were on a state email account. As stated above, DAS maintains the emails on this account.

When the Governor's office receives requests for the Governor's emails, is the resulting search conducted of his gmail account or only state accounts?
The gmail account is searched for responsive public records when we receive a public records request for the Governor's emails. He does not use a state email account.

What steps has the Governor's staff taken to obtain or secure the Governor's state-related gmails in light of the pending records requests?
Governor's staff conducts a search of the Governor's gmail account for responsive public records for each public records request received that requests the Governor's emails.

5) On Jan. 21, 2014, Liani Reeves emailed me in response to a request that "As stated earlier, there were no documents responsive to your request for emails to/from Rocky King and the Governor from Cover Oregon." However, the attached email (recently disclosed by Cover Oregon) seems to be from Rocky and is cc'd to the Governor, judging by the fact that the entire "cc" email address is redacted. Can you explain why this email was not disclosed under Oregon Public Records Law? Was it because it cc'd the Governor's personal email address and thus was not discovered in Liani's search?
Your assumption that the redacted email address is the Governor's is false. Cover Oregon would have the specifics on what and why that was redacted.

I am copying Liani Reeves so she is aware of this request. Based on past requests we've made to DAS and OSP, we expect she will weigh in if she chooses to attempt to redact something. However, these are public records by the Governor's office's own admission.

If DAS contends that despite the above explanation and the Governor's position described below, that DAS does not have access to these emails maintained by DAS in the SDC, then please provide your reasoning to allow an appeal. In that event, Liani, please consider this records request to be addressed to your office as well as to DAS.

Please be aware that concealment or destruction of emails described in this request violates ORS 162.305.

Subject: Re: questions about Governor's use of personal email account for state business

Why does the Governor use a personal email account and not a state account?
A generic state email account would generate more email traffic than the Governor could realistically manage for actual communications. Instead, he set up a gmail account that he can use for official state business. It was set up with the intent that it was a public account, and as such, all emails are automatically saved and maintained by the Department of Administrative Services at the data center.

How does the Governor respond to experts who say the use of personal emails to do the public's business reduces government transparency? Emails in that account that relate to public business are public records and treated the same as if they were on a state email account. As stated above, DAS maintains the emails on this account.

When the Governor's office receives requests for the Governor's emails, is the resulting search conducted of his gmail account or only state accounts? The gmail account is searched for responsive public records when we receive a public records request for the Governor's emails. He does not use a state email account.

What steps has the Governor's staff taken to obtain or secure the Governor's state-related gmails in light of the pending records requests? Governor's staff conducts a search of the Governor's gmail account for responsive public records for each public records request received that requests the Governor's emails.

5) On Jan. 21, 2014, Liani Reeves emailed me in response to a request that "As stated earlier, there were no documents responsive to your request for emails to/from Rocky King and the Governor from Cover Oregon." However, the attached email (recently disclosed by Cover Oregon) seems to be from Rocky and is cc'd to the Governor, judging by the fact that the entire "cc" email address is redacted. Can you explain why this email was not disclosed under Oregon Public Records Law? Was it because it cc'd the Governor's personal email address and thus was not discovered in Liani's search?
Your assumption that the redacted email address is the Governor's is false. Cover Oregon would have the specifics on what and why that was redacted.

Hello,

I'm working on a records request with the Gov's Office. Could you please pull the .pst file named, JKemail.pst from my H:drive and place it on the drive of Amy Wojcicki?

Amy, these are the archived emails from the oovernor.kitzhaber@gmail account. As you recall, Nick at the Oregonian has a request in for a log of all emails in that gmail box.

Many thanks,

In addition, I have included emails that support the timeline of events, as well as provide some additional context to our conversation earlier today.

Governor email records discovery

2/2/15 – Nick Budnick request for a log of all Governor.kitzhaber@gmail emails being archived by DAS.

2/3/15 – Matt Shelby forwards request to Mike Rodgers for processing.

2/5/15 – Emails placed on Matt Shelby's network drive for review. Matt Shelby realized the DAS archive box was receiving emails from multiple accounts, not just the governor.kitzhaber@gmail.

- Matt Shelby calls Amy Wojcicki to notify her that personal email accounts used by the Governor were also forwarding to the archive box.
- Matt Shelby requests for TSC to also place copies of the .pst file on the network drives of Amy Wojcicki and Lianni Reeves.

2/6/15 – Matt Shelby separates the Governor.kitzhaber@gmail emails to comply with the 2/2 records request. TSC copies a .pst file containing the responsive records onto Amy Wojcicki's network drive for review.

2/6/15 – Matt Shelby discusses with Michael Jordan a process to review emails in DAS possession to determine which ones DAS has an obligation to maintain.

2/6/15 – Matt Shelby delivers two thumb drives containing emails from the Governor's personal accounts that were forwarded to the DAS archive box, for review.

AS of 2/17/15 – No emails have been removed from state servers. The auto-forward function, for personal email addresses, has been turned off. The state is still collecting emails to and from governor.kitzhaber@gmail.com.

The PST that was created today had email that was from the Governor's AT&T personal email account.
Governor's office wants anything that is in the email account from Hundrethmeridian@att.com (or something close to that) removed from Archive.

I am trying to think of how this could happen. It could not be the forward that is set up in Gmail for any incoming email to be sent to the state email address.
It would have to be the rule set up in Outlook to CC any email sent from his account to the state email address. And it was sending email from the other accounts as well. The Governor had 3 email accounts set up within one instance of Outlook. I am wondering if the rule applied to all three accounts.

I would have to look into the Archive or PST to see how many emails are in there from his personal email account.
Now I do not know if we were even getting the sent email from the correct email account.

I am suggesting we set up a PC within the GOV's office and set up outlook to sync email from the Gmail account. It will not affect anything.
This was a PST will be created locally and we can import that into the state email account.

Adrian was off, how I did call him and told him that I would start my day at TSC to get more details about the request and let Mike know that. Mike was planning on meeting with Michael Jordan first thing.
- When I arrived at TSC Mike Rodgers was at TSC talking with Brian Tipsword. In discussion with Tracy he mentioned that the e-mail that was asked to be removed, was believed to be one of the original personal email accounts that would forward to an alias state email account and get archived. The Governor did not want to use state owned equipment or have a state email account to use, so from a legal perspective they needed to forward all mail accounts he would use for state business to the state email account. This may have come from the gov's office.
- Friday, Feb 6th at approx.11AM, Mike Rodgers came to my office and said that the issue was put to rest and there will be no other further action needed.

Mike, these tickets are from the old ticketing app TSC used before RT. Not they date from the Governor assuming office for the first 4 years of his second term. The purpose of forwarding from Gmail to a state mailbox was for "archiving" and the request was made by the Governor's Office (see "Requestor" in the tickets below.)

Leslie Roth was the GO Office Administrator at the time and Jan Murdock is currently the 1st Lady's administrative assistant I believe, and the person from whom Tracy received the request on Thursday.

At 1PM on Feb 17th, I met Matt Shelby and John Darville at the Govs office to turn off forwarding of Gov Kitzhaber person emails to state email account since the gov was resigning the next day (Wendesday, Feb 18th at 10AM). We were supposed to meet Liani in the office also but no one informed her. We did not proceed until she showed up at 1:30. Matt Shelby and I had conversation how person email being forwarded to state e-mail account was public record. He appeared to think that persons email could be deleted out of public records request if it does not pertain to what they were asking... which means that it is subjective to who is reviewing the information that was handed to them in a PST file. I reminded him that doing this does not delete it out of our archive system.

John carried out the removing of the forwarding of the personal email accounts to the state email account. (Note Jan had a paper with all the accounts and passwords) Just prior to leaving Jan Murdock asked John to then delete the personal email accounts. We said that we could not do this as if it was done should be done by Kitzhaber or his delegate. John briefly told Jan the process to go thru to delete and online email account.

On Feb 17th at 3:29PM Mike Rodgers called me to his office to have a meeting with Bryan Nealy, John Ritchie, Shawn Dawson and asked that Adrian Turpin be there also. This meeting was to discuss what 's Alex Pettit had tasked John and Shawn to do.. They were to stop any administrative access to the Gov's state email and archive information as "someone in ETS has leaked the gov's emails to the media. (Mike Rodgers stated that others had access to the email "pst's" that were created at the request of Matt Shelby and the COO's office. Mike Rodgers also said that he took the PST's on a thumb drive and gave it to Matt. Matt made two copies for the GOVs office for them to review. I also understand that a copy was also given to Gov Kitzhaber for him to review..... Also on Feb 5th Scot Conner of TSC was contacted by Matt Shelby to create a full mail box PST on the MJOJKT (Kitzhaber's state email address) and was placed in Matt Shelby's Home Folder on the fileserver. Scot shortly after received another call asking him to place the same files in Liani Revees and Amy Wojcicki Home Folder in the Govs office on our file server.) John Ritchie said we need to do what Alex Pettit has asked them to do is plug this specific issue the other will need to be worked on later.

Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie were to get with Alex Arizala to figure out how to stop admin access to the govs email and archive solution. They may need to disable all access for all of TSC to the email archive solution... if that happens TSC would not be able to carry out any public records request for any agency that uses out archive solution like Park and Housing.

Mike stepped in to my office around 5:20PM and stated that he is really stressed because he cannot get anything in writing from Michael Jordan, Matt Shelby or Sarah Jo Chaplin and felt like we were being setup... we also talked about getting personal legal advice to what we should be doing without anything being written.

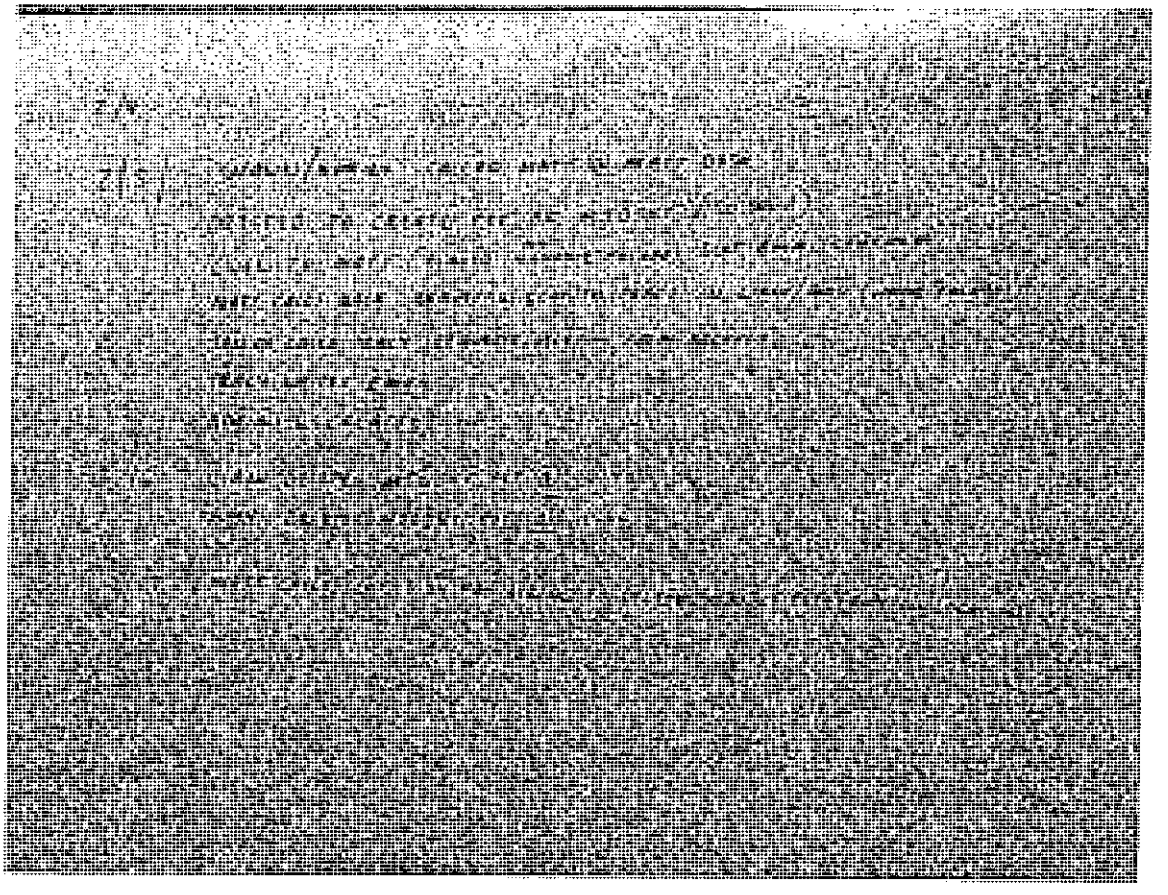
Plan on starting my day at 7AM at TSC so that Adrian and I can work on plan of support for bringing in new gov and also the other requests that are coming in.

Feb 18th 7:15AM arrived at TSC /Revenue bldg... Let TSC staff know that they did not have administrative access to the email archive and that the Enterprise e-mail support team would take on the duties of Public Records Requests. Explained this was done at the request of Alex Pettit to limit exposure and risk. Mike Rodgers and Adrian Turpin met in conference room at TSC... and discussed who and when PST request came in and who they were delivered to.

Before we started Mike had asked me if I knew the Kitzhaber's personal email passwords and that Shawn Dawson would be calling for them. Shawn and John Ritchie were directed by Alex Pettit to delete the Gov's personal e-mail account... which was the same account that Jan I believe asked us to delete. We called Shawn Dawson on speaker phone in the conference room and Shawn joined John Ritchie on the call. Mike warned then this is dangerous to carry out this request .... I told both that I did not have the passwords and they need to contact Jan Murdock as she has them all written down on a paper in the office. I do not know if they carried out the task.

Below is a picture of the report..... The PST's were put in the home users directories of Matt Shelby, Liani Reeves and Amy Wojcicki. Note they also show when they were opened modified and deleted.

Next we put together the chronological order of when Scot Conor received the call from Matt Shelby and the course of action. Below are the events: Notice that on 2/5 Scot



Since all of the requests coming in to the TSC and requests to Mike Rodgers are verbal we have nothing in writing which feels like if we are doing something illegal that we will be the ones holding the bag or the fall guys.

Late Wednesday morning Michael Jordan sends email to ETS saying that there is a breach or leak of the governor's email to the media and that he has OSP involved to find out who leaked this information. Copy of email.

Dear ETS staff,

As you are likely aware, emails to and from Governor Kitzhaber have been a subject of much scrutiny over the past several weeks. While responding to a recent records request, staff in my office discovered that DAS was archiving emails from the governor's personal as well as professional accounts. That prompted a discussion with the Governor's Office to ensure we were maintaining the records we have a responsibility maintain, while discontinuing the archival of emails that contain no state business and are personal in nature.

It has become apparent, that about that same time, some or all of the Governor's emails in DAS possession were provided to a reporter.

As a public agency, many laws govern our actions. Some laws require us to disclose public information; others require us to maintain confidentiality in certain circumstances. The clandestine disclosure of these emails occurred before any analysis of our responsibilities could be completed.

That work will continue. Governor Kitzhaber's emails have been secured in their entirety. In addition, I've asked Oregon State Police to investigate this information breach. You may see OSP investigators on site over the next several days, performing their work.

Bottom line, this comes down to trust. Trust in our ability to securely store sensitive information; trust in our process to determine what information is public; trust that we can work with agencies to strike the appropriate balance between security and transparency. The recent breach has upset that balance. We're working now to restore it.

Thank you,

Michael

Now I feel like we ETS are being targeted for leaking to the media which Michael Jordon knows that the PSTs are out there also and could have easily been leaked to the media as well... was he doing any investigation on that also?

On the 18th in the AM Scot Conner gets a call from Matt Shelby to delete the PST file that Scot put there on Feb 5th. Below is the email response to take no action.

Copy that, no action. Thanks.

Adrian and Scot,

Do not delete the pst's that were created for the MJOJKT mailbox until I get further instruction from Mike Rodgers. I need to seek higher authorization/authority, since this is a copy of the Governor Kitzhaber's email, which is under criminal investigation by the Federal Government.

On Feb 19th John Ritchie and Shawn Dawson show up at ETS and told us under Alex Pettit's direction they are to either securely copy the file to CD or thumb drive and delete the pst files that Scot placed in the home directories or possibly flip the hidden bit so that it cannot be easily be seen. This is to protect staff from doing stupid things said Pettit.

Marshall Wells who is our DAS and ETS security manage just got back from vacation and was brought up to speed. Since we were getting no direction from upper management in writing and we knew there were Federal Subpoenas served, he wanted to know what should be done to preserve the data and any chain of command. He reached out to the US Attorney General's office for the advice. (You will need to speak with him to get the details of the conversation.)

I do know that Marshall got in trouble with the COOs office and was told it was not his place to talk with them...

Mike Rodgers received a call in the afternoon from Sarah Jo stating that any questions need to be directed to Sarah Jo and Matt Shelby as they are listed as the US Attorney General's contacts. He was also told that if any Federal Investigators show up and want to talk to anyone that we are to say we cannot talk with them without the State Attorney General Legal Council. Sarah Jo told Mike that we need to protect the State.... Mike also asked for that in writing but he has not seen anything.

I keep asking myself why can't they provide anything in writing to us for actions they want to us to carry out?

I also provided Mike Rodgers a TSC Roster and a TSC out of office calendar from Feb 2nd to Feb 19th per OSP investigator meeting he was having at 1:30. I provided a paper copy for OSP and sent Mike the e-mail with the attachments.

Subject: Update

Darin,

Late yesterday afternoon I was asked to join a meeting with Mike Rodgers, Gary Kreiger, Adrien Turpin, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie. The primary purpose of the meeting was to develop a plan to carry out a direction that was given to Mike Rodgers from Michael Jordan and the same direction separately to Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie from Alex Pettit.

Shawn explained that there were some of the Governors personal emails that had been leaked to the press. Alex had directed Shawn and John to "secure" the Governors email accounts to prevent further access. Mike Rodgers got the same direction from Michael Jordan. It was also discussed that there was some speculation that those emails had been supplied to the press by someone in ETS. There were a number of other topics discussed, such as the fact that the emails in question had already been copied to two portable drives in the form of what are known as "pst" files on or about February 5 and had been delivered to the DAS headquarters by Mike Rodgers. The fact that all the emails in question were at that point outside of the email system itself and beyond the control of ETS security measures means that the source of any disclosure of the contents of those emails is really hard to determine and it should not be assumed that the source is someone who has direct access to the email system itself. The emails could be anywhere at this point.

Everyone in the room that had been directly involved in actions around the emails in question did a recap and update of events to get everyone current on status. I won't repeat everything here. The outcome was an agreed upon plan for Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie to work with one of the ETS email admins to remove all access to the accounts in question, both in the live email system and in the archive.

We discussed potential research steps to determine where those email "pst" files might be within the state file systems, but the consensus was that we should take no further action without DOJ direction. I reiterated the opinion from DOJ that you and I received the afternoon of Thursday the 12th, copied below. I suggested we update DOJ on new developments, especially in light of the federal subpoena, and that we should be very careful about taking ANY action. We also discussed whether it was even appropriate that ETS be talking any action without third party oversight, We agreed we needed to carry out the direction of the state COO and CIO, but that we also needed to get some advice on future actions

As you and I were the ones that did the outreach to DOJ last week and received the direction, I thought I should get you up to speed on the latest developments so we can decide what the proper course of action is for us as far as asking for an updated opinion.

Earlier this morning Michael Rodgers came into my office and told me that he had a request that came from the govenor's office (Leona C. ???, I rreally didn't catch her name but her first name started with an L and she is his legal counsel) to delete all of the emails to the govenor's email address from our archive that came from a particular account.

He went into more detail that this person apparently also contacted someone from TSC (Adrian??, just guessing as he didn't say) with this request. Apparently Kitzhaber has a couple of Gmail like accounts that auto forward all of the email to his state account. His girlfriend sent emails to one of these Gmail like accounts that were all autoforwarded to his state account and it are these emails that were autoforwarded that they want to have deleted.

Michael R. went to Michael Jordan first thing this morning for his guidance on this request and Michael J. said he would get back to Michael R.

I recommended to Michael R. that if Michael J. says to do it that this may need to go to DoJ and I recommended Karen Johnson as far as the first person to talk to.

Mike just came in my office and mentioned that he has a thumb drive with 2400 emails that he is to take to Matt Shelby who is then going to work with the govenors office (the legal counsel and a couple of other names were mentioned) who are then going to review the emails and tell Mike which ones are to be deleted.

Mike and I just talked. Another email address that he wasn't aware of had an additional 3500 emails from her and he found another one they didn't know about that had about another 1000. Apparently Kitzhaber's Chief of Staff and Counel will be veryifying which emails are to be deleted.

I just looked up thhe Governor's office staff directory. The counsel's name is Liani Reeves and the Chief of Staff is Mike Bonetto. Steven Powers is the deupty counsel whose namee Mike may have mentioned earlier.

Matt Shelby Request

Darin Rand [redacted] Tue, Feb 17, 2015 at 12:42 PM

I was in 104 finishing a meeting when Mike Rodgers walked in. He wanted me to proof an email he drafted to Michael Jordan which said that there were emails that were received in the governor's state account from 2 email addresses, one was govenor.kitzhaber @gmail.com and the other was jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com over the weekend and today. He wanted to know if he was going to get in trouble for sending it.

While we were talking Matt Shelby called him and Mike put him on speaker phone. The govenor brought in his computer and Matt wants a TSC tech to come over and configure his gmail so it won't forward to the state account.

Mike asked if we would get in any trouble for this, he said that the TSC techs are gun shy. Matt said that there is a difference between configuring it so that it won't forward anymore and deleting what we already have. Matt said he would like one of the normal techhs that would support the govenor come over and sit with Liani and Matt while tthe techs configure it. He said the governor would like to have this done by 3:00.

After the call ended, I recomended to Mike that he send an email to the tech with instructions just to do that and to not do anything else.

I also told him that I had a call with Karen Johnson and Lori Norlien to talk about the CenturyLink negotiations and brought up to Karen that I am wondering if DoJ has anyone who can provide some direction s far as [redacted]

I drafted this email to document the occurrences I was aware or involved in following my first awareness of the request from the governor's office to delete emails the evening of 2/5. I was originally going to send it to Bryan Nealy but decided later in the course of writing it to Sherry Lauer, with ODOT HR. Sherry scheduled an appointment with Michael Rodgers at 1:00 on Wednesday 2/18. Michael did not know what it was concerning and wanted someone else to be present. When Sherry first came into the SDC, the three of us went into my office. She I asked who I was, I told her my role and that we were not told by Michael Jordan or anyone else in DAS that she was coming or authorized to come. She then told us that she was coming at the direction of Clyde Saiki, that the investigation was requested from inside of DAS and that the subject was Michael Jordan. Michael Rodgers met with Sherry for about an hour and a half.

This email was reviewed and minor edits made by the managers to whom the emails was forwarded. I sent the original email to Sherry just moments after I later found out that I had received an email from Sarah Jo with instructions from Tim Smith on process, including that we are not to talk to the feds without DoJ present and forwarded that email to Sherry when I saw it. Within about 15 minutes of having sent this email to Sherry, Michael and Marshall were both escorted from the building. I later sent the email from Michael Jordan announcing to ETS that Michael Rodgers and Marshall Wells being put on indefinite home duty and that the organization would be reporting to Alex Petit. Later in the day I forgot the attached email and forwarded it to her as well. I have never received any response of any kind from Sherry.

I apologize for the typos or bad grammar, it took me most of the day on Friday to write this and neither I nor the rest of the managers listed below caught all of the mistakes. One such mistake on 2/18 d. I reference 'your' email when this should have been changed to Bryan Nealy.

I am sending this to you because I don't really know where else to go. Several of us on the ETS management team feel vulnerable both legally and professionally. The DAS director's office does not provide direction in writing, and very limited direction verbally. The direction that does come verbally is reactive, telling us that something that we have done is wrong and they are reprimanding us for our actions or starting an investigation. No one from the director's office has been out to the SDC and this is one of those times when leadership is really needed.

6. 2/17 I am finishing a meeting when Michael Rodgers walks in, he asked me to proof an email to Michael Jordan that emails from govenor.kitzhaber@gmail.com and from jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com were still being forwarded to the governor's state account. During this time he then gets a call from Matt Shelby that he puts on speakerphone that the governor brought in his computer and that the governor would like us to shut off forwarding. Mike expresses his concern and Matt says both Matt and Liani will both be there and nothing will be done other than shutting off the forwarding.

7. 2/18

   a. I get an email from Bryan Nealy reviewing the meetings that happened on 2/7 with Mike Rodgers, Gary Krieger, Adrian Turpin, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie to carry out directions that came from MJ to Michael Rodgers and from Alex Petit to Shawn Dawson. The meeting details the leak of additional emails to the press, the fact that there are multiple copies of the pst files in different locations and presumably under the control of different people and outside of the control of ETS. Shawn and John then work with one of our email admins to lockdown access to the governor's account. Bryan reiterated not deleting anything without DoJ direction.

   b. Matt Shelby makes a request to delete pst files containing the governor's emails. An email chain starts with TSC staff, to Gary, to Michael Rodgers and then to MJ again containing the message that we will not delete anything.

   c. We get an email from Michael Jordan that informs us to expect OSP to investigate the leak. I wonder why it takes this long to be interested in the leak.

   d. I get a response from Karen Johnson [redacted]

   e. I spend time examining the articles in WW and other sources. The article 'Hit the Delete Button' refers to Liani Reeves mentioning to other members of the governor's staff that the emails had been inadvertently stored on a state server. This conversation could only have been leaked by someone in the governor's office or DAS director's office. ETS staff wouldn't have known about this

      In the WW article 'What he left Behind' there are references to three e-mails: 1). Sept. 26, 2013 memo from Chief of Staff Curtis Robinhold to Hayes and Kitzhaber, 2). Nov. 29, 2013 from Hayes to Kitzhaber and Dec. 22, 2014 from Kitzhaber to Steve Janik, the attorney representing Hayes and Kitzhaber before the Ethics Commission.

      These could have come either from anyone who has access to the governor's email accounts (which sounds like it could be a number of people in the governor's office, to the pst files or the e-mail system(governor's office, DAS director's office or ETS).

8. 2/19

   a. Michael Rodgers calls Gary, Bryan, Marshall and I into his office and plays a voicemail message from Michael Jordan where Michael Jordan in the most inarticulate manner I have ever heard him speak said that he believed the request from Matt Shelby was to just ensure the security of the data.

   b. I shortly thereafter call Karen Johnson, leave a voicemail and then she shortly thereafter calls me back. [redacted]

   c. Karen then had Tim Smith call me. Tim really came across as the attorney for the DAS exec team. [redacted]

I am sending this to you because I don't really know where else to go. Several of us on the ETS management team feel vulnerable both legally and professionally. The DAS director's office does not provide direction in writing, and very limited direction verbally. The direction that does come verbally is reactive, telling us that something that we have done is wrong and they are reprimanding us for our actions or starting an investigation. No one from the director's office has been out to the SDC and this is one of those times when leadership is really needed.

Here are my recollections on the activities that have occurred since the original request from the governor's office to delete emails came in. I use italics below to indicate my thoughts.

1. 2/5-6 Request from the gov. office to delete emails from Gmail accounts that were forwarded (by ETS staff at the direction of the governor/governor staff several years ago) to his state email account. There is an ETS email chain with several levels of ETS staff and management saying we will not delete. So far as I am aware only the people on that email chain have electronic copies and I have never seen it either in paper or electronic form. I know Michael Rodgers said paper copies of that email where delivered to Michael Jordan and Matt Shelby. Someone who had access to this (governor's office, DAS director's office or ETS) leaked it.

2. 2/6 Michael Rodgers is running back and forth between here and DAS East with thumb drives with multiple versions of pst files containing various extracts of the Governor's state email account. He expresses his concerns to me related to discussions of Governor's office review to determine which emails would need to be deleted.

3. 2/9 Michael Rodgers tells me that Michael Jordan tells him that this has moved from unethical to illegal and has that MJ has a 11:30 appointment with the Oregon AG. I start to feel more comfortable that all of the discussion of deleting data may stop, but Michael Jordan never actually tells us not to delete anything.

4. 2/12

    a. We are in the management team meeting and get pulled out because the WW story breaks with the leaked email. Michael Rodgers is very concerned that the governor, the governor's office or DAS director's office is going to think he or someone in ETS leaked it. The surprising thing here is I ask him several days later and the subject of the leak was never brought up. I find this incredibly suspicious – why wouldn't this be a significant concern to the director's office unless they knew or suspected it came from DAS West or the Capitol.

    The other interesting thing here is the misspelling of names, Adrian, Michael Rodgers and Gary's names are both misspelled leading me to believe the person didn't receive an electronic copy of the email but either received a printed copy or had it read to them. While this doesn't rule out ETS staff, based on our predominate use of technology I really think if someone leaked it from here it would have been sent electronically. I also think it is interesting that the person who broke the story was Nigel Jaquiss. I really think if someone from ETS leaked it would have gone to the Oregonian or Statesman Journal. It breaking from Willamette Week feels to 'sophisticated' to have come from here.

    b. Bryan and I call Karen Johnson. [redacted]

    c. Quotes appear in news stories including one from Amy Wojiciki – 'said the request to delete emails was routine'. I didn't get this until Gary Krieger mentioned that it appears that when we produce pst files with emails for public record requests that Matt Shelby would route them to others including the governor's office and they would then tell Matt which ones to delete from what was sent out.

5. 2/17 I have a call with Lori Nordlien and Karen Johnson [redacted]

I later document this conversation and send it to Michael Rodgers. I also let him know that I think everything internally and coming/going externally should be documented.

6. 2/17 I am finishing a meeting when Michael Rodgers walks in, he asked me to proof an email to Michael Jordan that emails from govenor.kitzhaber@gmail.com and from jk.hundredthmeridian@gmail.com were still being forwarded to the governor's state account. During this time he then gets a call from Matt Shelby that he puts on speakerphone that the governor brought in his computer and that the governor would like us to shut off forwarding. Mike expresses his concern and Matt says both Matt and Liani will both be there and nothing will be done other than shutting off the forwarding.

7. 2/18

   a. I get an email from Bryan Nealy reviewing the meetings that happened on 2/7 with Mike Rodgers, Gary Krieger, Adrian Turpin, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie to carry out directions that came from MJ to Michael Rodgers and from Alex Petit to Shawn Dawson. The meeting details the leak of additional emails to the press, the fact that there are multiple copies of the pst files in different locations and presumably under the control of different people and outside of the control of ETS. Shawn and John then work with one of our email admins to lockdown access to the governor's account. Bryan reiterated not deleting anything without DoJ direction.

   b. Matt Shelby makes a request to delete pst files containing the governor's emails. An email chain starts with TSC staff, to Gary, to Michael Rodgers and then to MJ again containing the message that we will not delete anything.

   c. We get an email from Michael Jordan that informs us to expect OSP to investigate the leak. I wonder why it takes this long to be interested in the leak.

   d. I get a response from Karen Johnson [redacted]

   e. I spend time examining the articles in WW and other sources. The article 'Hit the Delete Button' refers to Liani Reeves mentioning to other members of the governor's staff that the emails had been inadvertently stored on a state server. This conversation could only have been leaked by someone in the governor's office or DAS director's office. ETS staff wouldn't have known about this

      In the WW article 'What he left Behind' there are references to three e-mails: 1). Sept. 26, 2013 memo from Chief of Staff Curtis Robinhold to Hayes and Kitzhaber, 2). Nov. 29, 2013 from Hayes to Kitzhaber and Dec. 22, 2014 from Kitzhaber to Steve Janik, the attorney representing Hayes and Kitzhaber before the Ethics Commission.

      These could have come either from anyone who has access to the governor's email accounts (which sounds like it could be a number of people in the governor's office, to the pst files or the e-mail system(governor's office, DAS director's office or ETS).

8. 2/19

a. Michael Rodgers calls Gary, Bryan, Marshall and I into his office and plays a voicemail message from Michael Jordan where Michael Jordan in the most inarticulate manner I have ever heard him speak said that he believed the request from Matt Shelby was to just ensure the security of the data.

b. I shortly thereafter call Karen Johnson, leave a voicemail and then she shortly thereafter calls me back [redacted]

c. Karen then had Tim Smith call me. [redacted]

d. I talked to Karen shortly thereafter. [redacted]

e. Marshall works with Gary to get a tech to secure the computers, laptops and phones in the governor's office.

f. Then at the end of the day when Wally Rogers, Gary, Al Grapoli, Bryan, Mike and I were sitting in 104 and Mike mentioned that Marshall got in trouble for talking to the US AG, that we are not to talk to the feds without DoJ being present and then when Sarah Jo's call came in to Mike and he stepped out to talk to her and tells me I am in trouble for talking to DoJ and that all of these (DoJ) requests need to be coordinated by the director's office.

9. 2/20

a. Michael Rodgers forwards the email message from Marshall recapping his conversation with the US AG and that we can't talk to the federal authorities without DoJ present.

b. Yaro (one of the Technology Support Center techs) goes to the governor's office in the morning to retrieve the computers, tablets and phones they secured and is met by Michael Jordan, Alex Petit and Darrin Kazlauskas and told that he is not going to retrieve the computers and that someone else will.

I talk to Marshall and find out that DAS EHRS is investigating both him and Marshall Wells for his securing the computers in the governor's office. We told Karen Johnson we didn't know exactly what we needed to do and DoJ never provided us guidance. As soon as Marshall is back in the office due to his training in security and his role as the DAS Security Manager, he knows what to do and that is to secure the computers used in the governor's office. Now he and Gary are investigating for doing what they should.

Marshall and Michael did talk to Sheila Potter on 2/20 and did discuss with her calling the US AG and securing the PCs, phones and tablets in the governor's office. She apparently thought their actions were ok but they end up reprimanded and investigated for doing so.

c. One of the OSP investigators mentions that the investigation is purely political. Very narrow scope focused specifically on the release of the initial email targeted to ETS and the TSC at the direction of Michael Jordan.

We don't know what to do or where to go for advice, direction and guidance. We aren't getting it from our agency leadership, we tried DoJ and were burned. The OSP investigation doesn't appear to contain the ability to actually investigate. I am concerned that we are out of options and we don't know what to do.

Here is the sent email from [redacted] Because this is a sent email with the replies, it does not have the attachment of the original email from Darin. Will send that version with attachment.

As an additional FYI from our discussion today, On Dec 8th when M Jordon, told me I could not return to ETS and must take a rotation at OHA to manage new Cover Oregon Project, I had asked why, he said he didnt want to go into it other than to say, he and Alex were working on a new business model for ETS(this 3 weeks after he, Sarahjo Chaplen and Barry Pack took me to dinner and told me I could come back anytime I was ready). That they(Alex/Mike J) were helping draft some new IT legislation, and they didnt think the person who had birthed the ETS would be able to manage the change. He said they would eventually change some of the existing leadership, probably not all. I had asked about Mike R. and he just smiled. Over the weekend, I told Mike what had happened and that it would be effective Monday for me but it was clear that it would soon be him and maybe others. Monday morning he went and asked Mike Jordon at 8am, about what he had told me. Mike Jordon "schooled' him on keeping boundaries.

I kept and have kept a very detailed file(emails, docs, notes) on all of this. Including a hand written thank you card from ex-gov thanking for my work on the "IT issue". Bottom line is Alex needed a way to move me (his current peer) out, so they could move ETS under his responsibility. His team 20 people, mine 219. If they moved all IT together while I was there, it would have made more sense to move the 20 that werent part of ETS into ETS, but then one executive manager would have to go. They needed to assure Gov that new project would go well with a strong state IT manager on the new project, so Michael Jordon forced the move of me. Alex had recently hired his own Security manager, Stephan Richards(from Cover Oregon), and also did not need to have two security managers when his and my group joined. Hence, why it was just Mike Rodgers and Marshall Wells (ETS Security Manager) versus the rest of managers who had been in that room when Alex had called and told them to delete the extra copies of the Kitzhaber emails. All the managers in the room did not think they should destroy the evidence(there perspective), not just Mike and Marshall. Keep in mind that the ETS managed all the statewide systems across the state (that is why I was a peer of the state CIO). The state CIO was not at the time the authority, the ETS Administrator was the person who was accountable for the security of all the state systems (not State CIO). However, I believe Alex got really mad that the managers would not do what he was asking, talked with Jordon and when all of ETS was executing the normal procedure in this type of event(although not very normal event, but equipment is seized routinely), securing the hardware, Alex and Jordon called it insubordination and had those two put on admin leave. And at very close time to starting criminal investigation, they asked for personnel investigation to prove insubordination.

I thought this might tie better why just Mike and Marshall versus why not other managers, and also give you information, maybe useful in your discussions with Mike R.

It is ironic that I am now managing the "new" project to move it into the SDC. On 400 servers.

Looked up cost comparison now.

Oracle provided is $3.5M a quarter. SDC on 400 servers - $1.5M a year (which includes initial purchase and setup of hardware, licensing, support & security). Typically once system up and running the extra environments to get it up, such as development, staging, etc go away or are optimized based on performance and the cost would be expected to drop about 35%.

Hi Mike. Thanks for the conversation today. Here are the two Official Misconduct statutes I discussed as requested.

§ 162.415[1]
Official misconduct in the first degree
(1) A public servant commits the crime of official misconduct in the first degree if with intent to obtain a benefit or to harm another:
(a) The public servant knowingly fails to perform a duty imposed upon the public servant by law or one clearly inherent in the nature of office; or
(b) The public servant knowingly performs an act constituting an unauthorized exercise in official duties.
(2) Official misconduct in the first degree is a Class A misdemeanor.

162.405[1]
Official misconduct in the second degree
(1) A public servant commits the crime of official misconduct in the second degree if the person knowingly violates any statute relating to the office of the person.
(2) Official misconduct in the second degree is a Class C misdemeanor. [1971 c.743 §214]

You may rest assured that I have information from a very reliable source as follows: (1) Rodgers does not posses any e-mails; (2) He he received directives from superiors to destroy e-mails which he believed showed corruption on the part of the governor and the first lady; (3) He belived to do so would make him guilty of crimes including obstruction of justice (4) He sought advice from others in personnel and elswhere in the state, but that advice was to go along with what his superiors requested. (5) He believed there was possibly a conspiracy to obstruct justice (6) He acted at all times in good faith and for the public good believing that the public needed to know about the corruption; and he did not want to be complicit in any coverup ; (6) that he received no monetary benefit or any other benefit whatsover from his conduct, but at all times acted in good faith.

What did Scott Bradford of the US Attorney Generals office ask Marshall to do?
Whom did he seek advice from before doing it and why?
Who's computers and phones was Marshall able to successfully lock up.
Who's computers and pbones did Marshall attempt to lock up but was stopped from doing so?
Who stopped him and why?
How long after he was stopped was he sent home for "personnel issues"?

Another item. I sent an email to my 3 new bosses the day after Mike Jordan resigned that I recommended they should bring Marshall and Mike back to work while the investigation continues.

Captain,

You asked me to let you know if something else stood out to me.

When Mike and Marshall shared at the managers meeting that they could not get any direction in writing from their superiors on what they were being told in regard to preserving evidence requested by the US Department of Justice, I reminded them both that no where in our job descriptions does it say one of our duties is to break the law. This is the type of conversation we had. They were very concerned about this.

I believe that Marshall was following his training and Mike had enough courage to back him up.

In the end it is about trust. I know and trust Marshall was doing what his training told him to. I know Mike enough to know he would support Marshall even though he thought there could be repercussions. Had we not had the meeting on that Thursday were they shared their concerns about not getting any direction in writing, even when they asked for it, and not to talk without state DOJ present, I would not have this little red flag going off. But they did and they were very concerned about what that meant.

It was hard to read in the paper that a reporter was told no one had been told not to talk to the US investigators. But you know Mike and Marshal documented it in writing that we were not to talk to US investigators without a state attorney present. I shared with you that Mike shared with us that he was told by Sarah jo in the call that interrupted our meeting that he needed to protect the organizion. What was that about?

I know you are in a difficult situation. And there are boundaries to what you are doing. I am glad you are sharing information with the other investigation. I hope they will interview us all too.

In the end, this is our Oregon. I want it to be one we are proud of again. Governor Brown shared that we need to change government for the better. This is more than one of those regular cases. Your work can help change Oregon for the better in this case.

I do not want to see two men, two IT managers doing their jobs, pay the price for a Con-woman and a Governor who fell for it all and became part of it.

You may find out why they were really sent home, as it relates to securing evidence. Make sure it is in your shared report. I know you got into this field because you wanted to make a difference. Be bold and keep turning over all stones. It's more than organizational politics, this one looks to be a difference maker about who we are as a government. Illinois style of government is not our style in Oregon I hope.

You said you are investigating a crime of violating a state policy with the intent to benefit or harm another.If that is all it is and there is no larger crime obstructing justice, then I am truly relieved.

Wally

We're putting the file in a subdirectory to which no one will be given permission. My understanding is that two of the end users already deleted the file after looking at it. That leaves on Matt Shelby.

He indicated that the files should stay in place, but that we may disconnect them from the end users' Outlook and set permissions so that they might not be opened. That along with the logging of the Varonis system will enable us to assure that the files have not been tampered with.

Mike, I understand that John and Gary will be meeting Liani Reeves and Matt Shelby at 1:00. John will take a look at whatever other accounts they request to check for rules forwarding their content to either the governor. Kitzhaber@gmail account or to the generic entss mailbox.

It is in room 254, the ceremonial office on the 2nd floor of the Capital.

Gary, Matt Shelby called Scot yesterday requesting he delete from Liani, Amy, and Matt's home folders the pst file created from the export of the MJOJKT mailbox. Looking for guidance, please.

Subject: Answers to questions

Capt Davie,
You asked me a series of questions the other day. Sorry it took me so long to get the info for you.

Correction. That would be Wednesday, February 18, 2015. Sherry

You asked what day Mike Rodgers first made his statement/allegation to Sherry Carter. Also what day I started my investigation and what day Mike Rodgers was spoken too by the investigating officer.

Mike Rodgers made his claim to Sherry Carter on 10 Feb 2015; Notes from Sherry Carter, "Mr. Rodgers explained that he was asked by Michael Jordan to delete all emails from the Governor's personal email accounts that are forwarded to the Governor's office. He explained that what he was being asked to do was illegal."

I initiated the investigation on 11 February 2015 asking ODOT if they could task Sherry Lauer to do an investigation for us looking in to this allegation.
On 13 February 2015, Clyde Saiki asked Sherry Lauer to perform the investigation for us.
Sherry Lauer in the scope of her investigation talked to Mike Rodgers on 18 February 2015 at about 1300.

I think the investigation has either finished up or is about to. Tessa Sugahara over at DOJ would be able to let you know if it is done or not yet.

I hope this answers all your questions,

K-9

Matt, I have exported all emails from Jan 1 2011 to present from the MJO JKT email account. It is located in your home folder and is named MJOJKT.pst. I have tested access to it and can see all of the emails. Once attached to the file, you will need to look under the Archive Manager folder in that structure to see the emails. If you need assistance accessing the data, please let me know. Thank you.

I have a call in to an attorney. That makes my anxiety spike.

HB 3099 introduced yesterday. Interesting it doesn't state at the request of DAS
2/24, 11:53a
Maybe I should buy a copy of the O today

Yes. Obviously Nigel has lots of emails.
2/25, 12:44p
Interesting posts on the Oregonian article too. Someone going by "outdoorguy" claims that WW said the data center was the source of the leak. Of course he can't say who said it when other posters asked... I noticed that "his" posts are only for

Also look at KATU Web site and the interpretation made about whistleblower law.

As a security guy, I can say that analyzing the posts on the o has led to interesting conclusions.

I figure MJ let himself be interviewed to get back into good graces with Gov Brown. Hopefully when you discuss this with an attorney that they can offer an effective strategy

Criminal probe begun into leak of Kitzhaber emails

By Nick Budnick and Laura Gunderson
The Oregonian/OregonLive

A top official in Gov. Kate Brown's administration has launched a criminal investigation aimed at finding the person who leaked former Gov. John Kitzhaber's personal emails.

Meanwhile, two high-ranking state managers were placed on administrative leave Friday pending a personnel investigation that is separate from the criminal one. One, Michael Rodgers, is the same manager who blocked a well-publicized effort by Kitzhaber's staff to delete copies of his personal emails stored in state archives.

Jordan requested investigation

Rodgers is the interim director of the state data center that archives state emails. Marshall Wells, the center's technical engineering and security manager, was also placed on leave. State officials wouldn't explain why the two are on leave or whether it concerns the leak, or their participation in the department's response to the leak.

Many sensitive state emails have leaked over the years, but none of the leaks has sparked a known criminal inquiry. Probably the worst the leaker could face is a relatively minor criminal charge: second-degree official misconduct, a misdemeanor.

Michael Jordan, director of the state Department of Administrative Services, disclosed the investigation in an email to agency employees last Wednesday. He stated he'd requested that the Oregon State Police investigate, and to expect to see investigators on-site.

"The OSP investigation was initiated by Michael Jordan," DAS spokesman Matt Shelby said. He added that to the best of his knowledge, Brown did not direct Jordan to do so. Jordan called Oregon State Police Sergeant

I made the mistake of reading the reader comments. Many of them immediately assume we are guilty of leaking emails.

Subject: FW: Public records request
Importance: High

Hello,

Can I get some help with the first part of the request below? Based on the wording of the request, I'd like to see all Michael Jordan emails that are to, from, or include a CC or mention of Cylvia Hayes. In addition, I need any attachments related to the emails.

The date range for the request is Jan. 1 2013 to Jan. 1 2015.

Many thanks,
Matt

Subject: Public records request

Hi Matt—

Under Oregon's public records law, I am seeking the following information:

1. Electronic copies of any emails between Michael Jordan and Cylvia Hayes; any Jordan email on which Cylvia Hayes was copied; any Hayes email on which Jordan was copied; any Jordan email in which Hayes was mentioned and all attachments to any of the forgoing emails. In effect, I'm asking you to search Michael Jordan's emails for any mention of Cylvia Hayes. The time period I'm asking you to search is Jan. 1 2013 to Jan. 1 2015.

2. I'm seeking information about any state payments made to any of the following entities from Jan. 1 2013 to Jan 1 2015: Demos (a New York non-profit); Resource Media (of Seattle) and The Energy Foundation of San Francisco.

Please let me know if anything about my request is unclear and thanks for your help.

Governor Email Requests

October Timeline

Governor Email Requests

Friday February 5th, 2015

- At around 6:45 I was checking my email before work and noticed an email from Gary Kreiger Titled Governor's email account. I opened and read the email.
- Gary wanted to me discuss a request to delete email from the governors email archive that had escalated to him. He was not willing to make that decision without talking to me.
- I called Shawn Wagoner since he is our most experienced manager when it comes to email and had escalated the request to delete to Gary.
- I contacted Gary and wanted additional information so he was headed to TSC see if he could learn more about who had made the request.
- I decided that I wanted to discuss this with Michael Jordan but needed to understand more about the request so I headed to the Revenue building where TSC is located.
- I had been told to talk to Tracy Osburn since he originated the email about the request to delete the governor's email.
- Tracy was at DAS West assisting with a move so we called him. Tracy had been contacted by Jan who had been told by Liani to delete the emails from a user named hundrethmeridian@att.net (Cylvia Hayes account).
- I then went to DAS West to talk to Michael Jordan. I met with Michael Jordan at around 8:30.
- I explained the request that had been made and he said he needed to walk across the street to talk with the Governor's office about the request. I questioned the legality and he said that was the Governor's call.
- I explained that even if we deleted the emails from the archive, there were backups of the database and that the PST files that were created if saved on a file server would have been backed up as well.
- I told him that I would need something in writing in order to proceed because I had serious concerns. He seemed agitated by the request and dismissed me.
- At 11:21 Matt Shelby and Michael Jordan called me to request that I provide him with a PST file that contained all of the emails from hundrethmeridian@att.net contained within the governor's email account (MJO.JKT@oregon.gov).
- Matt called back at 11:30 to confirm I was bring the files over and delivering them to him.
- I had Vahan create the PST which contained about 2,400 emails and put it on a thumb drive.
- I had a 1:00 PM meeting downtown to discuss the Voice service contract project and Matt Shelby stopped by at around 1:30 and picked up the thumb drive.
- After the meeting I stopped by Matt's desk and asked him if he needed anything else, he said that thumb drive only had one of the addresses they needed pulled, there was another address like above that started the tk.hhundrethmeridian@att.net.
- I went back to ETS and had Vahan pull another PST with this information, this PST had approximately 3,500 emails on it.
- I dropped this thumb drive off to Matt at around 4:30. I asked Matt what would happen next. He told me that he would walk this thumb drive over to the Governor's office like he had the other and that Mike Bonetto and Liani Reeves would review the emails over the weekend and mark the ones that were to be deleted and that I would be provided a list to delete. I was a little shocked by this and was told that Liani was the governor's counsel and could make that call on what was personal and what was public record.

- I then went home,

Monday February 9, 2015

- At 8:12 I was called by Richelle (Michael Jordan's admin) and told to get all the staff that knew about the request together for a meeting with Michael.
- At 8:25 she called back and said that only I was needed to meet with Michael.
- I scheduled a meeting with Michael at 9:30
- Michael seemed very happy to see me
- He told me that he was limiting the conversation to just me, so as not to panic other people.
- He wanted to know who knew, so I told him the names I knew but committed to send him a complete list.
    - Michael Rodgers
    - Gary Kreiger
    - Shawn Wagoner
    - Adrian Turpin
    - Vahan Michaelian
    - Ben Garvey
    - Tracy Osburn
    - Brian Tipsword
- He said that he believe that this had become more than an ethics issue and that there could be legal consequences.
- He said that the Governor had decided to review the emails himself and that could take a long time.
- He did not want ETS to participate in evidence tampering.
- He was going to the AG and asking that he be allowed to hire legal counsel outside of the AG since there would be a conflict of interest similar to Cover Oregon and that he and the others involved from ETS would be represented at the states expense.

Thursday February 12, 2015

- At around 2:30 I got a text from Shawn Wagoner
- Met with Bryan Nealy, Darin Rand, Shawn Wagoner and Adrian Turpin to try and figure out how this made the paper. Everyone agreed that the ETS staff had done the right thing, but it was still concerning.
- We talked through how many people had access to the email system, and if there was logging to see if they could determine who had access to what. It appears that there are between 60 and 100 people that have elevated rights to the system.
- Darin and Bryan sought advice from the Karen Johnson downtown (see email)
- I went downtown to the W&M debrief.
- After the meeting I asked Barry Pack what to do and he pated me on the arm and said hang in there.
- Matt Shelby said that the Govs office was still trying to determine what emails need to be deleted and grinned.

Sunday February 15th, 2015

- Went to W&M prep meeting. At the end Michael Jordan asked me to check if email was still going into the Gov's State of Oregon account on Tuesday and told me that we would need a tech to work on his computer. I did not like the idea of any of our staff working on the governor's personal equipment. They asked how long email had been flowing into that account and I told him there are tickets that go back to 2011 to setup email forwarding. Michael said that TSC staff worked on his personal phone email.

Tuesday February 17, 2015

- I sent Michael an email that said email was still coming into that account from two addresses. He called me and wanted to know which addresses they were and reiterated that we would need to help the governor fix the problem. He seemed irritated with me, I sent him a follow-up email.
- I told TSC staff that were involved with stopping the deleting and told them that everyone had done the right thing.
- I met with the TSC staff at 9:30 and told them that information had been subpoenaed and not them personally, that if they wanted to talk to them they would be subpoenaed (turns out that when Tracy went home 2 FBI agents were waiting for him, they did not seem to give him an option from what I have heard and required a statement). I encouraged them to write everything down because it could be a long time before anyone actually talked to them.
- Matt Shelby called me and asked that I dispatch someone to help stop email from being forwarded to the State of Oregon account from the Gov's personal account. I asked for it in writing and he did not feel that was necessary. I worked with Adrian and Gary to have Gary go along with John Darnville to Meet Matt and Laini to kill the forwading, I wanted them all present.
- They did not seemed concerned.
- I went to the CUB planning meeting downtown and which was already over since I had read my calendar wrong and since Sarah Jo had cancelled the Service Leaders meeting and I was thrown off.
- I went to the W&M recap Meeting and after about 15 minutes was called out by Sarah Jo to meet with Michael. Michael told me that we needed to secure the email system since someone had given Nigel private information and that he was doing a news story on it and that Shawn Dawson and someone from ESO would be meeting me at the SDC in 30 minutes. I asked him what he meant by secure since the data all sits in the archive manager he said that it was all over his head and he did not understand what I was asking. He said they were seeking a DOJ opinion on if this was a criminal issue or a HR Policy issue and he would let me know, but at this time we were to limit access to the gov"s email.
- Shawn showed up and we talked with Bryan Nealy, Gary Kreiger, Adrian Turpin, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie about how to secure the data and that there were several PST files given to Matt Shelby and the Govs office that already contained the gov's email.
- Shawn and John then worked with Alex Arizala to make is so no one could access the MJO email account and that that the rights for all staff who could access the Archive was revoked until we were told how to proceed. At this time we cannot process any Public Information requests until this resolved.

(S) = MATT SHELBY
(W) = Marshall Wells
MJ = MIKE JORDAN
DR = Dann Rand

2^22/pm RECORDING STARTED

- BACKGROUND
  - TEAM LEAD
    - TECHNICAL SUPPORT CENTER (TSC)
    - 18 MONTHS
  - DAS INFORMATION SECURITY LEAD WORKER FOR FIELD TECHNICIANS
  - 1996 DAS → PRESENT

- 02/05/15 6^52/pm
  "THE EMAIL" FROM (T)
  - (A) CHECKED HIS EMAIL AFTER DINNER. SAW EMAIL FROM (T). REALIZED IT WAS UNUSUAL.
  - (A) SENT IT TO GARY KREIGER

Prior to email
- WORKED ON FULFILLING THE PRR FROM (S)
- DROPPED pst to (S)

02/06/15

- (A) SPOKE WITH (T) ABOUT EMAIL
[(T) SENTO EMAIL TO THE "LEADERSHIP TEAM" AND SHAWN WAGONER.]

- (A) SAID (T) TOLD HIM CALL CAME FROM JAN Murdock.

- (A) DOES NOT REMEMBER MUCH ABOUT THE CONVERSATION HE HAD WITH (T) ABOUT "THE EMAIL" (-VERY LITTLE RECOLLECTION-)

* LATER (A) SAID HE PUT THIS ISSUE TOGETHER
* REMEMBERED PREVIOUS CONVERSATIONS ABOUT (S) REQUESTING EMAILS. A PST CREATED.

#1d - (A) DID NOT FORWARD "THE EMAIL"
#1e - (A) DID NOT "bcc" "THE EMAIL"
#1f - yes on ? < 03/02/15 03/03/15 WHEN I SHOWED my ATTORNEY
#1g-h - no - but maybe to my partner Lisa.

(3)

- HOW DID YOU FEEL ABOUT THE REQUEST FROM ⑥ OFFICE TO DELETE EMAIL
  - NOT SURPRISED
  - ALOT OF PEOPLE DO NOT UNDERSTAND ABOUT PUBLIC RECORDS
  - I DID NOT FEEL NAUSA OR DISCUSSED
  - I THOUGHT " THIS IS NOT A DECISION WE CAN MAKE"

- DID YOU FEEL THE REQUEST WAS AN EFFORT TO HIDE SOMETHING OR TO JUST SEPERATE PRIVATE FROM PUBLIC ?
  - I DONT RECALL
  - I THINK IT WAS THAT OTHER EMAIL ADDRESSES HAD BEEN FORWARDED TO THE BOX ON ARCHIVE.

- THE PST CREATED FOR ⑤

- ON 02/04/15

EMAIL ABOUT 01/09/15 REQUEST FROM NICK TO ⑥ OFFICE. ⑤ SENT EMAIL TO ⑧. ⑧ WENT TO SHAWN WAGONER SHAWN SAID IT WAS A STANDARD REQUEST.

(A) SAW THE EMAIL CHAIN AND THOUGHT AMY W's REPLY WAS INTERESTING.
- IT IS FUNDAMENTALLY A CORRECT ANSWER.
- 2011 A TICKET WAS MADE FOR EMAILS
- 2011 (6) PERSONAL LAPTOP WAS ALSO SET UP TO ACCESS EMAIL ACCOUNTS.

02/05/15

SHOWN • (T) • (A) • Brian ("we" called (S) TOLD HIM PROCESS. "WE" EXPORTED CONTENTS TO (S) HOME DRIVE. → Scot Conner

ANOTHER REQUEST - (S) CALLED SCOT PUT PST ON Liani's and Amy's DRIVE.

02/05/15 MID AFTERNOON

- MISSED CALL FROM (S) ON (A)'s PHONE
- (A) CALLED (S) BACK
- (S) TOLD me Scot put the pst on Liani's and Amy's drives

"Why" - I THINK (S) LOOKED AT THE pst and saw the emails on it.

(5)

AT SOME POINT (K) TOLD ME pst's WERE CREATED AND PUT ON FLASH DRIVES.

↳ (A) NOW KNOWS THOSE pst's WERE a subset of the MJOJKT.pst

- MJOJKT pst and the other pst's may have been put on the server in TSC (T-Cept) Amy's, Liani's and (S) home drives.

  ↳ (A) THINKS Scot told him he used the T-Cept box to do the MJOJKT.pst

- Is it a common place to put pst's on the T-Cept Server when staff have been assigned a PRR
  - "may be the process"

- Scot, (A), (T), Brian & Shawn Wagner may all have known we exported the contents of the (6) email archive box.

02/12/15

AFTER WWEEK ARTICLE WAS THERE DISCUSSIONS ABOUT THE pst that contained the © personal emails. ?

↳ morning meeting on Monday or Tuesday after the WWEEK article not a big deal

- WHEN Ⓐ SAW THE ARTICLE HE NOTICED HIS NAME WAS SPELLED WRONG, SO Ⓐ THOUGHT THE METHOD WAS A TELEPHONE CALL
  - Ⓐ's FIRST NAME MISSPELLED
  - TRACY "she"

02/18/15

- WHEN Ⓐ SAW ARTICLE ON 02/18/15 HE THEN THOUGHT THEY GOT SOME EMAILS.

How COULD a pst get released out of ~~EES~~/SDC/TSC

- TSC EMPLOYEES HAVE ACCESS THROUGH THEIR RIGHTS
  - TERRY Kirkpatrick • Scot Conner • Tony

(7)

→ Personal Belief

- DID NOT COME FROM TSC
- I LIKE TO THINK IT DID NOT COME FROM ETS/SDC

- HAVE SEEN SIMILAR REQUESTS FROM OTHERS FOR PRR
  LIANI WILL MAKE REQUESTS AND ASK THAT WE PLACE ON STEVEN POWERS OR JEN ANDREWS' DRIVES

- DID YOU OPEN OR ACCESS THAT FILE
  - NO

- DO YOU KNOW ANYONE IN TSC
  - NO

- DO YOU KNOW OF ANY COPIES THAT WERE MADE OF MJ0JKT
  - NO, I DO NOT

- Anyway to find out access to that pst on that server.
  - logs

Captain,

You asked me to let you know if something else stood out to me.

When Mike and Marshall shared at the managers meeting that they could not get any direction in writing from their superiors on what they were being told in regard to preserving evidence requested by the US Department of Justice, I reminded them both that no where in our job descriptions does it say one of our duties is to break the law. This is the type of conversation we had. They were very concerned about this.

I believe that Marshall was following his training and Mike had enough courage to back him up.

In the end it is about trust. I know and trust Marshall was doing what his training told him to. I know Mike enough to know he would support Marshall even though he thought there could be repercussions. Had we not had the meeting on that Thursday were they shared their concerns about not getting any direction in writing, even when they asked for it, and not to talk without state DOJ present, I would not have this little red flag going off. But they did and they were very concerned about what that meant.

It was hard to read in the paper that a reporter was told no one had been told not to talk to the US investigators. But you know Mike and Marshal documented it in writing that we were not to talk to US investigators without a state attorney present. I shared with you that Mike shared with us that he was told by Sarah jo in the call that interrupted our meeting that he needed to protect the organizion. What was that about?

I know you are in a difficult situation. And there are boundaries to what you are doing. I am glad you are sharing information with the other investigation. I hope they will interview us all too.

In the end, this is our Oregon. I want it to be one we are proud of again. Governor Brown shared that we need to change government for the better. This is more than one of those regular cases. Your work can help change Oregon for the better in this case.

I do not want to see two men, two IT managers doing their jobs, pay the price for a Con-woman and a Governor who fell for it all and became part of it.

You may find out why they were really sent home, as it relates to securing evidence. Make sure it is in your shared report. I know you got into this field because you wanted to make a difference. Be bold and keep turning over all stones. It's more than organizational politics, this one looks to be a difference maker about who we are as a government. Illinois style of government is not our style in Oregon I hope.

You said you are investigating a crime of violating a state policy with the intent to benefit or harm another.If that is all it is and there is no larger crime obstructing justice, then I am truly relieved.

I do not know the answers but I hope you do and run them to ground.

What did Scott Bradford of the US Attorney Generals office ask Marshall to do?
Whom did he seek advice from before doing it and why?
Who's computers and phones was Marshall able to successfully lock up.
Who's computers and phones did Marshall attempt to lock up but was stopped from doing so?
Who stopped him and why?
How long after he was stopped was he sent home for "personnel issues"?

Another item. I sent an email to my 3 new bosses the day after Mike Jordan resigned that I recommended they should bring Marshall and Mike back to work while the investigation continues.

→ Was not keeping up on email but MR called me on 02/15/15.

- "The Emails"
  - Was involved with conversations about deleting emails
  - saw the email MR - printed it and handed it to me.
  - MR thought deleting emails would be "tampering with evidence."
  - MR did not know that the emails

- request really didn't matter is what I told MR.

- MR printed the email on Feb. 6, 2015 MR showed me. He was talking it down to MJ.
  - in MR's office - he called me in
  - door closed
  - very concerned
  - frustrated not getting direction from his management.
  - felt Matt Shelby was pushing to delete emails.

  - he was trying to get MJ to give him direction.

"I wasn't concerned because we have backups" —

  - MR asked me to stand by the printer so I could bring it to him. took a while for it to arrive
  - Did you send it to another printer? — that printer is my default.

(5)

- MR said (S) was telling him to delete emails

- Was MR upset about (S)'s request
  - he was more upset he was not being given direction from MJ or Sarah Jo

- Two people told (W)
  - Mike Rodgers
  - Julie Bozzi

  - Things are not to be emailed to Mike Jordan. MJ directed his subordants to email

- MR was asking (V) questions about
  (S) wanted an extract of the emails on a PST file
  - H drive
  - Liam Reeves
  - Amy W

  } they wanted to review the emails to see what are personal emails of the governor.

- Instead MR got them on a thumb drive to take them over to

- different extracts done by (V) and some done by TSC employees.

- What did MR say about the creation of the PST's

  - spoke with (V) later about it.

  - MR told me he was taking the thumb drive to take downtown.

- 02/06/15 - 5:00pm or so (W) left work.

- MR was gone when I left work
- When I left, just prior I had sat down and talked to (K). Delivered to Matt Shelby

- I cannot create pst.

- I did not touch the thumb drive.

- Wells told him "it could be Tampering With Evidence"

① Could we tell if someone had given themselves access to a mailbox we were talking about the system and email capabilities.

② " " " " " had access to the archives and what they looked for.

→ Asked this question 02/19/15.

- (W) asked (V) to look into some things before I left on vacation on 02/11/15. and I asked him several questions when I returned.

- (V) knew that at the Governors request the personal emails were going in to the system.

- we checked active directory logs and learned that no one had logged into MJOSKT.

- Why the questions before you left about the email accounts.

- Email deleted from our system in the past. I thought that had never happened.

MR asked me if it was feasible to know if someone could look at someone's account.

Can't remember if MR asked this prior to or after vacation.
- But think it was prior

- While on vacation when did you know about the leak of "The Email" from Tracy Osburn.

02/13/15 at dinner – my brother said your governor just resigned.

- 02/14/15 ~~that night~~ I looked on my phone in the Wweek article.

- I did not have my work phone with me on vacation

From: RAND Darin * DAS
Sent: Friday, February 20, 2015 3:19 PM
To: LAUER Sherry L
Subject: Concerns

I am sending this to you because I don't really know where else to go. Several of us on the ETS management team feel vulnerable both legally and professionally. The DAS director's office does not provide direction in writing, and very limited direction verbally. The direction that does come verbally is reactive, telling us that something that we have done is wrong and they are reprimanding us for our actions or starting an investigation. No one from the director's office has been out to the SDC and this is one of those times when leadership is really needed.

Here are my recollections on the activities that have occurred since the original request from the governor's office to delete emails came in. I use italics below to indicate my thoughts.

1. 2/5-6 Request from the gov. office to delete emails from Gmail accounts that were forwarded (by ETS staff at the direction of the governor/governor staff several years ago) to his state email account. There is an ETS email chain with several levels of ETS staff and management saying we will not delete. So far as I am aware only the people on that email chain have electronic copies and I have never seen it either in paper or electronic form. I know Michael Rodgers said paper copies of that email where delivered to Michael Jordan and Matt Shelby. Someone who had access to this (governor's office, DAS director's office or ETS) leaked it.
2. 2/6 Michael Rodgers is running back and forth between here and DAS East with thumb drives with multiple versions of pst files containing various extracts of the Governor's state email account. He expresses his concerns to me related to discussions of Governor's office review to determine which emails would need to be deleted.
3. 2/9 Michael Rodgers tells me that Michael Jordan tells him that this has moved from unethical to illegal and has that MJ has a 11:30 appointment with the Oregon AG. I start to feel more comfortable that all of the discussion of deleting data may stop, but Michael Jordan never actually tells us not to delete anything.
4. 2/12

    a. We are in the management team meeting and get pulled out because the WW story breaks with the leaked email. Michael Rodgers is very concerned that the governor, the governor's office or DAS director's office is going to think he or someone in ETS leaked it. The surprising thing here is I ask him several days later and the subject of the leak was never brought up. I find this incredibly suspicious – why wouldn't this be a significant concern to the director's office unless they knew or suspected it came from DAS West or the Capitol.

    The other interesting thing here is the misspelling of names, Adrian, Michael Rodgers and Gary's names are both misspelled leading me to believe the person didn't receive an electronic copy of the email but either received a printed copy or had it read to them. While this doesn't rule out ETS staff, based on our predominate use of technology I really think if someone leaked it from here it would have been sent

- Nigiel leaks
  — not out of ETS

- Rand Email

- MJ gave thumb drive to Kate Brown.
  if MJ became Sec of State.
  — that didn't happen —

People were really mad about what Cylvia Hayes had been doing at the Governor's office

Cover Oregon
↳ JB heard from Alex Pettit that he needed to leave Cover Oregon. JB suggested to Alex to use her 50% ETS and 50% Cover Oregon

- Providing Mike Rodgers guidance
- Dec 2014 - Rotated over to OHA.
  - MR would occassionally call for guidance and so would other employees from ETS.
  - picking JB's brain for history / historical information

- OHA position
  - Recruited by OHA - reached an insure with the recruitment because we could not agree on salary.
  - Went to MJ and he basically told me I could not go back to ETS. The project is very important to the Governor and it needs to be a success.

- MJ created a position / Job rotation at OHA
- MJ kept current salary.
- MJ made me sign a job rotation that will severe my employment with DAS at end of 2015.

- walking at lunch with Alan Hammonds

- 02/12/15
  - Willamette Week Artice "The Email"
    - Tracy Osburn email

→ - 02/12/16 * (1st Knowledge of it)
  - Managers Meeting
  - Knew Something had happened
    Someone came in and spoke with MR
  - MR motioned me out of room - he looked worn
  - went to a conference room MR told me about the request to remove emails

- Read the article - later that day

→ - MR expressed he was worried DAS leadership would think he leaked it
  - Did MR mention any ideas of what happene
    "No"

- I was a third party to what was going on.
  - I thought our folks did the right thing about not deleting records
- Anyone else seem worried about the email / article
  - No

- Over the following weeks - multiple discussions with my peers about how to manager the situation occurred. Very fluid alot happened. I felt it was my job to keep everyone calm. Keep people from freaking out.

- Pst files
  - Heard from MR that he was requested to create a pst file of the governors email. Put them on a temporary flash drive and take them to someone.
  - MR worked with (V). (V) created the pst file.
  - Created one took to Matt Shelby
  - Not enough emails so (V) created a second flash drive

- I was told they went to Matt Shilby and MJ
- I was told Ⓥ deleted the pst's off his computer after he created them

- 02/18/15

Documented my actions from 02/17/15

Shawn Dawson & John Ritchie

- Alex Pettit told them to go to ETS to attempt to secure the emails
- At the same time MR got similar direction from MJ

- We met in MR's office to disuss

- What was the concern on the 17th (?)

The story came out 02/18/15 @ 12:01am

(4) When they came on the 17th primary [redacted] the email system

I wanted to make sure everyone understood the pst's were already out there "had left the building."

- MR : (T) - John Ritchie
- (K) : Shawn Dawson - Bryan Neely

We had to figure out ~~out~~ how to do what Alex Pettit and MJ were asking us what to do.

I told the guys we needed to focus on email / ETS sys tems

This occurred right ~~out~~ at the end of the day at about 4:55/pm

Darin Rand and I were not directly involved We are two executive leaders of ETS, but we were not directly involved. They were under a lot of stress.

Darrin Rand and I were trying to document what was occurring. We asked DOJ Karen Johnson some different questions / [redacted]

(5)

- Stay far enough away, but protect ETS.

- We would like to exclude Mike Rodgers.
  - He acted someone nervous on the Tracy Osburn issue
  - how was he acting on 02/17/15
    - nothing
  - no one was acting abnormal
    - everyone was under an extreme amount of stress
    - everyone was distraught and nervous.
- We could never get anything but verbal orders from those above us. We were trying to protect ourselves by documenting. Everyone was distraught and still are. Alot was happening.

Rand Email 02/20/16

- Prior to sending email Dan had a meeting

(6)
- BN
- (K)
- Rand
- MR
- (W)

- the email was to document what was occurring. We felt someone not involved should be notified.

- I helped edit the email
- There were opinions in the email. I told Darrin Some things are speculation. I felt he should take some of that out.

- Group Meeting 02/20/15
  - everyone got a copy of a version of "Rand Email"
  - "I shredded my copy" I don't know what happened to the rest of the copies. I didn't pay attention to what they did
  - General consensus that the strategy to send the email we felt pretty vulnerable as a management group
    - Independent "HR" person
  - Darrin went back to his office to make changes to email.

- Meeting broke up prior to HR arriving
- Saw HR folks walk-in
- Darrin hit "send" on the email
- I don't think Rand knew they were even here.

- Admin Leave
  Brief conversation with (W) in the parking lot. Appeared "lost" so I went out to talk to him. MR came out. I received a text saying K-9 was looking for me.

- 02/20/15 - shared a couple texts with MR that night only.

- Themes in how "Rand Email" was released
  - Dont Know
  - Out of context from everything else
  - Seems like there could be different actors
    - Different Categories of things happening

- After going on admin leave
  - ME said not drinking with (W) Julie Bozzi.
    - Not add that Julie Bozzi would be there

- Do talk to Julie occasionally
  - we have talked a little bit about this

- That weekend I said "Hi" to him to check-in to see if he was surviving. He was out walking his dogs.

02/22/15

- Rand Email

We also agree different sources:

- someone may have felt they needed to protect themselves
- "whistle blower"

- Any info

I honestly don't have information less than a year to retire

I am not worried about this

Any Questions

Governor Email Requests

Friday February 5th, 2015

- At around 6:45 I was checking my email before work and noticed an email from Gary Kreiger Titled Governor's email account. I opened and read the email.
- Gary wanted to me discuss a request to delete email from the governors email archive that had escalated to him. He was not willing to make that decision without talking to me.
- I called Shawn Wagoner since he is our most experienced manager when it comes to email and had escalated the request to delete to Gary.
- I contacted Gary and wanted additional information so he was headed to TSC see if he could learn more about who had made the request.
- I decided that I wanted to discuss this with Michael Jordan but needed to understand more about the request so I headed to the Revenue building where TSC is located.
- I had been told to talk to Tracy Osburn since he originated the email about the request to delete the governor's email.
- Tracy was at DAS West assisting with a move so we called him. Tracy had been contacted by Jan who had been told by Liani to delete the emails from a user named hundrethmeridian@att.net (Cylvia Hayes account).
- I then went to DAS West to talk to Michael Jordan. I met with Michael Jordan at around 8:30.
- I explained the request that had been made and he said he needed to walk across the street to talk with the Governor's office about the request. I questioned the legality and he said that was the Governor's call.
- I explained that even if we deleted the emails from the archive, there were backups of the database and that the PST files that were created if saved on a file server would have been backed up as well.
- I told him that I would need something in writing in order to proceed because I had serious concerns. He seemed agitated by the request and dismissed me.
- At 11:21 Matt Shelby and Michael Jordan called me to request that I provide him with a PST file that contained all of the emails from hundrethmeridian@att.net contained within the governor's email account (MJO.JKT@oregon.gov).
- Matt called back at 11:30 to confirm I was bring the files over and delivering them to him.
- I had Vahan create the PST which contained about 2,400 emails and put it on a thumb drive.
- I had a 1:00 PM meeting downtown to discuss the Voice service contract project and Matt Shelby stopped by at around 1:30 and picked up the thumb drive.
- After the meeting I stopped by Matt's desk and asked him if he needed anything else, he said that thumb drive only had one of the addresses they needed pulled, there was another address like above that started the tk.hhundrethmeridian@att.net.
- I went back to ETS and had Vahan pull another PST with this information, this PST had approximately 3,500 emails on it.
- I dropped this thumb drive off to Matt at around 4:30. I asked Matt what would happen next. He told me that he would walk this thumb drive over to the Governor's office like he had the other and that Mike Bonetto and Liani Reeves would review the emails over the weekend and mark the ones that were to be deleted and that I would be provided a list to delete. I was a little shocked by this and was told that Liani was the governor's counsel and could make that call on what was personal and what was public record.

- I then went home,

Monday February 9, 2015

- At 8:12 I was called by Richelle (Michael Jordan's admin) and told to get all the staff that knew about the request together for a meeting with Michael.
- At 8:25 she called back and said that only I was needed to meet with Michael.
- I scheduled a meeting with Michael at 9:30
- Michael seemed very happy to see me
- He told me that he was limiting the conversation to just me, so as not to panic other people.
- He wanted to know who knew, so I told him the names I knew but committed to send him a complete list.
    - Michael Rodgers
    - Gary Kreiger
    - Shawn Wagoner
    - Adrian Turpin
    - Vahan Michaelian
    - Ben Garvey
    - Tracy Osburn
    - Brian Tipsword
- He said that he believe that this had become more than an ethics issue and that there could be legal consequences.
- He said that the Governor had decided to review the emails himself and that could take a long time.
- He did not want ETS to participate in evidence tampering.
- He was going to the AG [redacted]

Thursday February 12, 2015

- At around 2:30 I got a text from Shawn Wagoner
- Met with Bryan Nealy, Darin Rand, Shawn Wagoner and Adrian Turpin to try and figure out how this made the paper. Everyone agreed that the ETS staff had done the right thing, but it was still concerning.
- We talked through how many people had access to the email system, and if there was logging to see if they could determine who had access to what. It appears that there are between 60 and 100 people that have elevated rights to the system.
- Darin and Bryan sought advice from the Karen Johnson downtown (see email)
- I went downtown to the W&M debrief.
- After the meeting I asked Barry Pack what to do and he pated me on the arm and said hang in there.
- Matt Shelby said that the Govs office was still trying to determine what emails need to be deleted and grinned.

Sunday February 15th, 2015

- Went to W&M prep meeting. At the end Michael Jordan asked me to check if email was still going into the Gov's State of Oregon account on Tuesday and told me that we would need a tech to work on his computer. I did not like the idea of any of our staff working on the governor's personal equipment. They asked how long email had been flowing into that account and I told him there are tickets that go back to 2011 to setup email forwarding. Michael said that TSC staff worked on his personal phone email.

Tuesday February 17, 2015

- I sent Michael an email that said email was still coming into that account from two addresses. He called me and wanted to know which addresses they were and reiterated that we would need to help the governor fix the problem. He seemed irritated with me, I sent him a follow-up email.
- I told TSC staff that were involved with stopping the deleting and told them that everyone had done the right thing.
- I met with the TSC staff at 9:30 and told them that information had been subpoenaed and not them personally, that if they wanted to talk to them they would be subpoenaed (turns out that when Tracy went home 2 FBI agents were waiting for him, they did not seem to give him an option from what I have heard and required a statement). I encouraged them to write everything down because it could be a long time before anyone actually talked to them.
- Matt Shelby called me and asked that I dispatch someone to help stop email from being forwarded to the State of Oregon account from the Gov's personal account. I asked for it in writing and he did not feel that was necessary. I worked with Adrian and Gary to have Gary go along with John Darnville to Meet Matt and Laini to kill the forwading, I wanted them all present.
- They did not seemed concerned.
- I went to the CUB planning meeting downtown and which was already over since I had read my calendar wrong and since Sarah Jo had cancelled the Service Leaders meeting and I was thrown off.
- I went to the W&M recap Meeting and after about 15 minutes was called out by Sarah Jo to meet with Michael. Michael told me that we needed to secure the email system since someone had given Nigel private information and that he was doing a news story on it and that Shawn Dawson and someone from ESO would be meeting me at the SDC in 30 minutes. I asked him what he meant by secure since the data all sits in the archive manager he said that it was all over his head and he did not understand what I was asking. He said [redacted] and he would let me know, but at this time we were to limit access to the gov"s email.
- Shawn showed up and we talked with Bryan Nealy, Gary Kreiger, Adrian Turpin, Shawn Dawson and John Ritchie about how to secure the data and that there were several PST files given to Matt Shelby and the Govs office that already contained the gov's email.
- Shawn and John then worked with Alex Arizala to make is so no one could access the MJO email account and that that the rights for all staff who could access the Archive was revoked until we were told how to proceed. At this time we cannot process any Public Information requests until this resolved.

OREGON STATE POLICE
COMPUTER FORENSIC LABORATORY

CONSENT TO SEARCH

I, Marshall Wells, hereby authorize Sgt. Stephen Payne, who has identified himself as a law enforcement official, and any other person(s), including but not limited to any Certified Forensic Computer Examiner he may designate to assist him, to remove, take possession of, duplicate ("forensically image") and conduct a complete search of the following computer systems, electronic data storage devices, computer data storage diskettes, CD-ROM's, DVD's, cellular phones or any other item capable of storing, retrieving, and/or accessing data or necessary to assist in the accessing of data pertinent to their investigation. This property belongs to me or is currently under my lawful control. I understand that a complete search may include a comprehensive examination and analysis of all data stored by or within the device including the recovery of deleted files or data fragments, and the bypassing or cracking of passwords or encryption. I understand that this consent is ongoing until the property is analyzed. I also understand that the forensic image or copy of my property will remain under the control of law enforcement.

(List all property taken for examination, including external storage equipment.):

Make	Model	Serial/ID #	Description
Apple	5S	[redacted]	Gray
Nokia	909/1020	[redacted]	White

State - [redacted]
Personal - [redacted]

MW (initials) I understand that this electronic equipment may be removed and taken to the Oregon State Police Computer Forensics Laboratory, or another suitable location, to fully conduct a search. I also understand that I can revoke this consent at any time by calling the Oregon State Police Computer Crimes Unit (503-602-2159) or the officer's direct contact number: _____.

MW (initials) Further, I explicitly consent that this cellular, wireless, or network capable device may be made or allowed to connect to any network (cellular, WiFi, etc) and that any new data received while under the control of law enforcement may be examined, analyzed and copied on an ongoing basis until I revoke this consent or the device is returned to me at the completion of this investigation.

I give this consent to search freely and voluntarily without fear, threat, coercion, or promises of any kind. This consent to search is given by me this 16th day of March, 2015.

Matt Shelby (#1)

Hamington
Dave
Shelby

- Introductions - DAS West 5th Floor
10:24am - Recorded

- (H) leak of emails to newspaper

- (C) 2011 linked Gmail account
  - ↳ presented problems of access
    - ↳ auto forward box to Archives

- Records request in early February

- PST file from ETS dropped on sharing file for Matt Shelby

  - ↳ opened up file using outlook

  - ↳ collected not only the main but also other emails accounts for (E)

  - ↳ Preview panels on the emails saw other accounts besides "official"

(1)

Drop on Liani Reeves & Amy Wojcicki drives also.

Amy WOJCICKI - © office
↳ Let her know looked like Archives was collecting more emails than should be.

Personal Emails
↳ no responsibility to Archive
↳ DAS still working on this

Jane Murdock called IT helpdesk.
↳ intake person ran this up chain of command

MS and Matt Shelby were concerned
↳ closed loop with Governors office
↳ 1st step is for you to go through a copy of these emails.
↳ © + legal council
↳ flag emails for removal
↳ DAS will figure out how to remove from server.

This was prior to the state and federal investigations being launched.

- Investigations
  - lock "box" down and maintain them

- WW "wrote a story about Jan's call to delete emails.
  - reporter indicated he had copies of the email chain that outlines the "request to delete" emails.
  - no indication he actually had the © emails at that time

- After story broke - all other media outlets wanted a public records request of that email "request to delete"

Tracy Osborn

- Copies of PST files within ETS

(3)

- Thumb drive (2)
  - ↳ copied PST
  - ↳ Grace Roth assistant to Mike Bonetto
  - ↳ Liani would be "Legal Check"
  - ↳ arrived
    - ↳ © would now do the first review and then Liani would do the legal review

- 2 different

#1 emails from ~~Mr.~~ account Governor's AT&T address

#2 emails from second account Governor's Gmail address

ETS → Mike Rodgers → Matt Shelby → Grace Roth

- delivered first thumb drive - to © Grace saw only AT&T emails on it
- requested second email account be down loaded. second thumb drive created

↳ did not make any copies

↳ did open files in my outlook account

↳ still having issues trying to delete the © emails did a written request to have the files dumped onto Luan's & Amy's Share drives.

Needed thumb drive because

↳ PST file contains everything Governor. Kitzhaber©

↳ ETS created thumb drive to capture only personal

Thumb drives #1 & #2 represent all personal emails stored by archives on the servers.

02/02/15

Received a records request from Nick @ Oregonian
- started at © office - they told reporter to go to DAS
- reporter asked for date / time / to / from / subject / attach
  "preview pane"

- request forwarded to Mike Rodgers (administrator over ETS
  - who at ETS knows the most about the © email situation

- this was unique because I knew about the email account issues.

02/05/15

- ETS placed emails on (N) share drive
- opened and saw the personal accounts.

02/06/15

- opened file
- saw personal email
- called Amy at (6)
- Asked ETS to place file onto Amy & Lumi's share

02/06/15

- ETS produced the thumb drives
- within 30 minutes of each other task was completed.

(7)

PST file

↳ (M) created a new file - started dumping personal ~~files~~ emails into it. So he could honor the public records request for the Governor. Kitahaber@gmail.com

(M)

↳ Public Records Request go through him

↳ since these are the (G) emails personal (M) felt it was up to (G) office to determine what is privileged emails.

- Willamette Week article
  - ↳ does not know if emails quoted in the article were contained in the PST file or on the share drive

- Emails between © and Sherm that is when (M) "stopped" and 10,000 - 15,000 emails

Prior to 02/02/15

- had not received previous public records requests for the © emails.
- that is why this was a surprise to see the personal emails.

Story of how

AT & T . net
Governor. Kitzhaber C?

JK

- auto forward on the phone for gmail accounts
- Somehow work and personal accounts got linked together

02/18/15

- WW Reporter Nigel published story

- ETS was contacted by (M)
- remove the PST files from (M) Amy's and Liani's share drives

- Alex Pettit
  went to data center and locked down
  ↳ don't know exact date this task was done

Theory

- Reporters ask me questions
- Conversations with Nigel "WW"
  - ↳ ⓒ office
  - ↳ data center
- Nigel told me how Leani had communicated how they were going to delete the personal emails
- Nigel broke a story on either 02/12/15 or 02/13/15
- Nigel called for a comment from ⓜ "I am going to print this" "request to delete
- Nigel posted his story
- 02/13/15 alot of requests came in from media asking for emails.

12

- Nigel said he had email evidence of the "request to delete"
  - some in that chain of emails.
- Nigel obviously got them from somewhere.
  "It wasn't me"

- ETS is a division of DAS.
  - don't know how many people at ETS had access.

- Have not spoken to Nigel since last week.
- The questions Nigel has asked in the past make me believe he had someone in the gov's office.

(13)

- Scot (ETS)
  - ↳ dumped files on the drive

- Called Mike directly for thumb drives

- It did not come from me!

Public Records Request

- Forms
  - Nick Oregonian
    - ↳ Email Log
  - Nigel WW
    - ↳ comment

DAS

Custodian of the email records because on our servers
- ↳ © office will make the decision on what to release comes in to DAS

- ↳ Matt Shelby
  - ↳ give heads up to agency the request was made
    - ↳ risk management
    - ↳ custodian of emails for ©
  - ↳ give emails to agency to review

Gmail Accounts

Governor.Kitzaber@gmail.com	official hundreth mendieu@att.net	personal jk.hundrethmendieu@gmail.com	personal

↳ agency reviews — then releases direct ~~↳ agency gives data back~~
~~↳ Matt releases~~ / himms ~~request~~

— this was abnormal situation "gmail"

Follow-Up 02/19/15

QUESTIONS - MATT SHELBY

Matt Shelby

- Ask him about the "WW" email request from the female reporter that Alex Pettit said he sent to him on 02/07/15
  - Hamrington 2-19-15: Alex forwarded to him - specifically related to the "request to delete" things came out after the story broke
- Clarify
  - 1st thumb drive
    - said did not open - Grace did
    - at end of interview said Mike opened while at Matt's office
      - Hamrington 2-19-15: Mike came up opened up thumb #1 on my computer to make sure it would open

* Evidence - CD Rom

JMN E1. (E) Evidence
